OWNERSHIP

Say bir, stormed Mrs. McShorter, "I'm tired of hearing you talk about 'my house,' and 'my son,' and 'my daughter.' It gets my goat."

The next morning McShorter rose in his usual rough frame of mind and spent some minutes rummaging about the room. Finally his wife turning over in bed yelled at him, "What are you looking for?"

"Our pants," answered McShorter sourly.

In the Early Days of Woodville's Dramatic Fields of Endeavor

Way back yonder—do you remember when certain live ones of Woodville attempted to put over an amateur, hometalent affair and failed because of improper coaching or for other reasons. In those days many were ludicrious shows put over as the best.

But the following play was not sidetracked because of any of the obstacles presented, but rather because of the lack of seats.

It appears some one would not allow a set of church benches, etc. to be moved into a hall or other suitable building for staging a several-act performance.

Of course, the play could not and did not proceed, but the following story—cast of characters, etc. was written on the night the show was to have been given—just for fun—on the spur of the moment—and one of the Woodville citizens read it, begged it and kept it.

For the first time in probably over 20 or more years this old manuscript has come to light and The Booster is publishing it this week. It will be interesting to get the reaction to this, and probably The Booster will get more of the details later.

Here it is.

And it came to pass in those days, that certain persons of the town of Woodville did gather themselves together and did form themselves into a club. And they said, let us appoint ourselves a committee who may make for us a programme, and let us have a a concert for the amusement of the people. And it pleased the club, even the members thereof, and they selected certain ones to act for them. Now the names of those who were selected are Clara, the daughter of Perry of the tribe of Nicks; Lulu, the daughter of Dallas, whose surname is Collier; Phobe the wife of Bronson, of the tribe of Cooper and Ernest, the son of William, the son of Josiah, of the house of Godbey.

And the committee did labor diligently day and night, and did select a drama, and did appoint the characters thereof, that the people might be entertained withal. And many adversities did the committee encounter, for many there were who could not perform the tasks to which they were appointed and the committe did go about the streets among the various tribes of the city and sought out certain ones who did agree to take part.

"And they gathered themselves, together with one accord in one place, and they did rehearse their several duties upon manifold occasions. And behold it was all very good.

Now the time drew nigh when the public should be made glad by the efforts of the club, even the members thereof. For the nineteenth day of the eighth month was the time appointed. And when the day was come, and it was necessary to transport to the place of meeting, even to the ancient temple of learning, the benches and seats whereon the people might rest, there were found none in all the land who would give their services, save James of the tribe of Hignet, and Julius, the son of Matthew, of the house of McAlister, and he who has written these chronicles.

"And these three did say one with another, 'Go to now, and let us secure seats from the temple occupied by our brethren, the Methodists.' And it was even so, and when they did try to secure the permission from the elders, and those in authority, how that they might secure the seats they were told by the elders that it could not be. For they said, are not these seats sanctified? And how then can we permit them to be removed hence? Verily, verily, we say unto you ye cannot occupy these seats.'

And it was even so. Now the three became discouraged, and said one with another, 'behold now, it has become too much sugar for a cent. Let us therefore drop it, even the play, and we will say unto the people how that we could not make a success of our undertakings, and they may perchance release us from our burden.' And it was even so.

And thus ended the drama which did so excite the minds of those concerned.

Would ye know more? Behold, if ye imagine of him who has thus chronicled, this event, ye can know all the particulars."

Woodville Locals

Mesdames P. H. Powell and J. E. Wheat were Beaumont shoppers Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kendall and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, drove to Lufkin Sunday. Miss Kendall is takin great pleasure in the flowering red bud and blooming fruit trees as this is her first opportunity to be at home in East Texas in the early spring.

Martin Anderson of Houston, crack salesman of Mergenthaler Linotype Corporation visited the Booster office Monday. Business is on the upgrade over the country according to Anderson, and people are casting aside the thoughts of depression which will do much to make way with these erroneous thoughts.

Mesdames Ben Ellen Perry and Ernest Wiggins of Beaumont were here last week.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF—

It was against the law to park a car on the Woodville main drag for over two hours unless it was hitched to a horse? Oh, yeah!

If you couldn't buy a bag of peanuts between the hours of sunset and sunrise—in Texas?

If you had all the joy taken out of life by a law which you couldn't disobey—that of firing off fire crackers or revolvers on Christmas time or at a wedding?

If it was contrary to law not to back out of a center parking and you got pinched for driving out ahead? Of course, there's no danger of anything like that happening here so why worry?

PREPARATIONS FOR INTER-SCHOLASTIC MEET THE 20TH

Plans are going forward for the county Interscholastic meet which will be held in Woodville on March 20 and 21st, 28th. The committee in charge has announced that Chester and Woodville will form the class A division in track and field events but that there will be no other class A divisions separate from the class B.

All of the contests will be just as they were last year except that junior tennis is a new division. If there are any schools that desire an interpretation of rules Gordon Bishop of Warren will be the man to see.

As director general of the Interscholastic meet Mr. Bishop will seek to settle any difficulties that may arise from the following out of the League rules, which will be carried out as far as possible.

Gordon Bishop and F. B. Sullivan, business manager, are working out the details of the places and time for all contests and also working up the financial situation.

About Now— Who They Are

Because of the excellent record he has established as the State's chief executive, Governor James V. Allred need have no worry over the opposition that is cropping up against him for the July Democratic primary. His vigor, astuteness, honesty and constructive program will assure his re-election, because Texans have accepted his administration of affairs with utter satisfaction.

Whatever may be the qualifications of the men who have announced as opponents to Allred, the voters are not going to be inclined to dispense with the services of so able an executive as the present governor.

There already are six men in the field against Allred. It is possible that some of these men are placing their names on the ballot for the sake of publicity. Certainly their psychology is not so defective as to cause anyone of them to believe he will be a formidable opponent to Allred, in the face of that young worthy's record.—Beaumont Journal, March 2, 1936.

Woodville Locals

Miss Doris Howell of Chester is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lena Hawkins in Beaumont.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Denmon of Chester are happy over the arrival of a baby daughter on Monday of last week.

Attorney C. E. Smith and John Reid were in Beaumont Friday and attended the Wood session of East Texas and West Louisiana. Dr. Charles Herty of Savannah, Ga., was the principal speaker of the opening session of this conference.

Because of illness in the Booster home, it has been impossible to get out and get the obituaries of those who passed on the past few weeks. Would appreciate it if the minitsers would send them in to the Booster. We notice by the Kountze locals that Early Williford of Hicks baugh was buried last week. We are sincerely sorry not to have the obituary or anyone in the county who passes on, but they are difficult to get unless we have some help from their community.

Judge and Mrs. R. A Shivers of Port Arthur and W. S. Shivers son and daughter of Saratoga visited Dr. J. F. Shivers recently. A host of friends are sincerely glad Dr. Shivers is able to sit up and seems to be well on the road to recovery.

Malcolm Barnes and Mrs. L. R Cade of Chester were in Woodville Sunday.

Company Air Man Scouting Here

To feel very familiar with the names, Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlain and others, but somehow they hardly seem real Monday, a car stopped at the Sinclair Service station and a number of questions were asked of Aubrey Swearingen and in exchanging names he, at first didn't realize that Chamberlain meant "The Chamberlain." Col. Chamberlain was here looking over landing fields. He had with him his co-pilot and wife. He is doing some scouting for the government and he himself is planning an air run from Port Arthur to Dallas, and is picking his route. He has two 9½ ton passenger planes that will each hold more than 20 passengers, and if Woodville can get in on this air route, it will mean much to this section of East Texas. When he left he stated that he would fly over some time late this week and if the wind was right would attempt a landing at the local airport.

Woodville Locals

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis, her brother, his niece and the new heir in the Davis household of Beaumont spent Saturday night with relatives in Rockland. Mrs. Davis visited Mrs. H. I. Rushing Sunday enroute home.

Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Owens and children of Beaumont visited relatives here and at Doucette Sunday.

Dr. J. C. Miller was carried to the St. Theresa hospital in Beaumont Tuesday, suffering with influenza. Grave fears are entertained that it would develop into pneumonia. Everyone is sincerely glad that Dr. J. F. Shivers is able to be up and out, and all hope he will not let his friends and patients force him to over exert himself and be forced to go to bed again.

Mrs. Louis Miller is seriously ill this week with pneumonia. Her sister and brother, Mrs. Lee Hudson and Mr. and Mrs. Stratton Riley came up Sunday to help care for her.

Mrs. Nettie Walker enjoyed a few hours visit from her son and family of Lufkin early last week. Friends are sincerely glad to see Essie Walker able to be back on the job in the tax collector's office.

One of these bills was a farm relief bill which passed the House by more than two-thirds majority, and which would have given the farmers 16 cents a pound for their cotton. Two of the bills related to immigration and deportation, and the other bill was the present silver law under which the government will eventually put into circulation nearly $3,000,000,000 of new money.

Mr. Dies has been particularly active in stopping immigration, and since he took office one million aliens have been kept out of this country.

Mr. Dies voted in favor of the Bankhead Act, the AAA, and the amendment to the AAA, but he sought to amend the farm program so as to give each cotton farmer a minimum allotment of at least four bales to be taken from the large allotments given to plantation owners and corporation farms in other parts of the country.

After the NRA was held unconstitutional, Mr. Dies proposed the same late for the AAA, and now a new farm plan based upon soil conservation, with provisions to take care of the small farmer.

Since Mr. Dies has been in Congress, the House has passed over a great deal of legislation during the time that Congress was adjourned. Dies made a trip to Washington at his own expense in behalf of flood works projects for his district. If you are one of those who depend on good luck charms and the like to pull you through you had better get out your favorite rabbit's foot or something and dust it off for the second Friday in March is the 13th. And so is the second Friday in November. Either of those hoodoos is enough to scare off the ordinary believer in superstition and their conjunction is likely to jar their eyeteeth but when it occurs twice in the same year, well—anything might happen. However many refuse to be unduly alarmed. In fact some Republicans believe it is a sign that things are coming their way again. ONCE MORE The Booster is constrained to publish: Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.—Exodus 20:16.

LAST THURSDAY was mothers-in-law day and no festivities were observed in any of the daily papers. Perhaps we did not peruse the right papers.

WE CAUGHT up with R. A. Cruse one day this week and found him still doing business at the old stand, and when interrogated, replied, "business is getting better."

THESE SPRING days, they are about to get the Booster agime. In fact, nothing could be finer, also. And we could sit down and stay there the balance of the day—easily—and rest at all, and commence work immediately after breakfast.

YOU CAN'T keep Uncle James down to these newspaper alphabetical days of ten days long. We noticed in the Sunday papers that even the grandstands at base-ball farms were thronged on the sport holiday—let's see upon which bush does base-ball thrive and grow?

ALL RIGHT All right. Gov. Allred says he has no special session of the legislature in sight. Who'd thought it? And you, Uncle Doug and Lady Astor, rejoiced. Anyway, Doug says, Americans a lot of nice things announced he was for the open in China and say large in China.

IN THE meantime, of course all this week there will be found the political announcement for re-election of Representative Martin Dies, and there will be found his views which will be of interest to all. Also John Redditt comes out this week and tells the world he is making the race for re-election as State Senator on the merits of his record. Redditt will, without doubt, be returned by a great popular vote. Up to now he has no opponent.

ABOUT NOW how would you like to be an office holder in most any building in New York—say on the 13th or 33rd floor—and have to walk up to your work because of the elevator-building help strike. After all, living in so-called tank villages has its advantages, and one can conduct the business on the ground floor. Oh, yes, in case of fire, too, it's handy. Just step out the back door or jump out through the window. Window? Sure, Mike! But did you ever contemplate jumping out a window up on the 33rd floor or sixth floor, either, for that matter?

that the Chevrolet or International truck? I don't know, but I rather imagine it gets here sometime about 4:13." Well, I patronize the railways and so know nothing of the trucks, and anyway I have no idea how long it takes a truck to get here. Isn't this interesting. Get out on the highway and try and pass one of these conveyances. You've got to do from 60 to 68 per to get past it. Indeed, you are allowed to pass at all. own affairs. You and Mr. Ramill take hold of that nearest unborn leg and start quietly. Don't hurry and don't run."

The soothing tones of Garth's tone compelled belief and obedience even from Hurby. Mr. Ramill was already reeving up for one of the two moose legs that had not been pulled down by the wolves. The engineer hastily turned to help him. As they started off, Garth took the other unmangled leg on his shoulder and sauntered after them.

Garth's gray eyes twinkled as he glanced back over his shoulder at the huge beast. He could not have asked for a better situation to make his companions forget—for out of her sight, he knew the love-in-bait and set the wolves to fighting. Maybe at once started to curse him for not shooting.

"Go tell it you're a coward," he replied, and when Hurby drew away from the others with his wadded apparel, "You are wise not to go back if she starts in with you."

Spurred on by doubt by the knowledge of that same monster in mind him, Mr. Ramill managed to hold up his end of the burden all the way to camp. There he sank down panting and watching Hurby the exercise had killed him.

His daughter sat by the breathing. Having covered her bath in the warm water she had to dry by fire. Finding the fitting for drip and tobacco she had done with stitching on the moccasins for she wanted to entertain whatever Hurby had planned for the evening. Her father, however, was in no condition to be entertained. He was sitting with his back to the fire, his head between his knees, and his wife was trying to revive him with a cup of tea.

Garth was still by the wolves, taking pelts off the legs. When he came in with the pelts and the meat, Hurby and his wife were gone. Mr. Ramill was sitting on a log, his head in his hands, groaning. He looked up as Garth came in and groaned more loudly.

BIRTHDAY REUNION

On Sunday, March 1, more than 100 relatives and friends of Mrs. Texas Shepherd helped her celebrate her 52nd birthday with a big picnic dinner, six miles east of Woodville on the Jasper road. Dishes were unloaded and a sumptuous dinner was spread. Among those from a distance were Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Ogden and Dr. Mallett of Jasper.

...Woodville high school. During the first year in C. A. she took her stand for Christianity and became a member of the Baptist church. On October 17, 1930, she married Carlton Young, only so not Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Young. At this time Mr. Young was manager of the Tyler County Drug Company. In April, 1933, Mr. and Mrs. Young established the Youngs Pharmacy, and these two splendid young people worked hard and had a bright future. Early last week, suffering from influenza, Mrs. Young developed pneumonia and passed away Saturday night. It was a terrible shock to her loved ones and the whole country, for she had taught school in Rockland, Egypt and Stowell in this county, the two years after returning from C. T. A. and her pupils had learned to love her. Her three years in the business world had made her many friends and hundreds of people gathered at the Lowe home Monday afternoon to attend the funeral. Her neighbor and friend, Miss Versie Nowlin, who had known and loved her since her birth, Rev. Jef Rhodes brought words of comfort and love to the heartbroken family and friends. Interment was in Magnolia cemetery with Ed Richardson, Harvey and Bob Phillips, Frank and Wood Fain, John Hunter, J. J. Allison Jr. and Geo. Best, friends of high school days acting as pall bearers. Relatives from a distance were the grandmother and grandfather, Mrs. W. C. Morris of Rockland, and John Lowe of Chester, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Rawls and two children of Jacksonville, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Jones and son of Rosenburg, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Nelson and son of Austin. It was impossible to get all from out of town, but among those were Mrs. E. A. McAlister of Beaumont, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Prafka of Port Arthur, Mrs. Perry of Voth, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lazenby and Mr. and Mrs. Austin Ogden of Town Bluff, Mrs. U. G. Feagin, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Feagin and Mr. and Mrs. Buck Veal of Chester, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Best of Colmesneil, Mrs. Kitty Wallace and a number of others from Rockland, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Young of Hillister, Mesdames Stinwell and McCammon of Chester, J. F. Dean, J. Loyd Smith and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jones of Beaumont. Deep sympathy is felt for Judge and Mrs. Lynch in their heartbroken husband and her sister, Miss Anna Frances Lowe.

...Dippy fought along an entirely different line. He starved the spider out.

Laying seige to the spider stronghold by establishing his headquarters right at the brink of the spider's fort, and carefully snatching up any gnat, fly or insect that ordinarily would have gone into the spider's trap, Dippy drove the spider to distraction and ignominous flight.

Dippy now reigns supreme. He is a strange combination of pet, pleasure and nuisance around the Singer homestead.

The humming bird came into the Singer home by chance. One cold day George Singer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Singer, was walking through the garage and noticed the tiny bird sitting half frozen on a wire. He picked the bird up and brought it into the house. The bird was thawed out and fed some sweetened water and soon began to show his appreciation by buzzing about the house. With return of sunshine Dippy, as the two little Singer girls, Virginia and Betty named him, was given the privilege of leaving.

But Dippy decided not to leave. He enjoyed the sweetened water which he licked from between two toothpicks, and he found the Singer home was a rich and unexplored treasure trove of tiny bits of food which came in through the screens, or got into the home in some other way.

And he also found the big spider in the corner. Dippy made ...from the initial feed and left in fort to Dippy.

Dippy is now quite tame, is temperamental and even sulky at times. As long as there is a light on, Dippy will remain awake.

And when the family plays bridge he frequently takes a hand. He will fly down and suspend himself between the nose of a bridge player and the player's cards. Playing them "close to your chest" doesn't mean anything to Dippy, for he can get right up against one's nose and suspend there.

At such times the only way to get him out of the picture is to feed him. So the Singers and their guests at bridge keep some sweetened water about and feed the little jobitzer every time he feels frivolous or shows a desire to take part in the play.—Sunday Houston Chronicle.
