Magic Water Fountain in Department Store

A mysterious drinking water fountain that hospitably begins spouting a cold stream of water as the thirsty patron leans forward is a part of the modern treatment on E. M. Kahn & Company's Dallas department store.
 The fountain, readers of popular science magazines soon learn, is the use of a photoelectric cell or magic eye. The fountain is located in a corner near the center of the store. Hidden in the two walls behind the fountain is a light which emits an invisible ray of light that just over the fountain and strike a photoelectric cell on the opposite side. The stopping drinker breaks the beam, an electric impulse is interrupted and magnet turn on the fountain. As soon as the drinker straightens up the fountain is shut off.
 This is said to be the first installation of its kind in the Southwest and is a recent engineering development. Dallas News.
