Scientists have discovered that fish contains little if any more phosphorous—supposedly a brain stimulant than beef. Also that proper conditions of care and cleanliness make fish as safe as meat to eat. It is true, however, that fresh fish is best kept buried the ordinary refrigerator. Fish is a good winter food because its food composition is very similar to that of lean beef, and fish canned in oil often shows a higher fat percentage than medium-fat Any day in the week is as good for eating fish as Friday, in fact, a more general use of fish each day in the week, instead of one day a week, would tend to decrease the cost of living by reincreasing demand on the beef

Current sales on canned fish offer the housewife a splendid op-portunity to lay in a stock of fish which will tide over the time when canned food prices will go in fairly large flakes. Pour fitto up.
