Victory in Rhode Island Election Blazes the Republicans

Guffy Coal Bill Undergoes Changes—Black's Protest Enrage Hawley

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

REPUBLICANS' victory throughout the country was immediately reflected in Rhode Island, where the party of the state's first president, the Republican Party, won a decisive victory in the election for the state legislature. The party's success was a result of its strong support in the coal fields and its opposition to the Guffy coal bill.

The Guffy coal bill, which would have increased the tax on coal, was a major issue in the election. The Republicans opposed the bill, while the Democrats supported it. The bill was eventually passed, but with several changes that were favorable to the Republicans.

The election was held on November 3, 1930. The Republicans won 10 seats in the state legislature, while the Democrats won 9. This was a significant victory for the Republicans, who had previously been a minority party in the state.

The victory in Rhode Island was a reflection of the national trend. The Republicans were successful in many other states as well, including New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. This success was a major boost for the party and its candidates.

The Guffy coal bill was a controversial issue. It was seen as an attempt to increase the tax on coal, which would have hurt the coal miners and the coal industry. The Republicans opposed the bill, while the Democrats supported it.

The election in Rhode Island was a clear victory for the Republicans. They won a majority in the state legislature, and their candidates were elected to office. This was a significant achievement for the party and its supporters.

CHAPTER IX—Continued. The scene was set in a quiet room, where the two men sat in silence. The air was thick with tension, and the only sound was the ticking of the clock on the wall.

The man in the white coat looked at the other man with a steady gaze. He said nothing, but his eyes spoke volumes. The other man felt a chill run down his spine.

The man in the white coat finally spoke. His voice was calm, but there was a hint of steel in it. The other man listened intently, his heart pounding in his chest.

The man in the white coat continued to speak, his words falling like stones into a pool of water. The other man's face grew more and more pale.

The man in the white coat finished his speech. He looked at the other man and said, "You have your choice to make. It is up to you."

The man in the white coat turned and walked away. The other man sat there for a long time, his mind racing. He knew that his life would never be the same again.

The man in the white coat's words echoed in his mind. He knew that he had to make a decision, and he knew that he had to do it quickly.

Opening of the Lincoln Casket

Sam H. O'Connell, president of the Georgia Historical Society, and a group of about 100 persons gathered in the city of Atlanta yesterday to witness the opening of the casket of Abraham Lincoln. The casket, which had been closed since the death of the great leader, was opened in the presence of a large number of guests.

Editor Trapped by Forest Fire Saves His Life by Crawling in Gravel Pit of Water

As Written by Dean Texas in Sunday Beaumont Enterprise, April 21, 1935

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Willard, in their modern shop, were trapped by a forest fire. The fire broke out in the morning and spread rapidly, cutting off the escape route. The Willards were forced to crawl into a gravel pit of water to save their lives.

DO NOT EAT PERISHABLE FOOD

It is a matter of vital importance, particularly during the warm summer season, that sanitary measures be applied to prevent the spread of perishable foods.

Various intestinal disorders result from food which has in some way been rendered unwholesome. Summer diarrhoea of "summer complaint" affecting young and old is a serious type of stomach and bowel condition.

Some form of modern refrigeration or cooling is necessary to preserve food from day to day. Lack of an effective cooling process causes meat to spoil and milk to contain a dangerously large number of bacteria.

Essential thorough cooking of food is the simplest and yet most useful method of preventing illness of food-borne character. This precaution applies especially to food prepared for infants and children.

It is not sufficient to eat only the most reliable brands of food. Adequate provision for screens and application of every known means of fly and insect extermination are worth while.

The rewards of improved sanitation include tangible assets in good health and sound business.

MODERN FARMING

From the columns of the Alabama News comes a story of a modern farming operation. The editor of the newspaper writes to the farmer.

Viewing the premises from the front one would only see the usual pretty grass lawn with flowers and shrubbery. The home occupies a lot 80x160 feet.

The year the following have been canned—we do not give the quantities: English peas, snap beans, carrots, beet chowder, English sparrow, stew lima beans, bush.

Future generations will farm better land and enjoy better health because of today's agricultural program which conserves the soil and improves the food of the farms of today.

Author Halliburton is crossing the Alps on an elephant to see how Hannibal did it. Our earlier suggestion that the elephant ride Halliburton is ignored.

On Texas Farms

About one out of every 12 cultivated acres was hit by the blight in the basic crops of this year in the United States.

A related fact as Joseph F. Cox, chief of the replacement crops section of the AAA, sees it is the largest increase in acreage ever reported in this country.

Alfalfa acreage went up from 11,492,000 acres in 1924 to 13,198,000 in 1933, a 14% increase; soy bean acreage rose from 4,223,000 acres in 1924 to 5,468,000, an increase of over 29%.

The significance of these figures will be felt by the children's children of the owners of this land. Soil erosion is checked and soil fertility built up by this type of crop.

More home raised meat will be served on the rural home makers' tables, more milk and butter, and chickens and eggs will appear in the diet of rural families because of these crops.

Future generations will farm better land and enjoy better health because of today's agricultural program which conserves the soil and improves the food of the farms of today.

MOURNING DOVE HUNTERS

The Austin American says, considering the mourning dove hunter, who fears with foundation, that his favorite sport will be sadly curtailed this year unless the U. S. biological survey changes its bur.

A curious contradiction of state and federal law is going to make it hard for the ambitious nighthawk to stick his head out the door without running afoul of one regulation or another.

Texas doves needed protecting. Texas hunters were free to shoot doves all during the three months and a half that Darling's bureau prescribes.

It is not so lenient with any other violators of this law in your community and it won't kill your neighbors that they cannot molest the robins, the judge said.

There are other interesting points which John might have discovered but he had learned enough so he fished the old gun out of the cistern and hot himself.

6 BOYS WHO SLEW 300 ROBINS

For Smith, Ark., July 27.—Six Johnson county farm youths ranging in age from 17 to 23 admitted in federal court here today that they killed between 250 and 300 robins in one night last November in the Ozark national forest.

The six said they killed the birds, protected by migratory laws, for a robin feast.

They said they knew of no law protecting the birds and Judge Heartill Hagon fined each $25 and placed the fine on execution pending their good behavior.

It will not be so lenient with any other violators of this law in your community and it won't kill your neighbors that they cannot molest the robins, the judge said.
