Property tax exemptions available for disabled vets

WOODVILLE — "Veterans with a service-connected disability may reduce their property taxes in 1995 by filling out a simple exemption form at the Tyler County Appraisal District office," Chief Appraiser Eddie Chalmers said.

A veteran's percentage of service-connected disability determines the size of the exemption. The exemption ranges from a $1,500 to a $3,000 deduction from the veteran's property value. Chalmers explained who is eligible for the application:

• a disabled veteran;

• a surviving spouse of a deceased disabled veteran, as long as the spouse remains unmarried;

• a surviving minor child of a deceased disabled veteran, if the veteran's spouse does not survive the veteran and if the child is both under 18 and unmarried

• a surviving spouse of a person killed while on active duty, whether the spouse has remarried or not at application time; and

• a surviving minor child of a person killed while on active duty, if the child is both under 18 and unmarried.

"Any eligible person who has not received this exemption must apply by May 1," Chalmers said. "But, if you received the exemption in 1994, you do not have to re-apply in 1995."

An applicant may claim the exemption on only one piece of property, such as a home or any other property the applicant owned on January 1. The applicant must be a Texas resident to qualify.

The appraisal district may require proof of the disability, such as documentation from the Veterans Administration or the branch of the armed service in which the veteran served. Applicants may need proof of marriage, age or proof of a spouse's or a parent's death.

Obtain an application form and more information about specific qualifications from Chalmers at the Tyler County Appraisal District office at 806 West Bluff, Woodville, Texas. Office hours are 8 a.m to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number is (409) 283-3736.

Area teacher completes NASA workshop

KENNEDY SPACE CENTER — Harriett Langston, a teacher at Warren Elementary School, recently completed a two-week NASA Education Workshop for Elementary School Teachers (NEWEST) workshop at John F. Kennedy Space Center. Langston was among 23 specially selected master educators attending the workshop June 18-30.

Langston was selected for the program by a committee made up from members of the co-sponsoring organizations, which are NASA, The National Science Teachers Association, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the International Technology Educators Association.

This joint program provides an in-depth opportunity for elementary school teachers to learn more about space science and technology. While at KSC, they work directly with space agency engineers and scientists. NEWEST is also designed to inform teachers about NASA's educational programs and materials.

While at the space center, the NEWEST group viewed KSC Space Shuttle processing and launch facilities. They also got a close look at the specialized laboratories and operational areas where NASA space technology is developed. Some of these areas included the materials testing, chemistry and biomedical research labs. The space technology segment also included briefings by NASA engineers and scientists about KSC's space-related biomedical and biological programs., future space missions and how satellites aid in weather forecasting, geological research and navigation on Earth.

Educational resources segments of the workshop included hands-on work at KSC's Exploration Station, job shadowing of NASA executives for space science career development and work in the Educators Resource Library.

To learn how wildlife co-exists with that space program, the NEWEST teachers studied the ecology of Cape Canaveral National Seashore just north of KSC and the Merritt Island National Wildlife Refuge within the boundaries of the 140,000 acre space center. A special session on one ecosystem in the local environment was provided during this part of the workshop, including a midnight trip to watch sea turtles lay their eggs on the seashore beach.

There was also time for a bit of fun while learning the chemistry and physics of a rocket launch. The NEWEST group members first built their own model solid motor rockets and then launched them in a nearby field.

Funeral director attends hardwood casket manufacturing seminar

WOODVILLE — Terry W. Riley of the Riley Funeral Home in Woodville attended a two-day continuing education seminar and tour of the largest, most modern facility of its kind in the world.

The seminar details the complete process of manufacturing hardwood caskets. The program is targeted at achieving a greater understanding and appreciation for the craftsmanship and technology involved in the hardwood manufacturing process.

In addition to producing in excess of 75,000 finished wood caskets, York Casket Company will make over 250,000 finished metal caskets, as well as being the largest supplier of metal parts in the world. York caskets are distributed by a nationwide network of independently owned and operated distributors such as the Houston based York-Southwest Casket Company.

Improvements completed to local telephone network

NACOGDOCHES — Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) has completed $1.9 million in network improvements in the Woodville area that will enhance service to customers and help support economic development.

SWBT External Affairs Manager Eddie Arnold said the new facilities have increased the capacity and transmission quality of the telephone system.

"This can be an important factor in fostering economic development in Woodville," Arnold said. "When businesses consider possible locations for setting up operations, communications is one of the key items they inquire about. The improvements we're making will help put Woodville in a more competitive position to encourage business growth."

Over the last three years, SWBT has upgraded the call-switching office to digital equipment and added more than 21 miles of cable, including 16 miles of fiber-optic cable.

Digital and fiber-optic technology enables SWBT to provide customer with faster, more dependable service. Fiber-optic cable also helps lower operating costs for SWBT because new customers can be added to the network without installing new cable.

In June, SWBT introduced several Call Return, Priority Call, Call Blocker and Auto Redial in Woodville. Other available services include Call Waiting, Speed Calling, Call Forwarding features, Three-Way Calling and 1+SAVER service, a discounted long-distance calling plan. Customers may call 1-800-464-7928 to order or receive information on any of these services.

SWBT currently has 3,325 residence lines and 993 business lines in Woodville.

"Southwestern Bell services are backed by a reliable, advanced network," Arnold said. "Our investment demonstrates our commitment to being a partner in Woodville's growth and future. We're constantly working to provide more timely, reliable customer service."

Upgrading telephone facilities and providing each customer with a private line are part of a four-year economic development and incentive regulation agreement with the Texas Public Utility Commission. SWBT completed the elimination of 428 party lines in the Woodville area in November 1992.

The agreement, which evolved from SWBT's original "Texas First" proposal, was designed to provide the financial incentive to build an advanced telecommunications network to help attract new business to Texas.

Students attending Woodville High School are benefiting from an eight-month SWBT educational support program. SWBT donates $2 to the high school every time a customer subscribes to a new Southwestern Bell Call Forwarding, Call Waiting, Three-Way Calling, Speed Calling or 1+SAVER service. The school has the potential to receive a maximum $1,500 contribution.

SWBT is a wholly owned subsidiary of SBC Communications, Inc. The company provides telecommunications services to more than 10 million customers in Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

Senate panel approves local water project, Gramm says

WASHINGTON — U. S. Sen. Phil Gramm reports that the Senate Appropriations Committee has approved a total of $9,474,000 in this year's energy and water appropriations legislation for flood control work at the dam at Sam Rayburn Reservoir in Angelina, Jasper and Tyler counties.

Specifically, the senator said, the funds will be used to finish construction of a new concrete spillway at Sam Rayburn that will increase the reservoir's floodwater capacity. Construction of the new spillway began this past January and is expected to be completed by August of next year.

The Congress is being asked to appropriate more than $177 million for projects and programs directly related to Texas, the senator noted.

"This year's appropriations bill carries financing for a range of programs and projects that are important, and in some cases critical, to Texas," said Gramm, a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"The legislation represents a substantial return on the investment we make in government through our tax dollars," he said.

Also included in this funding measure is $20 million for continued erosion control work along the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway Canal at Sargent Beach in Matagorda County, $3.1 million for channel and navigation improvements along the Channel to Victoria in Victoria County, and dozens of other water supply, flood control and navigation projects throughout Texas.

Grant awarded for reservation link-up

INDIAN VILLAGE — Sam Houston State University was awarded a grant for $340,000 to provide medical and educational services in southeast Texas via a computer link-up. The system will link a medical clinic, hospital, the Alabama Coushatta Indian Reservation and two county extension offices.

"The information superhighway is being introduced to rural America through $7.5 million in grants to 29 education and health care organizations in 23 states," said George Ellis, state director of Rural Economic and Community Development Service, formerly Farmers Home Administration. "The grants for this type of technology are developed through the Rural Utilities Service, an agency with USDA's Rural Economic and Community Development mission area."

The grants will help to build the infrastructure needed in rural America as we enter a new century, a new era of technological innovation, according to Wally Teyer, RUS National Administrator. "These grants will improve the quality of life for real people through improved educational and health care services," he said.

This year, the 'RUS' Distance Learning and Medical Link Grant Program is dispersing grants between $67,000 and $350,000 - 19 of which are over $222,500. The grants will help link rural schools to other classrooms in rural and urban areas, providing advanced courses and interactive educational opportunities. The grants to health care organizations will help allow rural citizens access to telemedicine services bringing specialized and general care closer to home.

"This is where the county road meets the information superhighway," Beyer said. "These grants will improve the educational opportunities for over 95,000 young people in school and give them an equal footing in the increasingly competitive marketplace. The medical grants will expand the health services available to approximately 108,000 rural Americans and make it easier and more affordable for them to receive quality health care."

A total of 16 educational organizations were granted more than $4.5 million and 13 health care groups received almost $3 million.

According to Ellis, RUS received 247 applications requesting a total of $79.8 million in funds. The selection process, including a review by federal officials and participants outside the government, took five months.

DETCOG reviews grants

LUFKIN — Directors of the Deep East Texas Council of Governments have given their support to a federal grant application that, if approved, will provide a renovated building for a Head Start Program at Shepherd in San Jacinto County.

The $45,788 application to the U. S. Department of Health and Human Services by the San Jacinto County Commissioners Court was approved by the DETCOG board at Hemphill following a favorable review by the Council's Grants Application Review Committee.

The federal agency must approve the grant application before work can begin on the renovations, which will permit Head Start to serve 94 children.

The Application Review Committee gave an unfavorable review to two applications by East Texas Transit Systems, Inc. of Longview for the establishment of a regional mass transit system to serve the East Texas area. The two applications totaled $3,686,000.

In making its decision, the Application Review Committee said it felt the transit system would duplicate public transit efforts now underway in the Deep East Texas area.

East Texas Transit System, Inc., said it is seeking funding from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

At the Village

By Dottie Johnson

Round Robin brings more family histories to Village

They say three times is a charm, but in this world of genealogy, sometimes two is enough.

Such was the case in response to our inquiries about Dr. G. W. Adams, who married Dora Rhodes, the sister of Bro. Jeff Rhodes, a well known turn of the century preacher.

It seems also that Dora's father, Arnold Rhodes, reorganized the Baptist Church in Woodville.

The first word we had about Dr. Adams was from the 1920 Census, which Jack Whitmeyer has recently finished and presented to the Village Library. That's where we found G. W. Adams M.D. Jack thought he was probably from the Rockland area.

The second came from Betty Rotan Hairston of Fort Worth who subscribes to The Tyler County Booster and thereby keeps up with the Village through this column. When we wrote about story telling in the Village, she sent typewritten copies of two stories that appeared in the Beaumont Enterprise, dated April 1933 and May 1934. Each contained a story of ghostly Tyler County lore written by the late Dean Tevis, the result of interviews with Betty's paternal grandparents, John and Clara Rotan, and Clara's sister, Dora Rhodes, so we struck a chord.

Betty had hoped that we might be able to use some of the story information during our story telling at the Fourth of July Picnic at the Cauble House, especially since one involved the Cauble cemetery.

Unfortunately time would not allow, but meanwhile Betty read that we were looking for information on Dora's husband for our Exhibit of Early Tyler County doctors, so she sent a copy of our column asking about Dr. Adams to her cousin and the doctor's granddaughter, Martha Nees St. John in Beaumont. And the round robin began with one slight discrepancy. According to Martha, G. W. was actually S. W. - Samuel Womack Adams, born 1867 in Moscow, Polk County, Texas. His daughter, Martha's mother, was Clara Mabel Adams Nees.

Samuel "read medicine", she told us, in Memphis, Tennessee. That's the way he always expressed his medical education, she said, and we could not find him listed in our Memphis Hospital Medical School records. He practiced medicine as a Kirby Lumber Company doctor in Warren, Roganville and Rockland. He was only 53 years old, when he died, in 1920, of an infection in his elbow, probably from a spider bite. He is buried in Magnolia Cemetery in Woodville as is his wife.

The son of John Hobby Adams of Macon, Georgia, Samual W. Adams had a brother John Hobby Jr., who was also a doctor, although it is doubtful that he practiced in Tyler County.

Another Tyler County doctor tracked down by interested descendants who have shared a great deal of information for our library files, putting forth names such as McAlister and Johnston, Durham, Goolsby and Frazier.

In her letter, Martha St. John offered to send more information on some of these names which are so familiar in these parts, and we welcome them.

It's letters and information like this that make our day.

Ghostly lore

But, let's get back to the lady who put this information in our reach.

After mailing the copies, Betty Hairston brought the original newspaper articles to us, when she came to Woodville for her class reunion on July 14. Here they were - the papers browned and crumpled with age, seeming more precious than the typed versions for no other reason but their authenticity - two treasured bits of intertwined history as related by native sons and daughters.

One is The Wild Woman of Caney, the other The Kindly Phantom of Wilson Creek, ghostly tales both, occurring in the Mt. Hope and Peach Tree Village area in the 1860s and 70s.

So what did we do with these tales? We gave Whitney Garrity the challenge of putting them into shorter form for the possible return of our once popular Ghost Stories of Texas Past. They are in good hands indeed.

The subject matter and the tale tellers are well spelled out by Tevis, who tells of those who would vouch for the Wild Woman's screams. Even John Henry Kirby was known to tell the story in all its fine detail. But it took the Rotans to tell about the meeting with the phantom, how he led people out of the thicket to safety.

These two stories along with the well told tale of the pebble thrower at the Hailmark home will live on as long as there are people who believe in the supernatural or just like to hear about it. And so it lives on, and it grows with the telling and it's part of our history in northwest Tyler County.

Once again, our thanks to Betty Hairston for sharing these treasures with us.

Tourists from Poland

"I have 15 men from Poland touring the Village," a breathless Pat Taylor told me over the phone last Saturday afternoon. "Is this the kind of thing you want to hear?" This is the kind of thing I want to hear, I told her before talking with their leader Richard Nowacie.

What better than two visitors from Nurnberg, Germany, three from Balranald, Australia and three from St. Michael, France, all on Saturday, July 22, than 15 engineers from Poland, who arrived unannounced on Saturday, July 29, and had a ball touring Heritage Village?

These gentlemen, all employed by chemical power stations throughout Poland, took a mid-way break from a two week training session in Houston, where they are learning to operate and maintain electronic monitoring equipment designed to measure and regulate vibrations of high powered machinery. When they leave Houston next Saturday, they will be taking both the machines and their knowledge back home, where they will train others.

What fun it is having visitors like these, people who find the Village and Woodville a great way to spend a leisurely Saturday afternoon, far away from home.

But the "how they got here" makes for an equally interesting story. Their tour leader was Grace Zubkow of the South Belt Ellington Chamber of Commerce. Much like our own chamber, they have ribbon cuttings when a new member joins, and in this case, it was the Homestead Hotel, where the Polish engineers were staying.

As chance would have it, Grace had forgotten her camera, so she quickly called her husband Wesley, a native of Poland, to bring it to her, and immediately a dialogue opened up, he being able to interpret the wishes of the visitors.

They wanted to see something outside of Houston, some country, some history. What would Grace suggest? She told them about the Indian Reservation, and that's where they headed. Grace had never heard of Heritage Village, but the folks at the Reservation had and suggested they come to us. And come they did, and according to Grace and Wesley, they had a wonderful time.

Visual history seems to have a universal language all its own, as does music. As the touring group wandered in various directions through the Village, they heard music - music coming from the Cherokee Church. It was as though the Village had suddenly come alive, Grace told us. In unison, the entire group converged on the church, where they found their own leader, Richard Nowacie, at the piano. And so they all sat down and rested and enjoyed an impromptu concert.

Not only did Grace go home with Village brochures to give others wanting to know about an interesting place to visit, she is going to provide us with a list of other Chambers in the Houston area, who she is sure would be delighted to know about our Village.

We're sorry the group didn't stop to eat at the Pickett House, but they seemed more interested in barbecue, which one of the group said was quite good. So they went to Texas Best, and there many of them opted instead for catfish, a first time experience. Not only did they enjoy their meal, they were overwhelmed by the size of the servings and the hospitality.

More proof that Woodville and Tyler County do in fact have some very worthwhile and interesting tourist attractions, and the Village and its surroundings are just one case in point.

One more story hour to go

And don't forget, for our visitors right here at home, Whitney and Beth have one more Texas Story Hour awaiting your young people - next Tuesday, August 8, at 10 a.m.

At the Village, of course. Come see.

On Waco

Dear Editor:

Most people with any degree of common sense acknowledge that David Koresh was a madman and, without doubt, a sorry excuse for a human being. Even so, there can be no plausible excuse for federal law enforcement agencies at the Waco fiasco to have attacked a compound where the majority of inhabitants were women and children. Especially since Koresh could have been arrested off the compound property without endangering anyone else.

Like most Americans, I don't really know what happened at Waco on April 19, 1993. I wasn't there. We have only what a sometimes biased news media has printed or televised, to assist in the formation of any conclusions. Sources that can be unreliable at best.

There are many burning questions left unanswered. I, for one, would like to know why Koresh wasn't picked up by ATF or FBI agents as he jogged along the highway. According to witnesses, Koresh frequently left the compound to job or go into the city. Why not arrest him away from everyone else, thus avoiding the frontal assault that cost so many innocent children their lives?

Granted, those adults who chose to stay inside and fire on advancing police officers made a choice, but what choice could those children have had? How many of those innocents knew the possible consequences?

At this date, it doesn't matter who started the fire that consumed the compound at Mount Carmel. What needs to be brought out, through an exhaustive investigation, is why an incident such as Mount Carmel happened at all Koresh should have been arrested and brought to trial for the crime he was charged with, but are we to believe there was no way of bringing David Koresh to justice other than all out assault upon citizens of this country by federal law enforcement agencies? Unless these questions are answered, can justice truly be said to exist in America?

Those members of Congress charged with investigation of the Waco affair, both Republicans and Democrats, need to put aside their political haranguing of each other long enough to search out the truth, no matter where final blame goes to roost.

American citizens deserve the assurance that such an incident can never happen within our self-professed democratic society again. That assurance can only come from a thorough and open investigation into all elements of the Waco tragedy.

Summer fun with Smokey Bear

By Keith Hawkins
Texas Forest Service

Last year during Smokey Bear's 50th birthday celebration, my wife and I sent Smokey a birthday card for fun without any expectation of receiving anything back. In few weeks, we each received our Junior Forest Ranger kit. This experience inspired me to share with parents how to help their children receive their own kits.

The purpose of this program is to encourage children to be careful with fire in the forest. The kit contains a certificate, a wallet card and pin-on badge.

This summer activity would entail children writing, with parental help, to Smokey Bear about the importance of forest fire prevention and asking for a Junior Forest Ranger kit. The address is: Smokey Bear Headquarters, Washington, D.C. 20252. The reason the address is so simple is because Smokey has his own zip code.

Writing to Smokey would be a fun activity for parents and children to do together this summer. Another reason to write is that this program may not be around. Undoubtedly, Smokey will survive Federal budget cuts, but his JFR program may not. I encourage families to start their letter-writing and to look forward to hearing from Smokey.

What did you play?

By Darby Kethan

"Play", said Mark Twain, "consists of whatever a body is not obliged to do." Play, for many of us, is thought of as children's activities, something they do while "fooling around" or engaging in non-productive games. Wonderfully intelligent researchers and educators tell us that children learn many valuable skills through their play and that all play provides learning opportunities. I think this is so . . . no matter what is going on around them, children are learning at earlier ages than many of us realize. We know children aren't entering Kindergarten with the same skills children entered with years ago. So much has changed in children's lives but I believe the greatest change has occurred in their play. Remembering when you played and what you played can help you see what I mean.

Our play was mainly outside . . . today, it isn't really safe for many kids to be outside, even if the time for outside play existed. Families come home late and need to get supper and chores tended to; many schedules don't allow outside time at all. Walking to friends' houses and just roaming in general is dangerous so a tremendous loss of freedom is experienced by kids who aren't old enough to even realize there ever was a different way to live.

Our play was mainly active. We played war, fort, tag, hide and seek, jump rope, hopscotch, marbles and jacks. Although adults were nearby, by ourselves we learned to get along with one another by devising elaborate systems of rules and regulations, deciding who were the leaders, and in general finding out how we and others worked in a social system.

Our play was imaginative. Civil War Soldiers was a favorite game, supported by Christmas gifts of soldier suits, cannon and supplies. Dressing up was popular as well as "house", with dolls, accessories and imitating activities we saw around us. We made paper dolls from Sears catalogs, perfume from rose petals, cakes of mud, and trains out of cardboard boxes. There was very little of the day we were not outside unless it was to rest during the hot afternoon times.

Our play was instructive. Card games taught counting skills, learning to play Battle taught us to compare numbers and black-jack taught us to add. Tic-tac-toe, chess and Chinese Checkers taught us to take the other person's viewpoint in order to beat them. Board games such as Parcheesi, Sorry, Clue and Risk provided long hours of play, interacting with peers and adults, as we learned strategy and stretched our thinking skills.

Our play took time. Without time for that play to take place at home, schools must provide, in whatever setting children are served, the time for this play to take place. Children learn through active learning, through interacting with materials and other people to discover the ways the world works. Wherever the children are, we must provide the time for this to take place.

PROfessions

"A car was a car"

By David Rust

In the beginning they didn't even know what to call them. Horseless Carriages, Skunk Wagons, Road Engines and Motorcars were among the printables. Later the term Automobile caught on, usually shortened to Auto. But my cross-grained Scottish great aunt Ca'line called them Mobiles to her dying day.

They are all nothing but cars now. How prosaic. Just in this century they have progressed from mechanical novelties through barebones workhorses, then sporting and luxury showcases to irreducible necessities of our technocracy. But have you ever wondered at how little real change there has been, particularly in the last 60 years?

Now don't come at me with talking dashboards, pulsating seat cushions, quadriphonic CD players and the like. Such gimmickry may be nice if you go for solutions to which there are no problems. But they have nothing to do with the automobile as a machine. In 1955 a car was a car was a car. With few exceptions, they steered in front and pushed behind. A four, six, or eight-cylinder engine supplied the grunt. It burned gasoline using the Otto cycle, and connected to the driving wheels through a clutch, planetary or sliding gear transmission, and differential. It had a solenoid-actuated electric starter, supplied with power from a lead-acid battery, and it was cooled by water-based liquid circulating through a radiator. Its carburetion and ignition were mechanically controlled, complex but functional.

Braking was on all four wheels, mostly by hydraulic pressure. Steering was through dynamically balanced linkages, using either rack and pinion or worm-drive gearing. Suspensions were mostly independent, mainly by leaf springs but with some coil springs coming in. All wheels were damped by shock absorbers. And with few and minor exceptions, this describes the car of 1995 almost as well.

Oh, alright, lots of 'em today have everything up front, steering and driving and gear shifting. All the back wheels have to do is just follow along. But even in the 30's there were front-wheel-drive models. Ignition and carburetion (or injection) are computer controlled now. But otherwise, the changes we so easily take for granted have been far more in the nature of refinements than innovations.

I know of just two clear-cut engineering breakthroughs over that time span. And I bet most of you can't guess what they are. Mind you, I'm not talking about automatic transmissions (which were available in 1935, and not really an improvement then) or power steering and brakes, all of which are more like conveniences than functional advancements. The changes brought about by these features were more evident to the mechanic than the driver. But both inventions were entirely new ways of doing something.

Give up? The first of these came out of aeronautical progress in WW2. Aircraft brakes were a sore point going in, requiring heavy stopping power within a small space. Somebody thought up the disk brake. Eventually it was downscaled and put on the front wheels of nearly all cars. And the improvement over drum-and-shoe brakes is pretty spectacular, nowhere more so than in flood-prone country like southeast Texas.

The other dramatic breakthrough changed the way ignition was accomplished in our engines. The old camdriven breaker points were replaced by a power transistor controlled by a pre-coded digital module. There were growing pains, but the advantages are very evident today. Fuel economy, starting, and acceleration are better, but the most dramatic improvement is in the life of the components. Breaker points and spark plugs had to be cleaned or replaced every 20,000 miles or so. Now there are no points to replace, and plugs will go for 50,000 miles or more.

Oh, the good old days. But let us remember gratefully where we have got to. A car owner of 1930 would gasp in disbelief at one of today's moderately priced cars. Its trouble-free dependability would astonish him. The ability to go 50,000 miles between tune-ups and tire changes would seem all but miraculous. Its lifetime paint job would challenge his credulity, and let's not even speculate how he'd handle air bags, motorized seat belts, climate controls and infra-red alarm systems.

But as Eph Gluchocker dryly observes, "One thing they ain't changed is the nut behind the wheel."

Shalom . . .

Donald Hendrix

LIVINGSTON — Historian and journalist Donald Hendrix was pronounced dead Friday at his Livingston residence.

His body was discovered by Livingston police and co-workers after he failed to report for work and failed to answer either his telephone or doorbell. Although an autopsy has been ordered by Polk County Precinct 4 Justice of the Peace Howard Lilley, it was believed that Hendrix died sometime Thursday night due to natural causes.

Funeral services were pending at Cochran Funeral Home in Livingston.

Hendrix, 58, had served as the special sections editor for The Polk County Enterprise since 1982 and was widely known throughout East Texas as a Polk County historian and genealogical researcher.

A member of both the Polk County Heritage Society and the Polk County Historical Commission, he was awarded one of the heritage society's top honors, the J. R. Maxwell Award in 1989. The award recognized Hendrix for outstanding "individual achievement" in historical preservation.

"He will be missed," said Polk County Museum Curator Wanda Bobinger. "He was a valuable resource to the historical commission and Polk County because he knew so much about our history and the families who settled here.

"He was always available for me to call upon for information. Lots of times people would come into the museum from Houston, Dallas or other communities looking for information about their families. If I couldn't help them, I could call Don and generally, he could go home, call up the information on his computer and provide me with a printout the next day.

"And if the family were early Polk County settlers, he would usually have quite a bit of information," Bobinger added.

District Clerk Nell Lowe added Friday that Hendrix had provided valuable assistance to her office through his research of the county's records.

"I'll always be grateful to Don for his work and the people who come here in search of information from the old records should also be grateful to him," Lowe said.

The district clerk said that Hendrix spent a year indexing the old district court minute books to provide researchers an easier and faster way to look up items. She noted that while indexes to the old records are believed to have existed prior to Hendrix's work, they had been lost or destroyed over the years.

"He indexed the minutes from the late 1800s up to about the 1930s, all on his own time over the course of about a year," she said.

Alvin Holley, publisher of The Polk County Enterprise said Friday that Hendrix's contributions to Polk County both as a historian and as a journalist were tremendous.

"He was a valuable employee who will be missed on both a personal and professional basis," Holley said. "His knowledge and love of local history contributed both to the newspaper and to the community as a whole."

Holley noted that because of Hendrix's research, much of the early history of Polk County will be preserved for future generations. Through his weekly newspaper column, Trinity Valley Trivia, as well as his annual history section dealing the Pine Cone Festival, he published a massive amount of information about the people and incidents that made up everyday life in Polk County during the 1800s.

In addition to his recognition by the Polk County Heritage Society, Hendrix's special Pine Cone Festival editions also have won honors for The Polk County Enterprise over the years. The historical editions have been awarded a number of honors by the Texas Press Association, the Texas Gulf Coast Press Association and the North and East Texas Press Association as the best special sections among semi-weekly newspapers in the state and region.

He was born Dec. 14, 1936 in the Lexington, KY., area, the son of Robert and Marie Hendrix. He graduated from Henry Clay High School in Lexington in 1955 and attended Angelo State University in San Angelo.

After graduating from high school, he joined the United States Air Force in 1956 and served for four years with the USAF Security Service as a Korean language interpreter. For most of his military career, he was stationed at a radio listening post located on a small island off the coast of North Korea.

After being discharged at Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, Hendrix decided to remain in Texas and began working as an office supply salesman for a San Angelo printing company. In 1962, he joined the staff of KCTV, a CBS television affiliate located in San Angelo. During his career there, he worked as a studio cameraman, an illustrator, a director and finally as the production manager.

In 1970, Hendrix joined the staff of the San Angelo Standard-Times as a reporter. While working for the San Angelo newspaper, Hendrix was awarded a first place award from the Associated Press Managing Editors' Association for a series of stories he wrote detailing a shortage of physicians in West Texas.

He left San Angelo in November, 1972, when he accepted a job as a reporter for The Polk County Enterprise in Livingston. In 1974 he was named as the editor of the Polk County newspaper, a position he held for a year and a half.

Hendrix left Livingston in April 1976, moving for a brief time back to San Angelo. He subsequently moved to Austin, where he was employed as an artist for a commercial printing company. He later was employed by television stations in both Lake Charles, LA., and New Orleans, LA., before returning to Livingston in 1982 to accept the job as special sections editor for The Enterprise.

In addition to his writing and research skills, Hendrix was an avid artist and cartoonist. Many of his special sections included artwork he produced to illustrate his stories. In addition, after he rejoined The Enterprise staff in 1982, he produced a humorous cartoon strip entitled Cob's County, which featured a good natured character named Cob in a rural East Texas setting.

In addition to his work with the Polk County Heritage Society and the Polk County Historical Commission, he was a member of the Livingston Art League.

Survivors include two daughters and a son-in-law, Debby Hendrix of San Angelo and Donna and Johnnie Shoemaker of Port Angeles, Washington; his father, Robert Hendrix of Lexington, KY.; a sister, Patricia Weber of Lexington, KY.; and four grandchildren.

Cochran Funeral Home of Livingston was directing the arrangements.

Thank you

The Emily Elnora Daniels Allen family would like to express their sincere gratitude for all the floral tributes, spiritual tributes, foods, visitations, love and support from all their family and friends.

Love and Thank,
Bob Allen

Big League All-Stars take second in sectionals

By Don Stevenson

WOODVILLE — Call it fate. Call it a tough break, or just plain old bad luck, but the Tyler County Big League All-Stars possibly missed going to Waco for the state tournament due to an opponent's second baseman playing out of position.

The official score at the end of the game was an 11-7 Sugarland victory. But as in most cases, it by no means told the story.

The story actually revolved around a play in the sixth inning of the game. The championship game was played at Hennigan Park Friday night and Tyler County trailed Sugarland's 10-7, having fought back from a 6-0 deficit in the first inning. Sugarland's pitcher, Roger Sokol, was having control problems. Sokol walked both John Mark Lane and Justin McCabe to start the inning. Larry Strickland then stepped up and ripped a liner up the middle that would have scored one, maybe two runs. But standing in the way was Sugarland second baseman, Al Bruni, who snagged the rope for one out, stepped on second to double up Lane, then threw to first to nail McCabe. It was one of the most unique plays in baseball, a triple play, and with it Tyler County's hopes of making it to the state championships ended.

"I don't know why that kid was playing there," said Tyler County coach Neil Hennigan. "That ball had base hit written all over it. That would have scored at least one run and we would have had runners on second and third with no outs. If that would have happened, I guarantee I would have gotten the other two runners in to tie the game."

Although the local all-stars were four runs shy of their Waco trip to the state tournament, Hennigan proudly noted, "These were a great bunch of guys. They played hard and fought back, time and time again. They had a lot of desire."

Such was the case in the championship Friday night after Sugarland jumped off to a 6-0 lead in the first inning on a pair of walks and two errors followed by a single and a double.

Tyler County got one run in the second on singles by Strickland, Jeff Allen and Mike Smith, and added three more in the third on singles by Darren Powell, a walk to Lane, and singles by Jim Forse and Larry Strickland.

But Sugarland by that time had scored four more runs on two singles, a double and a triple, holding a 10-1 lead at the end of two.

In the fourth, trailing 10-4, Tyler County rallied for three more runs on a single by Justin Sturrock, a double by Rodgers, a single by Powell and two Sugarland errors.

Then came the all important triple play in the sixth that halted any more damage against the Houston area team.

Sugarland did score one more in the bottom of the sixth, but by that time it was a moot point.

For the record, Tyler County banged out 13 hits in the game, led by Strickland's three singles. Sturrock also had a pair of singles, as did Powell. Lane added three walks to help the cause.

The loss was a tough one for Tyler County who the previous night blasted the same Sugarland team, 11-1, to give them their first loss in 17 outings.

Tyler County - 11 Sugarland - 1

Colmesneil's Joey Brown shut down previously unbeaten Sugarland by giving up only four hits in leading Tyler County to an impressive semifinal victory.

The lanky right hander opened the game by giving up back to back singles, but got out of the jam on a Tyler County double play going from shortstop to second to first. From that point on, he held Sugarland in check with no hits until giving up a pair in the third that led to Houston's only run of the game.

Meanwhile Tyler County's bats were hot, getting a solo run in the first and breaking the game open in the third with seven more.

Darren Smith scored Tyler County's first run after getting on with a walk. His venture was followed by singles by Powell, Lane and Strickland.

In the third, Tyler County piled more on with five singles and two walks. Smith, Powell, Land, Strickland and Rodgers got the bingos, while Jacob Conner and Brown got the walks.

Tyler County grabbed a solo run in the fourth on singles by Strickland and Conner, along with a Sugarland error, and finished off the evening with two runs in the fifth on singles by Smith and Powell.

The loss was Sugarland's first of the tournament and set up another game between the two teams the following night for the championship.

While Tyler County was made up of all-stars from Tyler County, Silsbee and Beaumont, Sugarland's team was made up of players from Angleton, 2A state champion East Bennard and Sugarland.

Tyler County - 4 East Houston - 1

Another sterling pitching performance by another class 1A player, this time Justin McCabe of Spurger led Tyler County to their fourth win of the tournament with a 4-1 win over East Houston.

McCabe gave up four hits in the game and was backed by another superb performance by the Tyler County defense.

East Houston got its only run in the fourth inning, tying Tyler County on a single and a double.

Tyler County won the game in the sixth with three runs on a pair of walks to Sturrock and Lane and an inside the park home run by Strickland.

Sturrock scored Tyler County's first run in the first inning after getting on with a single, moving to second on a sacrifice by Rodgers, and a run scoring single by Lane.

The local all-stars garnered only three hits in the game, but made the most of them while McCabe matched East Houston's Jason Haley on the mound.

Strickland's blow was the highlight of the evening for a capacity crowd on hand for the game.

Tyler County -6
Humble/Aldine - 3

Down 2-0 in the fourth inning, Tyler County rallied back for solo runs in the fourth and fifth, then unleaded for four more in the sixth to win its third game of the tournament.

Jason Tolbert picked up the mound win, giving up six hits while striking out seven.

Humble scored the first run of the game in the top of the third after Tolbert hit the lead off batter with a pitch. The runner scored after a sacrifice and a single. In the fourth Humble made it 2-0 on a triple and a single. Tyler County made its move in the bottom of the inning on a walk and a stolen base by Sturrock and a Humble error.

The local all-stars tied the game in the fifth on a double by Lane and a pair of ground outs. In the sixth Tyler County broke the game open by scoring four runs on three singles by Sturrock, Powell and Conner, plus a costly error by Humble's right fielder.

Again making the most of every opportunity, Tyler County was able to score its six runs on only four hits and one walk.

Hennigan thanks fans

Tournament director Gary Hennigan expressed his gratitude to all the fans who attended the sectional tournament held at Hennigan Park.

Minyard to head Colmesneil baseball

COLMESNEIL — Rusty Minyard is back home again.

After five years of coaching Colmesneil's arch rival, the Chester Yellowjackets, Minyard has been hired to take over the Bulldog baseball program.

In an unusual twist of circumstances Colmesneil latched on to the 1984 Bulldog graduate who was an all-district pitcher and shortstop four years for the red and white.

Minyard left Chester in May with full intention of switching careers from teaching to sales, but after resigning from Chester he had second thoughts and decided to stay in teaching and coaching after all. Darrell Young had already replaced Minyard at Chester, so the former Yellowjacket coach applied at both Woodville and Colmesneil. Both schools were interested, but the Colmesneil opportunity opened when Gene Allen, who coached the Bulldogs for the past two years, left for Corpus Christi.

The new Colmesneil coach will also head the Bulldog defense in football, a job that he also had at Chester for the past five years.

"It's going to be a great situation," smiled Minyard, "for both football and baseball."

"I'm looking forward to it," he adds. "There is a lot of potential, so I'm pretty excited."

He was reluctant to compare Chester and Colmesneil, but did say that Colmesneil should have the advantage due to the number of students and coaches.

"I understand that 40 players came out for baseball last year," said Minyard. "I promise I won't run anyone off, I'll turn them into ball players. If it happens again next year, we will have three teams; a varsity, a junior varsity and a freshman team."

Prior to his stint at Chester where he led the Yellowjackets to the playoff three years, Minyard coached at class 3A Edna. After graduating from Colmesneil he played four years at East Texas Baptist College in Marshall where he pitched and was a utility fielder. He graduated in 1989 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Education.

He is married to Pam Minyard. They have two daughters, Haley, age four and Katlyn, 1 1/2 years old.

Woodville High School announces freshman orientation

WOODVILLE - Freshman Orientation will be held at Woodville High School on the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday, August 2nd and 3rd, according to Eleanor Holderman, high school counselor.

Parents and students are invited to attend one of the four sessions (two are offered each evening), selecting the one that best fits their personal schedule. Parents will meet in the high school library while students will meet in the cafeteria. The orientation sessions begin at 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. each evening and each lasts approximately one hour.

Student Council members have planned an exciting agenda for the student meeting, where the freshmen will be introduced to campus life, school spirit activities, leadership opportunities and will tour the campus. Students will also receive their schedules, learn where each class meets, and be introduced to many of their new teachers.

Dr. Tom Harvey, high school principal, will meet with parents to share the ways they are invited to participate in their students' high school experience. He will introduce the variety of programs offered to meet the needs of Woodville High School students, and respond to parents' questions.

All freshmen are expected to attend one of the orientation sessions. Students returning to high school and freshmen unable to take part in orientation may come to the high school office on Friday, August 4, or Monday, August 7, to pick up their schedules. School office hours are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Property tax exemptions available for disabled vets

WOODVILLE — "Veterans with a service-connected disability may reduce their property taxes in 1995 by filling out a simple exemption form at the Tyler County Appraisal District office," Chief Appraiser Eddie Chalmers said.

A veteran's percentage of service-connected disability determines the size of the exemption. The exemption ranges from a $1,500 to a $3,000 deduction from the veteran's property value. Chalmers explained who is eligible for the application:

• a disabled veteran;

• a surviving spouse of a deceased disabled veteran, as long as the spouse remains unmarried;

• a surviving minor child of a deceased disabled veteran, if the veteran's spouse does not survive the veteran and if the child is both under 18 and unmarried

• a surviving spouse of a person killed while on active duty, whether the spouse has remarried or not at application time; and

• a surviving minor child of a person killed while on active duty, if the child is both under 18 and unmarried.

"Any eligible person who has not received this exemption must apply by May 1," Chalmers said. "But, if you received the exemption in 1994, you do not have to re-apply in 1995."

An applicant may claim the exemption on only one piece of property, such as a home or any other property the applicant owned on January 1. The applicant must be a Texas resident to qualify.

The appraisal district may require proof of the disability, such as documentation from the Veterans Administration or the branch of the armed service in which the veteran served. Applicants may need proof of marriage, age or proof of a spouse's or a parent's death.

Obtain an application form and more information about specific qualifications from Chalmers at the Tyler County Appraisal District office at 806 West Bluff, Woodville, Texas. Office hours are 8 a.m to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number is (409) 283-3736.

Area teacher completes NASA workshop

KENNEDY SPACE CENTER — Harriett Langston, a teacher at Warren Elementary School, recently completed a two-week NASA Education Workshop for Elementary School Teachers (NEWEST) workshop at John F. Kennedy Space Center. Langston was among 23 specially selected master educators attending the workshop June 18-30.

Langston was selected for the program by a committee made up from members of the co-sponsoring organizations, which are NASA, The National Science Teachers Association, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the International Technology Educators Association.

This joint program provides an in-depth opportunity for elementary school teachers to learn more about space science and technology. While at KSC, they work directly with space agency engineers and scientists. NEWEST is also designed to inform teachers about NASA's educational programs and materials.

While at the space center, the NEWEST group viewed KSC Space Shuttle processing and launch facilities. They also got a close look at the specialized laboratories and operational areas where NASA space technology is developed. Some of these areas included the materials testing, chemistry and biomedical research labs. The space technology segment also included briefings by NASA engineers and scientists about KSC's space-related biomedical and biological programs., future space missions and how satellites aid in weather forecasting, geological research and navigation on Earth.

Educational resources segments of the workshop included hands-on work at KSC's Exploration Station, job shadowing of NASA executives for space science career development and work in the Educators Resource Library.

To learn how wildlife co-exists with the space program, the NEWEST teachers studied the ecology of Cape Canaveral National Seashore just north of KSC and the Merritt Island National Wildlife Refuge within the boundaries of the 140,000 acre space center. A special session on one ecosystem in the local environment was provided during this part of the workshop, including a midnight trip to watch sea turtles lay their eggs on the seashore beach.

There was also time for a bit of fun while learning the chemistry and physics of a rocket launch. The NEWEST group members first built their own model solid motor rockets and then launched them in a nearby field.

Funeral director attends hardwood casket manufacturing seminar

WOODVILLE — Terry W. Riley of the Riley Funeral Home in Woodville attended a two-day continuing education seminar and tour of the largest, most modern facility of its kind in the world.

The seminar details the complete process of manufacturing hardwood caskets. The program is targeted at achieving a greater understanding and appreciation for the craftsmanship and technology involved in the hardwood manufacturing process.

In addition to producing in excess of 75,000 finished wood caskets, York Casket Company will make over 250,000 finished metal caskets, as well as being the largest supplier of metal parts in the world. York caskets are distributed by a nationwide network of independently owned and operated distributors such as the Houston based York-Southwest Casket Company.

Improvements completed to local telephone network

NACOGDOCHES — Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) has completed $1.9 million in network improvements in the Woodville area that will enhance service to customers and help support economic development.

SWBT External Affairs Manager Eddie Arnold said the new facilities have increased the capacity and transmission quality of the telephone system.

"This can be an important factor in fostering economic development in Woodville," Arnold said. "When businesses consider possible locations for setting up operations, communications is one of the key items they inquire about. The improvements we're making will help put Woodville in a more competitive position to encourage business growth."

Over the last three years, SWBT has upgraded the call-switching office to digital equipment and added more than 21 miles of cable, including 16 miles of fiber-optic cable.

Digital and fiber-optic technology enables SWBT to provide customer with faster, more dependable service. Fiber-optic cable also helps lower operating costs for SWBT because new customers can be added to the network without installing new cable.

In June, SWBT introduced several Call Return, Priority Call, Call Blocker and Auto Redial in Woodville. Other available services include Call Waiting, Speed Calling, Call Forwarding features, Three-Way Calling and 1+SAVER service, a discounted long-distance calling plan. Customers may call 1-800-464-7928 to order or receive information on any of these services.

SWBT currently has 3,325 residence lines and 993 business lines in Woodville.

"Southwestern Bell services are backed by a reliable, advanced network," Arnold said. "Our investment demonstrates our commitment to being a partner in Woodville's growth and future. We're constantly working to provide more timely, reliable customer service."

Upgrading telephone facilities and providing each customer with a private line are part of a four-year economic development and incentive regulation agreement with the Texas Public Utility Commission. SWBT completed the elimination of 428 party lines in the Woodville area in November 1992.

The agreement, which evolved from SWBT's original "Texas First" proposal, was designed to provide the financial incentive to build an advanced telecommunications network to help attract new business to Texas.

Students attending Woodville High School are benefiting from an eight-month SWBT educational support program. SWBT donates $2 to the high school every time a customer subscribes to a new Southwestern Bell Call Forwarding, Call Waiting, Three-Way Calling, Speed Calling or 1+SAVER service. The school has the potential to receive a maximum $1,500 contribution.

SWBT is a wholly owned subsidiary of SBC Communications, Inc. The company provides telecommunications services to more than 10 million customers in Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

Eagle Band Boosters to meet Tuesday

WOODVILLE — The Woodville Band Booster Club will hold its first meeting of the 1995-96 school year at 7 p.m. Tuesday, August 8 in the high school band hall.

Band Director, Rusty Lay, will provide an itinerary of the band's 1995-96 schedule and will introduce his new Assistant Band Director, Jeff Murphy.

"Every band parent is encouraged to join us to help to make this a rewarding experience for our children," said Kenny M. Simpson, Band Booster president. "I look forward to meeting with you."

THE PAWS THAT REFRESHES-- These kids had the right idea Monday after a torrential downpour late Monday afternoon of giving their dogs a bath. It seems that Carrie, 8, Daniel, 7, and Whitney, 10, were nonchalantly splishing and splashing when THE BOOSTER Photographer happened along. It's easy to tell that the kids co-operated when the cameraman showed up. Parents are Brad and Donna Spivey, of Woodville. Puppies are "Princess", "Cleo" and "Brownie". (Photo by John Morrison)

Senate panel approves local water project, Gramm says

WASHINGTON — U. S. Sen. Phil Gramm reports that the Senate Appropriations Committee has approved a total of $9,474,000 in this year's energy and water appropriations legislation for flood control work at the dam at Sam Rayburn Reservoir in Angelina, Jasper and Tyler counties.

Specifically, the senator said, the funds will be used to finish construction of a new concrete spillway at Sam Rayburn that will increase the reservoir's floodwater capacity. Construction of the new spillway began this past January and is expected to be completed by August of next year.

The Congress is being asked to appropriate more than $177 million for projects and programs directly related to Texas, the senator noted.

"This year's appropriations bill carries financing for a range of programs and projects that are important, and in some cases critical, to Texas," said Gramm, a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"The legislation represents a substantial return on the investment we make in government through our tax dollars," he said.

Also included in this funding measure is $20 million for continued erosion control work along the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway Canal at Sargent Beach in Matagorda County, $3.1 million for channel and navigation improvements along the Channel to Victoria in Victoria County, and dozens of other water supply, flood control and navigation projects throughout Texas.

Grant awarded for reservation link-up

INDIAN VILLAGE — Sam Houston State University was awarded a grant for $340,000 to provide medical and educational services in southeast Texas via a computer link-up. The system will link a medical clinic, hospital, the Alabama Coushatta Indian Reservation and two county extension offices.

"The information superhighway is being introduced to rural America through $7.5 million in grants to 29 education and health care organizations in 23 states," said George Ellis, state director of Rural Economic and Community Development Service. Formerly Farmers Home Administration. "The grants for this type of technology are developed through the Rural Utilities Service, an agency with USDA's Rural Economic and Community Development mission area."

The grants will help to build the infrastructure needed in rural America as we enter a new century, a new era of technological innovation, according to Wally Teyer, RUS National Administrator. "These grants will improve the quality of life for real people through improved educational and health care services," he said.

This year, the 'RUS' Distance Learning and Medical Link Grant Program is dispersing grants between $67,000 and $350,000 - 19 of which are over $222,500. The grants will help link rural schools to other classrooms in rural and urban areas, providing advanced courses and interactive educational opportunities. The grants to health care organizations will help allow rural citizens access to telemedicine services bringing specialized and general care closer to home.

"This is where the county road meets the information superhighway," Beyer said. "These grants will improve the educational opportunities for over 95,000 young people in school and give them an equal footing in the increasingly competitive marketplace. The medical grants will expand the health services available to approximately 108,000 rural Americans and make it easier and more affordable for them to receive quality health care."

A total of 16 educational organizations were granted more than $4.5 million and 13 health care groups received almost $3 million.

According to Ellis, RUS received 247 applications requesting a total of $79.8 million in funds. The selection process, including a review by federal officials and participants outside the government, took five months.

DETCOG reviews grants

LUFKIN — Directors of the Deep East Texas Council of Governments have given their support to a federal grant application that, if approved, will provide a renovated building for a Head Start Program at Shepherd in San Jacinto County.

The $45,788 application to the U. S. Department of Health and Human Services by the San Jacinto County Commissioners Court was approved by the DETCOG board at Hemphill following a favorable review by the Council's Grants Application Review Committee.

The federal agency must approve the grant application before work can begin on the renovations, which will permit Head Start to serve 94 children.

The Application Review Committee gave an unfavorable review to two applications by East Texas Transit Systems, Inc. of Longview for the establishment of a regional mass transit system to serve the East Texas area. The two applications totaled $3,686,000.

In making its decision, the Application Review Committee said it felt the transit system would duplicate public transit efforts now underway in the Deep East Texas area.

East Texas Transit System, Inc., said it is seeking funding from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

At the Village

By Dottie Johnson

Round Robin brings more family histories to Village

They say three times is a charm, but in this world of genealogy, sometimes two is enough.

Such was the case in response to our inquiries about Dr. G. W. Adams, who married Dora Rhodes, the sister of Bro. Jeff Rhodes, a well known turn of the century preacher.

It seems also that Dora's father, Arnold Rhodes, reorganized the Baptist Church in Woodville.

The first word we had about Dr. Adams was from the 1920 Census, which Jack Whitmeyer has recently finished and presented to the Village Library. That's where we found G. W. Adams M.D. Jack thought he was probably from the Rockland area.

The second came from Betty Rotan Hairston of Fort Worth who subscribes to The Tyler County Booster and thereby keeps up with the Village through this column. When we wrote about story telling in the Village, she sent typewritten copies of two stories that appeared in the Beaumont Enterprise, dated April 1933 and May 1934. Each contained a story of ghostly Tyler County lore written by the late Dean Tevis, the result of interviews with Betty's paternal grandparents, John and Clara Rotan, and Clara's sister, Dora Rhodes, so we struck a chord.

Betty had hoped that we might be able to use some of the story information during our story telling at the Fourth of July Picnic at the Cauble House, especially since one involved the Cauble cemetery.

Unfortunately time would not allow, but meanwhile Betty read that we were looking for information on Dora's husband for our Exhibit of Early Tyler County doctors, so she sent a copy of our column asking about Dr. Adams to her cousin and the doctor's granddaughter, Martha Nees St. John in Beaumont. And the round robin began with one slight discrepancy. According to Martha, G. W. was actually S. W. - Samuel Womack Adams, born 1867 in Moscow, Polk County, Texas. His daughter, Martha's mother, was Clara Mabel Adams Nees.

Samuel "read medicine", she told us, in Memphis, Tennessee. That's the way he always expressed his medical education, she said, and we could not find him listed in our Memphis Hospital Medical School record. He practiced medicine as a Kirby Lumber Company doctor in Warren, Roganville and Rockland. He was only 53 years old, when he died, in 1920, of an infection in his elbow, probably from a spider bite. He is buried in Magnolia Cemetery in Woodville as is his wife.

The son of John Hobby Adams of Macon, Georgia, Samual W. Adams had a brother John Hobby Jr., who was also a doctor, although it is doubtful that he practiced in Tyler County.

Another Tyler County doctor tracked down by interested descendants who have shared a great deal of information for our library files, putting forth names such as McAlister and Johnston, Durham, Goolsby and Frazier.

In her letter, Martha St. John offered to send more information on some of these names which are so familiar in these parts, and we welcome them.

It's letters and information like this that make our day.

Ghostly lore

But, let's get back to the lady who put this information in our reach.

After mailing the copies, Betty Hairston brought the original newspaper articles to us, when she came to Woodville for her class reunion on July 14. Here they were - the papers browned and crumpled with age, seeming more precious than the typed versions for no other reason but their authenticity - two treasured bits of intertwined history as related by native sons and daughters.

One is The Wild Woman of Caney, the other The Kindly Phantom of Wilson Creek, ghostly tales both, occurring in the Mt. Hope and Peach Tree Village area in the 1860s and 70s.

So what did we do with these tales? We gave Whitney Garrity the challenge of putting them into shorter form for the possible return of our once popular Ghost Stories of Texas Past. They are in good hands indeed.

The subject matter and the tale tellers are well spelled out by Tevis, who tells of those who would vouch for the Wild Woman's screams. Even John Henry Kirby was known to tell the story in all its fine detail. But it took the Rotans to tell about the meeting with the phantom, how he led people out of the thicket to safety.

These two stories along with the well told tale of the pebble thrower at the Hallmark home will live on as long as there are people who believe in the supernatural or just like to hear about it. And so it lives on, and it grows with the telling and it's part of our history in northwest Tyler County.

Once again, our thanks to Betty Hairston for sharing these treasures with us.

Tourists from Poland

"I have 15 men from Poland touring the Village," a breathless Pat Taylor told me over the phone last Saturday afternoon. "Is this the kind of thing you want to hear?" This is the kind of thing I want to hear, I told her before talking with their leader Richard Nowacie.

What better than two visitors from Nurnberg, Germany, three from Bairanald, Australia and three from St. Michael, France, all on Saturday, July 22, than 15 engineers from Poland, who arrived unannounced on Saturday, July 29, and had a ball touring Heritage Village?

These gentlemen, all employed by chemical power stations throughout Poland, took a mid-way break from a two week training session in Houston, where they are learning to operate and maintain electronic monitoring equipment designed to measure and regulate vibrations of high powered machinery. When they leave Houston next Saturday, they will be taking both the machines and their knowledge back home, where they will train others.

What fun it is having visitors like these, people who find the Village and Woodville a great way to spend a leisurely Saturday afternoon, far away from home.

But the "how they got here" makes for an equally interesting story. Their tour leader was Grace Zubkow of the South Belt Ellington Chamber of Commerce. Much like our own chamber, they have ribbon cuttings when a new member joins, and in this case, it was the Homestead Hotel, where the Polish engineers were staying.

As chance would have it, Grace had forgotten her camera, so she quickly called her husband Wesley, a native of Poland, to bring it to her, and immediately a dialogue opened up, he being able to interpret the wishes of the visitors.

They wanted to see something outside of Houston, some country, some history. What would Grace suggest? She told them about the Indian Reservation, and that's where they headed. Grace had never heard of Heritage Village, but the folks at the Reservation had and suggested they come to us. And come they did, and according to Grace and Wesley, they had a wonderful time.

Visual history seems to have a universal language all its own, as does music. As the touring group wandered in various directions through the Village, they heard music - music coming from the Cherokee Church. It was as though the Village had suddenly come alive, Grace told us. In unison, the entire group converged on the church, where they found their own leader, Richard Nowacie, at the piano. And so they all sat down and rested and enjoyed an impromptu concert.

Not only did Grace go home with Village brochures to give others wanting to know about an interesting place to visit, she is going to provide us with a list of other Chambers in the Houston area, who she is sure would be delighted to know about our Village.

We're sorry the group didn't stop to eat at the Pickett House, but they seemed more interested in barbecue, which one of the group said was quite good. So they went to Texas Best, and there many of them opted instead for catfish, a first time experience. Not only did they enjoy their meal, they were overwhelmed by the size of the servings and the hospitality.

More proof that Woodville and Tyler County do in fact have some very worthwhile and interesting tourist attractions, and the Village and its surroundings are just one case in point.

One more story hour to go

And don't forget, for our visitors right here at home, Whitney and Beth have one more Texas Story Hour awaiting your young people - next Tuesday, August 8, at 10 a.m.

At the Village, of course. Come see.

What did you play?

By Darby Kethan

"Play", said Mark Twain, "consists of whatever a body is not obliged to do." Play, for many of us, is thought of as children's activities, something they do while "fooling around" or engaging in non-productive games. Wonderfully intelligent researchers and educators tell us that children learn many valuable skills through their play and that all play provides learning opportunities. I think this is so . . . no matter what is going on around them, children are learning at earlier ages than many of us realize. We know children aren't entering Kindergarten with the same skills children entered with years ago. So much has changed in children's lives but I believe the greatest change has occurred in their play. Remembering when you played and what you played can help you see what I mean.

Our play was mainly outside . . . today, it isn't really safe for many kids to be outside, even if the time for outside play existed. Families come home late and need to get supper and chores tended to; many schedules don't allow outside time at all. Walking to friends' houses and just roaming in general is dangerous so a tremendous loss of freedom is experienced by kids who aren't old enough to even realize there ever was a different way to live.

Our play was mainly active. We played war, fort, tag, hide and seek, jump rope, hopscotch, marbles and jacks. Although adults were nearby, by ourselves we learned to get along with one another by devising elaborate systems of rules and regulations, deciding who were the leaders, and in general finding out how we and others worked in a social setting.

Our play was imaginative. Civil War Soldiers was a favorite game, supported by Christmas gifts of soldier suits, cannon and supplies. Dressing up was popular as well as "house", with dolls, accessories and imitating activities we saw around us. We made paper dolls from Sears catalogs, perfume from rose petals, cakes of mud, and trains out of cardboard boxes. There was very little of the day we were not outside unless it was to rest during the hot afternoon times.

Our play was instructive. Card games taught counting skills, learning to play Battle taught us to compare numbers and black-jack taught us to add. Tic-tac-toe, chess and Chinese Checkers taught us to take the other person's viewpoint in order to beat them. Board games such as Parcheesi, Sorry, Clue and Risk provided long hours of play, interacting with peers and adults, as we learned strategy and stretched our thinking skills.

Our play took time. Without time for that play to take place at home, schools must provide, in whatever setting children are served, the time for this play to take place. Children learn through active learning, through interacting with materials and other people to discover the ways the world works. Wherever the children are, we must provide the time for this to take place.

Summer fun with Smokey Bear

By Keith Hawkins
Texas Forest Service

Last year during Smokey Bear's 50th birthday celebration, my wife and I sent Smokey a birthday card for fun without any expectation of receiving anything back. In few weeks, we each received our Junior Forest Ranger kit. This experience inspired me to share with parents how to help their children receive their own kits.

The purpose of this program is to encourage children to be careful with fire in the forest. The kit contains a certificate, a wallet card and pin-on badge.

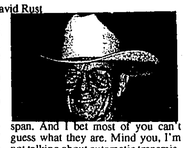
This summer activity would entail children writing, with parental help, to Smokey Bear about the importance of forest fire prevention and asking for a Junior Forest Ranger kit. The address is: Smokey Bear Headquarters, Washington, D.C. 20252. The reason the address is so simple is because Smokey has his own zip code.

Writing to Smokey would be a fun activity for parents and children to do together this summer. Another reason to write is that this program may not be around. Undoubtedly, Smokey will survive Federal budget cuts, but his JFR program may not. I encourage families to start their letter-writing and to look forward to hearing from Smokey.

PROfessions

"A car was a car"

By David Rust



In the beginning they didn't even know what to call them. Horseless Carriages, Skunk Wagons, Road Engines and Motorcars were among the printables. Later the term Automobile caught on, usually shortened to Auto. But my cross-grained Scottish great aunt Ca'line called them Mobiles to her dying day.

They are all nothing but cars now. How prosaic. Just in this century they have progressed from mechanical novelties through barebones workhorses, then sporting and luxury showcases to irreducible necessities of our technocracy. But have you ever wondered at how little real change there has been, particularly in the last 60 years?

Now don't come at me with talking dashboards, pulsating seat cushions, quadriphonic CD players and the like. Such gimmickry may be nice if you go for solutions to which there are no problems. But they have nothing to do with the automobile as a machine. In 1935 a car was a car was a car. With few exceptions, they steered in front and pushed behind. A four, six, or eight-cylinder engine supplied the grunt. It burned gasoline using the Otto cycle, and connected to the driving wheels through a clutch, planetary or sliding gear transmission, and differential. It had a solenoid-actuated electric starter, supplied with power from a lead-acid battery, and it was cooled by water-based liquid circulating through a radiator. Its carburetion and ignition were mechanically controlled, complex but functional.

Braking was on all four wheels, mostly by hydraulic pressure. Steering was through dynamically balanced linkages, using either rack and pinion or worm-drive gearing. Suspensions were mostly independent, mainly by leaf springs but with some coil springs coming in. All wheels were damped by shock absorbers. And with few and minor exceptions, this describes the car of 1995 almost as well.

Oh, all right, lots of 'em today have everything up front, steering and driving and gear shifting. All the back wheels have to do is just follow along. But even in the 30's there were front-wheel-drive models. Ignition and carburetion (or injection) are computer controlled now. But otherwise, the changes we so easily take for granted have been far more in the nature of refinements than innovations.

I know of just two clear-cut engineering breakthroughs over that time span. And I bet most of you can't guess what they are. Mind you, I'm not talking about automatic transmissions (which were available in 1935, and not really an improvement then) or power steering and brakes, all of which are more like conveniences than functional advancements. The changes brought about by these features were more evident to the mechanic than the driver. But both inventions were entirely new ways of doing something.

Give up? The first of these came out of aeronautical progress in WW2. Aircraft brakes were a sore point going in, requiring heavy stopping power within a small space. Somebody thought up the disk brake. Eventually it was downscaled and put on the front wheels of nearly all cars. And the improvement over drum-and-shoe brakes is pretty spectacular, nowhere more so than in flood-prone country like southeast Texas.

The other dramatic breakthrough changed the way ignition was accomplished in our engines. The old cam-driven breaker points were replaced by a power transistor controlled by a pre-coded digital module. There were growing pains, but the advantages are very evident today. Fuel economy, starting, and acceleration are better, but the most dramatic improvement is in the life of the components. Breaker points and spark plugs had to be cleaned or replaced every 20,000 miles or so. Now there are no points to replace, and plugs will go for 50,000 miles or more.

Oh, the good old days. But let us remember gratefully where we have got to. A car owner of 1930 would gasp in disbelief at one of today's moderately priced cars. Its trouble-free dependability would astonish him. The ability to go 50,000 miles between tune-ups and tire changes would seem all but miraculous. Its lifetime paint job would challenge his credulity, and let's not even speculate how he'd handle air bags, motorized seat belts, climate controls and infra-red alarm systems.

But as Eph Gluchocker dryly observes, "One thing they ain't changed is the mut behind the wheel."

Shalom . . .

On Waco

Dear Editor:

Most people with any degree of common sense acknowledge that David Koresh was a madman and, without doubt, a sorry excuse for a human being. Even so, there can be no plausible excuse for federal law enforcement agencies at the Waco fiasco to have attacked a compound where the majority of inhabitants were women and children. Especially since Koresh could have been arrested off the compound property without endangering anyone else.

Like most Americans, I don't really know what happened at Waco on April 19, 1993. I wasn't there. We have only what a sometimes biased news media has printed or televised, to assist in the formation of any conclusions. Sources that can be unreliable at best.

There are many burning questions left unanswered. I, for one, would like to know why Koresh wasn't picked up by ATF or FBI agents as he jogged along the highway. According to witnesses, Koresh frequently left the compound to job or go into the city. Why not arrest him away from everyone else, thus avoiding the frontal assault that cost so many innocent children their lives?

Granted, those adults who chose to stay inside and fire on advancing police officers made a choice, but what choice could those children have had? How many of those innocents knew the possible consequences?

At this date, it doesn't matter who started the fire that consumed the compound at Mount Carmel. What needs to be brought out, through an exhaustive investigation, is why an incident such as Mount Carmel happened at all.

Koresh should have been arrested and brought to trial for the crimes he was charged with, but are we to believe there was no way of bringing David Koresh to justice other than all-out assault upon citizens of this country by federal law enforcement agencies? Unless these questions are answered, can justice truly be said to exist in America?

Those members of Congress charged with investigation of the Waco affair, both Republicans and Democrats, need to put aside their political haranguing of each other long enough to search out the truth, no matter where final blame goes to roost.

American citizens deserve the assurance that such an incident can never happen within our self-professed democratic society again. That assurance can only come from a thorough and open investigation into all elements of the Waco tragedy.

Donald Hendrix

LIVINGSTON — Historian and journalist Donald Hendrix was pronounced dead Friday at his Livingston residence.

His body was discovered by Livingston police and co-workers after he failed to report for work and failed to answer either his telephone or doorbell. Although an autopsy has been ordered by Polk County Precinct 4 Justice of the Peace Howard Lilley, it was believed that Hendrix died sometime Thursday night due to natural causes.

Funeral services were pending at Cochran Funeral Home in Livingston.

Hendrix, 58, had served as the special sections editor for The Polk County Enterprise since 1982 and was widely known throughout East Texas as a Polk County historian and genealogical researcher.

A member of both the Polk County Heritage Society and the Polk County Historical Commission, he was awarded one of the heritage society's tophonors, the J. R. Maxwell Award in 1989. The award recognized Hendrix for outstanding "individual achievement" in historical preservation.

"He will be missed," said Polk County Museum Curator Wanda Bobinger. "He was a valuable resource to the historical commission and Polk County because he knew so much about our history and the families who settled here.

"He was always available for me to call upon for information. Lots of times people would come into the museum from Houston, Dallas or other communities looking for information about their families. If I couldn't help them, I could call Don and generally, he could go home, call up the information on his computer and provide me with a printout the next day.

"And if the family were early Polk County settlers, he would usually have quite a bit of information," Bobinger added.

District Clerk Nell Lowe added Friday that Hendrix also provided valuable assistance to her office through his research of the county's records.

"I'll always be grateful to Don for his work and the people who come here in search of information from the old records should also be grateful to him," Lowe said.

The district clerk said that Hendrix spent a year indexing the old district court minute books to provide researchers an easier and faster way to look up items. She noted that while indexes to the old records are believed to have existed prior to Hendrix's work, they had been lost or destroyed over the years.

"He indexed the minutes from the late 1800s up to about the 1930s, all on his own time over the course of about a year," she said.

Alvin Holley, publisher of The Polk County Enterprise said Friday that Hendrix's contributions to Polk County both as a historian and as a journalist were tremendous.

"He was a valuable employee who will be missed on both a personal and professional basis," Holley said. "His knowledge and love of local history contributed both to the newspaper and to the community as a whole."

Holley noted that because of Hendrix's research, much of the early history of Polk County will be preserved for future generations. Through his weekly newspaper column, Trinity Valley Trivia, as well as his annual history section dealing the Pine Cone Festival, he published a massive amount of information about the people and incidents that made up everyday life in Polk County during the 1800s.

In addition to his recognition by the Polk County Heritage Society, Hendrix's special Pine Cone Festival editions also have won honors for The Polk County Enterprise over the years. The historical editions have been awarded a number of honors by the Texas Press Association, the Texas Gulf Coast Press Association and the North and East Texas Press Association as the best special sections among semi-weekly newspapers in the state and region.

He was born Dec. 14, 1936 in the Lexington, KY., area, the son of Robert and Marie Hendrix. He graduated from Henry Clay High School in Lexington in 1955 and attended Angelo State University in San Angelo.

After graduating from high school, he joined the United States Air Force in 1956 and served for four years with the USAF Security Service as a Korean language interpreter. For most of his military career, he was stationed at a radio listening post located on a small island off the coast of North Korea.

After being discharged at Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, Hendrix decided to remain in Texas and began working as an office supply salesman for a San Angelo printing company. In 1962, he joined the staff of KCTV, a CBS television affiliate located in San Angelo. During his career there, he worked as a studio cameraman, an illustrator, a director and finally as the production manager.

In 1970, Hendrix joined the staff of the San Angelo Standard-Times as a reporter. While working for the San Angelo newspaper, Hendrix was awarded a first place award from the Associated Press Managing Editors' Association for a series of stories he wrote detailing a shortage of physicians in West Texas.

He left San Angelo in November, 1972, when he accepted a job as a reporter for The Polk County Enterprise in Livingston. In 1974 he was named as the editor of the Polk County newspaper, a position he held for a year and a half.

Hendrix left Livingston in April 1976, moving for a brief time back to San Angelo. He subsequently moved to Austin, where he was employed as an artist for a commercial printing company. He later was employed by television stations in both Lake Charles, LA., and New Orleans, LA., before returning to Livingston in 1982 to accept the job as special sections editor for The Enterprise.

In addition to his writing and research skills, Hendrix was an avid artist and cartoonist. Many of his special sections included artwork he produced to illustrate his stories. In addition, after he rejoined The Enterprise staff in 1982, he produced a humorous cartoon strip entitled Cob's County, which featured a good natured character named Cob in a rural East Texas setting.

In addition to his work with the Polk County Heritage Society and the Polk County Historical Commission, he was a member of the Livingston Art League.

Survivors include two daughters and a son-in-law, Debby Hendrix of San Angelo and Donna and Johnnie Shoemaker of Port Angeles, Washington; his father, Robert Hendrix of Lexington, KY.; a sister, Patricia We Lexington, KY.; and four grandchildren.

Cochran Funeral Home of Livingston was directing the arrangements.

Thank you

The Emily Elnora Daniels Allen family would like to express their sincere gratitude for all the floral tributes, spiritual tributes, foods, visitations, love and support from all their family and friends.

Love and Thanks,
Bob Allen

Big League All-Stars take second in sectionals

By Don Stevenson

WOODVILLE — Call it fate. Call it a tough break, or just plain old bad luck, but the Tyler County Big League All-Stars possibly missed going to Waco for the state tournament due to an opponent's second baseman playing out of position.

The official score at the end of the game was an 11-7 Sugarland victory. But as in most cases, it by no means told the story.

The story actually revolved around a play in the sixth inning of the game. The championship game was played at Hennigan Park Friday night and Tyler County trailed Sugarland's 10-7, having fought back from a 6-0 deficit in the first inning. Sugarland's pitcher, Roger Sokol, was having control problems. Sokol walked both John Mark Lane and Justin McCabe to start the inning. Larry Strickland then stepped up and ripped a liner up the middle that would have scored one, maybe two runs. But standing in the way was Sugarland second baseman, Al Bruni, who snagged the rope for one out, stepped on second to double up Lane, then threw to first to nail McCabe. It was one of the most unique plays in baseball, a triple play, and with it Tyler County's hopes of making it to the state championships ended.

"I don't know why that kid was playing there," said Tyler County coach Neil Hennigan. "That ball had base hit written all over it. That would have scored at least one run and we would have had runners on second and third with no outs. If that would have happened, I guarantee I would have gotten the other two runners in to tie the game."

Although the local all-stars were four runs shy of their Waco trip to the state tournament, Hennigan proudly noted, "These were a great bunch of guys. They played hard and fought back, time and time again. They had a lot of desire."

Such was the case in the championship Friday night after Sugarland jumped off to a 6-0 lead in the first inning on a pair of walks and two errors, followed by a single and a double.

Tyler County got one run in the second on singles by Strickland, Jeff Allen and Mike Smith, and added three more in the third on singles by Darren Powell, a walk to Lane, and singles by Jim Forse and Larry Strickland.

But Sugarland by that time had scored four more runs on two singles, a double and a triple, holding a 10-1 lead at the end of two.

In the fourth, trailing 10-4, Tyler County rallied for three more runs on a single by Justin Sturrock, a double by Rodgers, a single by Powell and two Sugarland errors.

Then came the all important triple play that in a sense that halted any more damage against the Houston area team.

Sugarland did score one more in the bottom of the sixth, but by that time it was a moot point.

For the record, Tyler County banged out 13 hits in the game, led by Strickland's three singles. Sturrock also had a pair of singles, as did Powell. Lane added three walks to help the cause.

The loss was a tough one for Tyler County who the previous night blasted the same Sugarland team, 11-1, to give them their first loss in 17 outings.

Tyler County - 11 Sugarland - 1

Colmesneil's Joey Brown shut down previously unbeaten Sugarland by giving up only four hits in leading Tyler County to an impressive semifinal victory.

The lanky right hander opened the game by giving up back to back singles, but got out of the jam on a Tyler County double play going from shortstop to second to first. From that point on, he held Sugarland in check with no hits until giving up a pair in the third that led to Houston's only run of the game.

Meanwhile Tyler County's bats were hot, getting a solo run in the first and breaking the game open in the third with seven more.

Darren Smith scored Tyler County's first run after getting on with a walk. His venture was followed by singles by Powell, Lane and Strickland.

In the third, Tyler County piled more on with five singles and two walks. Smith, Powell, Land, Strickland and Rodgers got the bingos, while Jacob Conner and Brown got the walks.

Tyler County grabbed a solo run in the fourth on singles by Strickland and Conner, along with a Sugarland error, and finished off the evening with two runs in the fifth on singles by Smith and Powell.

The loss was Sugarland's first of the tournament and set up another game between the two teams the following night for the championship.

While Tyler County was made up of all-stars from Tyler County, Silsbee and Beaumont, Sugarland's team was made up of players from Angleton, 2A state champion East Bennard and Sugarland.

Tyler County - 4 East Houston - 1

Another sterling pitching performance by another class 1A player, this time Justin McCabe of Spurger led Tyler County to their fourth win of the tournament with a 4-1 win over East Houston.

McCabe gave up four hits in the game and was backed by another superb performance by the Tyler County defense.

East Houston got its only run in the fourth inning, tying Tyler County on a single and a double.

Tyler County won the game in the sixth with three runs on a pair of walks to Sturrock and Lane and an inside the park home run by Strickland.

Sturrock scored Tyler County's first run in the first inning after getting on with a single, moving to second on a sacrifice by Rodgers, and a run scoring single by Lane.

The local all-stars garnered only three hits in the game, but made the most of them while McCabe matched East Houston's Jason Haley on the mound.

Strickland's blow was the highlight of the evening for a capacity crowd on hand for the game.

Tyler County -6
Humble/Aldine - 3

Down 2-0 in the fourth inning, Tyler County rallied back for solo runs in the fourth and fifth, then unleaded for four more in the sixth to win its third game of the tournament.

Jason Tolbert picked up the mound win, giving up six hits while striking out seven.

Humble scored the first run of the game in the second on a third baseman Tolbert hit the lead off batter with a pitch. The runner scored after a sacrifice and a single. In the fourth Humble made it 2-0 on a triple and a single. Tyler County made its move in the bottom of the inning on a walk and a stolen base by Sturrock and a Humble error.

The local all-stars tied the game in the fifth on a double by Lane and a pair of ground outs. In the sixth Tyler County broke the game open by scoring four runs on three singles by Sturrock, Powell and Conner, plus a costly error by Humble's right fielder.

Again making the most of every opportunity, Tyler County was able to score its six runs on only four hits and one walk.

Hennigan thanks fans

Tournament director Gary Hennigan expressed his gratitude to all the fans who attended the sectional tournament held at Hennigan Park.

Minyard to head Colmesneil baseball

COLMESNEIL — Rusty Minyard is back home again.

After five years of coaching Colmesneil's arch rival, the Chester Yellowjackets, Minyard has been hired to take over the Bulldog baseball program.

In an unusual twist of circumstances Colmesneil latched on to the 1984 Bulldog graduate who was an all-district pitcher and shortstop four years for the red and white.

Minyard left Chester in May with full intention of switching careers from teaching to sales, but after resigning from Chester he had second thoughts and decided to stay in teaching and coaching after all. Darrell Young had already replaced Minyard at Chester, so the former Yellowjacket coach applied at both Woodville and Colmesneil. Both schools were interested, but the Colmesneil opportunity opened when Gene Allen, who coached the Bulldogs for the past two years, left for Corpus Christi.

The new Colmesneil coach will also head the Bulldog defense in football, a job that he also had at Chester for the past five years.

"It's going to be a great situation," smiled Minyard, "for both football and baseball."

"I'm looking forward to it," he adds. "There is a lot of potential, so I'm pretty excited."

He was reluctant to compare Chester and Colmesneil, but did say that Colmesneil should have the advantage due to the number of students and coaches.

"I understand that 40 players came out for baseball last year," said Minyard. "I promise I won't run anyone off. I'll turn them into ball players. If it happens again next year, we will have three teams; a varsity, a junior varsity and a freshman team."

Prior to his stint at Chester where he led the Yellowjackets to the playoff three years, Minyard coached at class 3A Edna. After graduating from Colmesneil he played four years at East Texas Baptist College in Marshall where he pitched and was a utility fielder. He graduated in 1989 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Education.

He is married to Pam Minyard. They have two daughters, Haley, age four and Katlyn, 1 1/2 years old.

Woodville High School announces freshman orientation

WOODVILLE Freshman Orientation will be held at Woodville High School on the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday, August 2nd and 3rd, according to Eleanor Holderman, high school counselor.

Parents and students are invited to attend one of the four sessions (two are offered each evening), selecting the one that best fits their personal schedule. Parents will meet in the high school library while students will meet in the cafeteria. The orientation sessions begin at 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. each evening and each lasts approximately one hour.

Student Council members have planned an exciting agenda for the student meeting, where the freshmen will be introduced to campus life, school spirit activities, leadership opportunities and will tour the campus. Students will also receive their schedules, learn where each class meets, and be introduced to many of their new teachers.

Dr. Tom Harvey, high school principal, will meet with parents to share the ways they are invited to participate in their students' high school experience. He will introduce the variety of programs offered to meet the needs of Woodville High School students, and respond to parents' questions.

All freshmen are expected to attend one of the orientation sessions. Students returning to high school and freshmen unable to take part in orientation may come to the high school office on Friday, August 4, or Monday, August 7, to pick up their schedules. School office hours are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.
