

Emergency Crop and Feed Loans

Emergency crop and feed loans for 1938 are now being made by county agents of the Farm Credit Administration. The loans will be made, as in the past, only to farmers who cannot obtain credit from any other source. The money loaned will be limited to the farmer's immediate and actual cash needs for growing his 1938 crops or for the purchase of feed for livestock, and the amount which may be loaned to any one farmer in 1938 may not exceed $400. Farmers who can obtain the funds they need from individual production credit associations, bank or other sources are not eligible for crop and feed loans from the Emergency Loan section of the F. C. A. The loans will not be made to standard rehabilitation clients whose current needs are provided for by the Farm Security Administration, formerly known as the Resettlement Administration.

As in the past, farmers who obtain emergency crop and feed loans will give as security a first lien on the crop financed or a first lien on the livestock to be fed. The money is to be used to produce or purchase feed for live stock. Where the loans are made to tenants, the landlords, or others having an interest in the crops financed or the livestock to be fed, are required to waive their claims in favor of a lien to the governor of the Farm Credit Administration until the loan is repaid. Checks in payment of approved loans will be mailed from the Regional emergency crop and feed loan office at Dallas, Tex.

Rev. J. C. Boyd In Car Wreck

Rev. J. C. Boyd, enroute to his mother, some ten days ago, ran into a truck which was without a tail light and tore off the whole side of his car. It was raining hard and Mr. Boyd had turned back to Grandview, as it seemed to him to be the best place to stop. The engine missed but the right hand door and seat were mashed into the back of the car which was also caved in. He went into town with his car, but was badly shaken and disgusted. However he is thankful no one was with him. All are sincerely glad he was not injured.

National Used Car Exchange Week

A national drive to sweep American industry out of the recent recession and stimulate the American automobile industry was announced one day last week by Albin Macaulay, speaking for every American automobile manufacturer and the nation's 44,000 dealers.

The campaign, to be known as "National Used Car Exchange Week" and scheduled for March 5 to 12, is an outgrowth of recent conferences at the White House between Pres. Roosevelt and leaders of the automobile industry. The president has been advised of plans for the campaign, which is the first co-operative effort ever undertaken in which all American automobile manufacturers have taken part.

The campaign is timed at the outset of the spring selling season when both new and used cars usually begin to move in great

CLAUDE H. CASKEY ANNOUNCES FOR REPRESENTATIVE

Claude H. Caskey, of Chester, in this week, announcing his candidacy for Representative of the 12th district, including Tyler and Angelina counties, Mrs. Caskey was born in South Eastern Kentucky 42 years ago. He has been a citizen of this area for the past 12 years, part of which time he resided in Lufkin and part in Corrigan, while the past three years he has lived at Chester. After finishing high school Mr. Caskey studied law a few years, but upon being offered a good job just at the time funds were very low, he gave up formal studies and entered more seriously upon the great schooling of life. Due to his extensive experience

After the completion of study at my hands and having given the matter your consideration, I desire to use this means of announcing my candidacy for the office of Commissioner of Precinct No. 3, Tyler County, Texas, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary in July. It is not my intention to make any promises which I do not feel that I can fulfill. However, I do desire to state that it is my intention to devote to the duties of this office, trying aside all personal business that might in any way interfere. I will gladly and sincerely appreciate your favorable consideration.

QUESTIONS

Do you believe a politician who has a record for bigotry and intolerance will make an excellent judge, because he will reform after he gets on the bench? Don't you believe the foregoing query is related to the little affair of the girl who married a radical, believing she could reform him in the years to come? Were our ancestors socially conscious, while other people's ancestors believed in merciless competition? What do you think of the English (gentleman) who exclaimed: "To Hell with America?" He said: "You can have your Parliament, and too, you can have your Brain Trust, James A. Farley, and (The Greatest Document on Earth), we'll be satisfied with our No. 10 Downing Street and muddle along with actual law and order." Say, you, what do you think of the Johnny Bull subject?

The most popular... in the history of... were employed by Lewis L. Hester... the Beaumont field office of the Social Security Board... pointed out the three musts necessary in determining eligibility for Federal old-age insurance: 1. You must have worked 40-65 weeks for the Federal Government or a covered employer; 2. The worker must have been employed and paid into a covered system; 3. Claims for benefits must be filed with one of the offices of the Social Security Administration. Rupert also explained that the amount of a lump-sum payment is 94% of wages when covered employment was in December 31, 1936.

If individuals will keep in mind the three musts as given above, it will prove of much benefit to those who may be considering the filing of a claim for lump-sum benefits. Inquiries may be sent during January, and $31.68.

The Beaumont Social Security Board office is located at 330 Federal Bldg., where complete information and cooperation in all matters pertaining to Federal old-age insurance are given, reports Mr. Rupert.

CHRISTINE WHITING PARMENTER

WVU SERVICE

Washed looking his head against the blinding glare of headlights as a big car moved slowly across the bridge. Not until later did he recall the fact that as those powerful lights picked him out of the darkness, the car had wavered a moment, almost stopped, before it went on into the night.

A week dragged by, one of those hot weeks that sap the energy. Nora wilted, and with a slight compassionately, Don, engaged to spend those eternally long-in-the-spread-of-a-busy-man. How she asked herself, could he ever stick it out until October? And if he didn't...

"Look here, have you heard something about Don?"

fan. He said, smiling an apology: "It's so blamed hot down town I couldn't stand it. Don't think I've ever known it so warm this time of year. What do you say to getting into the country earlier than usual, my dear? You look—"

"Don't say how I look!" begged Nora, slumping down limply beside the fan. "I'm hoping there was something wrong with the hall mirror! Such early heat is downright wicked, isn't it? I—I'm not going to the country, Father."

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, his amazement James was obvious of a bead of perspiration that trickled persistently down his nose.

"I'm staying here, that's all," asserted Leonard. "Ned and his family will be only too glad to keep you company. It will save them money. That always appeals to Ned, you know, and Corinne will be spared the bother of opening her own big house, something she grumbles about for weeks beforehand. Or if this plan doesn't work out, Aunt Jean would stay with you. Perhaps you'd like that better anyway."

"Ned is getting to be a pest. A boy needs some good old-fashioned chores, if you ask me."

"What do you know about chores?" chucked her father, then dead, before the girl could answer. "You can't stay here, child."

"Why not? The house is always clean."

"You'd suffocate, Nora."

"And what about Don, with no place but a boarding house bedroom or a park bench to spend his evenings? He's enduring a lot for me, Daddy. If I can't hang around and drive him out into the country after his work's done, I—I'm a slacker."

Her father considered this in silence, pondering on the miracle of what love does to one. He had sometimes thought Nora a bit headless of other people, partly because most of her own desires had been gratified so easily; yet she was deliberately contemplating a summer in the city just to make life pleasant for that young man. It was, he reflected, immensely surprising.

"Will Don let you do it?"

"He's not to be consulted. Of course he'll protest when he finds Dad; but you know how stubborn I can be!"

"Don," smiled James. "Ring for old drink, Nora. You look apologetic. I can't say I like this plan yours, my dear; but I suppose I'll honor us for the week-end."

"Does that invitation include Don?"

"Does it? I can get you no other than what Father confessed with me. Don't you realize, daughter, I'm likely to miss you?"

Nora was touched. She said, gazing at her father, "That's nice of you, Dad, especially when I'm driving you home."

cially when I'm driving you home. "To take you if it weren't so blazing hot."

"Don't!" James protested. "Human contact a day like this would be unbearable."

Yet the truth was, he would have welcomed her kiss with pleasure because he felt that they were friends again. The knowledge comforted him greatly. Despite the heat and Nora's question about the summer, James felt more light-hearted than he had for weeks. Even some guarded questions put by Ned that night, questions as to where Don-Mason spent his time about the summer, with Nora, failed to disturb him.

"You'll have trouble pinning any damaging conduct on that young man, Ned. He's not our sort of course; but there's nothing wrong with him. I'm sure of that."

"What makes you so sure, Father?"

"Partly things he's told me himself—things about his life, you know; and partly from observation. Did you spend every evening with Corinne the year you were engaged, Ned?"

"No, but—"

"Look here," broke in the older man, "have you heard something about Don—something unsavory?"

Ned admitted he hadn't; and, declining there would be no "spicing" in words his father, dropped the subject, to James' evident relief. In fact, James Lambert went to bed in an uncommonly agreeable frame of mind. Things seemed to be working out all right. The knowledge that Don had dined not once, but several times with a world-famous Arctic explorer, had made an impression; and several people had spoken warmly about the fellow. Folks liked him, apparently. And he was doing well enough in the office. Not so Nora. To save Don the trip across town by trolley she had driven out and picked him up at his boarding place. He was waiting for her on the steps in white trousers and blue coat—the correct picture of a handsome young man, appropriately attired for a hot evening; but one glance told the astute Nora that something was wrong. She said, returning his somewhat sinister smile of greeting, "Hop in, Don; but slip your coat off first. No reason for being more uncomfortable than necessary."

"Oh, may I?"

At his tone, Nora threw a covert glance in Don's direction. On edge she decided, and answered tactfully: "Of course you may. Toss it in back. You can take off your necktie too, for all of me."

His face softened. Save for that one warm smile it had been grim before.

"You're a good scout, Nora. I'll take advantage of that offer after it gets dark."

The girl smiled as they started, a smile of understanding blent with amusement.

"You were so formally correct! Oh, may I? Did you by any chance mistake me for Emily Post, Don?"

Don really smiled.

"I'm afraid I don't know what the lady looks like. My formality was the result of an ugly disposition, I suppose. You looked so cool and comfortable and sleeveless, darling. It made me resentful. I've been so damnably hot all day. Will you forgive me?"

One soft hand left the wheel, touching his a moment. Then she said briskly:

"Remove that tie and unfasten your collar too, Don. Now slump down comfortably and forget your manners. Who cares for appearances after a day like this? Once we get far enough from these hot pavements you'll revive. Don't try to talk if your head has gone on strike. Just rest. I'm sorry, dear."

Don obeyed, grateful for silence, the healing cool of evening, and Nora's nearness. The city was left behind after a while. The silence deepened. Dusk drifted into dark while somewhere high, high above, them a star was born—another—and still more until at last myriads of tiny lights spangled the sky. Don thought: "If I could get the feeling that I'm only a part of this immensity—that my own small troubles don't really matter... Or if my head would stop this confounded throbbing..."

He said, after more miles had slipped away, speaking so suddenly that the girl started: "Nora, what makes me different from other people?"

"She stopped the car, and turning, faced him in the starlight."
