The Night After Christmas

"Twas the night after Christmas, and all through the house Not a creature was stirring, excepting a mouse The stockings were flung in haste over a chair, For hopes of St. Nicholas no longer were there. The children were restlessly tossing in bed For the ple and candy were heavy as lead; While Mama in her kerchief and I in my gown, . Had just made up our minds that we would not lie down.

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter, I sprang from my chair to see what was the matter Away to the window I went with a dash Flung open the shutter, and threw up the sash. The moon on the breast of the new fallen show Gave a luster of noonday to objects below; When what to my anxious eyes should appear, But a horse and a sleigh, both old-fashioned and queer; With a little old driver, so solemn and slow, I knew at a glance it must be Dr. Brough.

I drew in my head, and was turning around, When upstairs came the Doctor with scarcely a sound. He wore a thick overcoat, made long ago, And the beard on his chin was white with the snow. He spoke a few words, and went straight to his work, He felt all the pulses—then turned with a jerk, And laying his finger aside of his nose, With a nod of his head to the chimney he goes

She has a client who desires to evade the loverlike pursuit of an extraordinarily stout lady, whom he refers to as Mercy. Later, the lady in question, Miss Martha Washington Mercedes, comes. Her story is that because of her excess weight she has lost her lover, "Johnny." Smif advises her to diet until she has reduced. Mercy proposes that Smif should try the "cure," and if the results are satisfactory Mercy will follow her example. For a generous fee, Smif consents. "Johnny" discovers Smif's identity and is himself recognized by Smif as the tenant of Lovelylea, Johnstone Nesbit. He tolls her a pathetic story of his child-hood in France and England. Circumstances made him the lessee of Lovelylea. Unused to Virginia's ways he themself in decided to the four Lovelylea, in Virginia, is owned by Smif a herself in decidedly straitened circumstances.
