New Deal Sticks Relief as Supreme Court O. K.'s Gold Issues—President Urges Congress to Extend NRA Two More Years

By EDWARD W. BICKARD

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—The Supreme Court today gave its approval to the new deal's relief program, and President Roosevelt today urged Congress to extend the National Recovery Administration for two more years.

The court's decision, which was a 5-4 vote, upheld the constitutionality of the National Industrial Conference Board's plan to regulate the production of goods and services. The plan, which was approved by the National Industrial Conference Board, would allow the government to regulate the production of goods and services in order to stabilize prices and wages.

The president's message to Congress today urged the extension of the National Recovery Administration for two more years. He said that the NRA had been successful in stabilizing prices and wages, and that it was necessary to continue its work for the next two years.

The NRA was established in 1933 to regulate the production of goods and services in order to stabilize prices and wages. It has been successful in its work, and the president said that it was necessary to continue its work for the next two years.
