Project Discussed

Plans for the fall program of WPA recreational project for Tyler county were made Wednesday at the meeting of the county workers with Miss Carrie E. Lehmann of Marshall, district WPA recreational supervisor. J. H. Kenness, Jr., is in charge of the project which has been underway since the first of July. Some 160 children have participated in the program, and the supervisors hope to enlarge the work to include all school children and many adults in the fall and winter months.

Woodville Locals

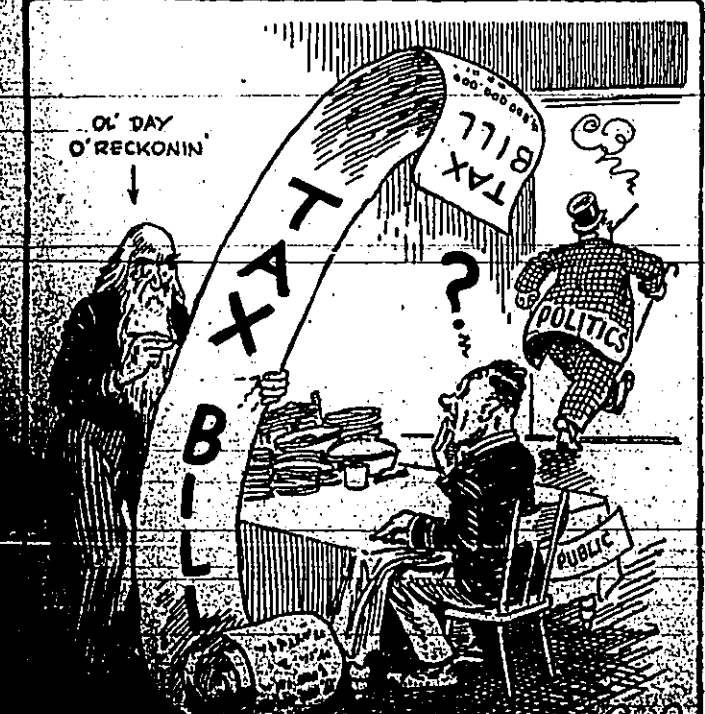

Friends will be glad that Miss Kathryn Fuller with friends spent her vacation the past two weeks on a motor trip to Mexico City. Mrs. Clyde Phillips and son enjoyed Sunday in Camden with Mrs. Lee Phillips.

Mrs. S. L. Rainey with Mrs. J. A. Williams and son Truett made a trip to Houston Tuesday. Mrs. Robert Tolat is spending this week end in Beaumont. Aubrey Grimes, Robert Sutton, James Edward Wheat, J. D. Brown and Robert Walton, all left the past week end to enter State U in Austin.

Mrs. Claud Deen of Houston were greeting friends here Saturday. Mrs. P. H. Powell and son Paul, Jr., left Thursday for Austin where Paul entered State U. Mrs. Robert Stayed over the week end.

Fred Warner and Mrs. T. P. Glenn visited relatives in White City Sunday. Mrs. Burris of Beaumont stopped enroute to a lumberman's meeting in Lufkin Saturday and Sunday. Misses Hallie Wilcox and Elizabeth Coleman went on with them for a day with home folks.

THE BAD NEWS

Eleven Counties of Southeast Texas

The government has stretched out another helping hand to the farmer. Victor M. Dziewas, director of the Texas relief commission, announced Saturday that beginning Sept. 8, all farmers whose net income above living expenses is under $312 will be eligible for WPA work during seasonal lay-by periods. Heretofore the farming class has been ineligible except in cases of extreme emergency, for WPA work. Now all farmers who are not active clients of the FSA, who are unemployed at the present and whose crop for the last year did not exceed $312 in net income, will be given referrals to the WPA for work by the TRC.

Purpose of the new ruling is to provide a cash income for the farming group, Dziewas said. Though unable to estimate the approximate number of farmers in his district who will benefit from the provision, he stated that his office has handled innumerable requests from farmers for help in the past.

Teachers in Beaumont Meet

Friday night the agricultural teachers from 30 towns in the Beaumont area met at the Edison hotel, Beaumont, to make plans for exhibits in the South Texas State Fair to be held Nov. 3 to 13th. Henry Ross of A&M and R. A. (Pat) Shaw of Nacogdoches area superintendents will be present to aid in making important decisions regarding the exhibits. Those from this county who will attend are H. C. Ellis of Chester, G. D. Stone of Colmesneil, J. W. Knight of Spurger and O. L. Ryall of Warren and P. B. Sullivan of Woodville.

S. P. Sims, Jr., has returned to College Station to attend A&M again this year. Earl Gardner and son Earl, Jr., flew to Tyler Saturday returning Sunday. Friends are congratulating Crockett last week and her sis. Mrs. E. W. Tubb has been enjoying a visit from Mrs. Mattie Buckner of Miami, Fla. Those who attended the Highway banquet in Beaumont were Judge M. C. Tatum, resident engineer, Charlie Davidson, Commissioner, Lou Cruise, Judge J. E. Wheat, and P. H. Powell.

Rodeo or Ro-day-o in Lufkin Oct. 11-15

Webster's Dictionary defines Rodeo as a "round-up" and gives the pronunciation as Ro-Day-o, accent on the second syllable. Rodeo is the Mexican word for roundup. At these roundups, cowgirls and cowboys, eager to display their skill, contested in riding and roping. Such contests grew in popularity, and in 1898 the city folks of Denver were treated to their first Rodeo. From then to the present day, Rodeos have grown in popularity to such a degree that we find it one of America's outstanding athletic contests.

In Rodeo, you never witness the same performance the second time. When these wild bulls and outlaw broncs, in all their untamed fury, catapult out of the chute, they come out with a new trick each time. The cowboy is held in check by certain defined humane rules, but the wild beast is free to use everything known to his untamed nature, to outdo, mangle or kill that yelling clinging thing astride his back. The thrills nerve-tingling excitement and danger, find no other parallel in sports of today.

Rodeo comes to you in this modern, rubber-tired era, bringing with it a touch of the old west in all its glory, brings to mind the sound of the old chuck wagon, with rattle of chains and clucking of wheels; the drawing command of gun-toting drivers; clanging of frying pan and pots; a glimpse of an open fire, eyes filled with pungent smoke from buffalo chips, all glorified with air-filled aroma and fragrance from steaming coffee and trying saw-belly.

WOODVILLE - CORRIGAN FOOTBALL GAME HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Are you planning on being at the first football game of the season Friday night at the Woodville athletic field when we mix with the Corrigan team? This aggregation of ball tossers was skinned at Livingston last week by a score of 41-0.

Mrs. Esca Walker and children with Gordon Anderson drove to Barbers Hill to spend Sunday with the sister, Mrs. F. B. Crumpler. Mrs. Anderson and baby who were there for a visit returned home with them.

Chicago Boy First Football Fatality

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Ralph Cowgill, 17, an end on the Highland Park High School football team, died Wednesday night a few hours after he was injured in a scrimmage. It was the first football fatality of the season in the Chicago area. The team was practicing for its opening game Saturday. Cowgill, charging into several opponents, struck his head against a player's back. Dr. J. H. Lundstrom said the youth suffered a skull fracture.

Back to School on a Bus

Throughout America this week youngsters will retrace their steps to the school room to begin another year's study. Some walk, others ride, but none of the riders have a more unique system than the students of North Carolina where a state-operated bus system is handled largely by the students themselves. About 80 per cent of the bus drivers are of school age, and was to the motorist who considers them lightly. Drivers appoint monitors, fellow bus riders who stop traffic while youngsters cross the street.

Woodville Locals

O. U. Woodard, Jr., has entered Marshall college and two of last year graduates also are attending here. Autrey Maddox and Carol Davis. Bobbie Washburn has returned to L. S. U. in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

Woodville friends are sincerely glad to know Mrs. W. H. Gilchrist is able to be out and again enjoy life. Mrs. L. R. Cade of Chester is very ill, with influenza and pneumonia. Friends and loved ones are very much concerned over her condition. It is hoped she will overcome this terrible illness and soon be able to take up life's duties.

Time Turns Back

Clocks will be turned back one hour Sunday, Sep. 23 throughout a large portion of the U. S. as daylight saving time was concluded for 1938. An employee at New York's municipal building is here shown as he is preparing to turn the tables on Father Time.

Ambulance For Tardy Lufkin Lions

Lufkin's Lions Club members believe in "getting truant" members to weekly meetings on time. This week an ambulance was employed in rounding up two members who had indicated they might be tardy or absent. With siren crying, the ambulance rolled up before establishments where the truants were employed. They were thrown upon the stretchers and whisked to the meeting on time.

Annual Chester Community Fair

Only two more weeks left and the Chester Community will again open its doors for the general public to look in on one of the greatest community fairs in all the state. This isn't boasting at all, but simply a statement of a positive fact.

Woodville Locals

Chalmers Dismukes of Corpus Christi is visiting his sister, Miss Aileta, this week. A memorial service was observed Friday night at the Eastern Star for Mrs. Robt. Potter, a past Worthy Grand Matron. Two candidates were initiated and a social hour followed. Aniced drink, sandwiches and cake were served by Mesdames Watt Barclay and Frank Fain the night's hostesses.

Woodville Locals

Mrs. W. A. Johnson has not been well and her children who visited her Sunday were Mrs. Earl Fraika of Port Arthur, Miss Nannie Johnson of Beaumont, Mrs. Frank Griffin of Nederland, Clyde Johnson of Port Neches, Mrs. Robert May of Nederland were also here.

Woodville Locals

Mrs. Glen Clow returned from Crockett last week and her sister, Mrs. J. R. Swanson and small son, accompanied her. Early this week Mr. Clow arrived from Oklahoma for the week. He has purchased a business in Pryor, Okla., and they will make their home there, although Mrs. Clow expects to spend a few weeks here before returning home.

Woodville Locals

Charley Eaves who has had a position in Port Arthur for more than a year, stopped here for a short visit this week enroute to Marshall to enter Marshall college.

Johnie Hickman and Billy Mae Pennington were home from Marshall college for the week. H. C. Ellis of Chester is a busy man these days. Plans being worked out for the Chester fair which is to be held the first week in October. He was in Woodville and Warren Tuesday.

First PTA Meet of 1938 Season

Nearly a hundred interested citizens and teachers met at the gym Thursday night for the first meeting of the PTA. The president, Mrs. Forest Pate, opened the session and called upon Rev. Tom Minyard of Beaumont to lead in prayer.

Rockland Dam Eternal

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—The Rockland dam in Iowa, which has been under construction for 15 years, is now being completed. The dam is 1,000 feet long and 100 feet high. It will cost $5,000,000. The dam will be completed in 1940. The dam will be the largest dam in the world. The dam will be the largest dam in the world.

Woodville Locals

Mrs. Lydia Willford with Mrs. H. G. Hodnett visited the latter's daughter and family in Port Arthur over the week end.

Woodville Locals

Mrs. J. D. Risinger has been visiting Mrs. C. V. Selman in Orange. Thursday they with Mrs. Landon Risinger and mother, Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Dan Rawls visited Mrs. Bob Risinger in Sour Lake.

Woodville Locals

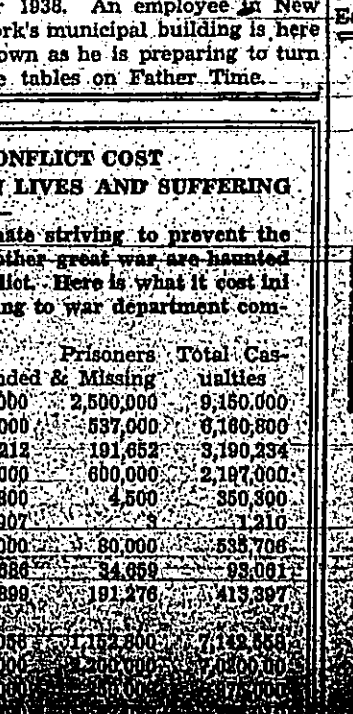

Mrs. Miles Jordan has returned from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Charlie Ford in Dayton.

Griffith-Stapp

Friends are extending best wishes for the future to Mrs. Robert Stapp who were married Saturday afternoon in the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Denney. The bride is the former Mrs. Lanelle Griffith, daughter of Mrs. D. T. Diggins of Centralia, La., and a niece of Mrs. D. C. Bracken. She has made many friends during her few months in Woodville. Mr. Stapp is one of the Woodville school faculty and was also here last year. He is the son of Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Stapp, missionaries in Campina Grande, Parahyba, Brazil.

The Booster with all other friends wish the very best life has to offer for these splendid Christian young people. They are at home to friends in the Eaves apartments.

STRAIT GATE

by Ruth Comfort Mitchell

Now she knew exactly what would happen. The ripcord would release the pack and the spring tips of the little pilot chute would open instantly, catching the air and dragging the main chute out into a long line and the wind would rush by at the bottom and expand it. It simply couldn't fail: Gunnar and Conrad and Vance Le Roy had checked it thoroughly. "And even if it doesn't work," she told herself sensibly, "there is the emergency chute! I'm not rattled," she rejoiced. "My mind is running like a clock. And Gunnar kissed me like a white as a sheet and scared to death about me, and he kissed me! And it was the kind of kiss—"

There was a weird noise which was something between a whistle and a shriek: something was fluttering overhead, and then snapping, loudly, urgently.

"It's opening!"

Her chute went off somewhere, a shocking, thunderous boom, and her downward progress was halted so abruptly that she thought her arms and shoulders were being torn loose from her body. There were uncounted instants of confusion and terror, and then peace enveloped her.

Her chute opened and was functioning perfectly, she was floating gently, and everything was quiet about her, a sweet, celestial quietness which was soothing and comforting.

She could see the ambulance moving slowly to keep in line with her. She had lost the Hermod for the moment, but surely Gunnar would land as quickly as possible and come to her. "Now we'll just wait for the Hermod," she thought. "Where is Gunnar?" Sarah Lynn demanded.

"Old Pete from the airport was sweating like a pig and happily, paying her high praise with picturesque embellishments.

"Hold still," Conrad Jordan had taken out his handkerchief and was wiping her on the white linen.

"What's that from?" she asked impatiently. "I'm not hurt."

"Of course you're not, just a scratch or two when you were dragged."

"Where's Gunnar?"

"He'll be here just as quick as he can set the ship down," her uncle's friend said. "Now we'll just get aboard and let them run us back to Lynn and the old lady."

"He was steering her toward the ambulance."

"I'm not hurt. I'm not going to ride in that thing!" she told him spitefully. "Where will he come down?"

"Quickest way to get there," he said, taking her arm in a firm grip. "We'll all go in. Half a mile away!" He lifted her and set her inside and a white-suited orderly grinned and congratulated her.

"I want Gunnar," Sarah Lynn said.

"He'll be here in a jiffy, Lynn and your Granny need to see you before they're convinced you're safe though we signaled them. Well, did it all come off according to schedule? Did it follow the pattern?"

"Oh, perfectly! It was heavenly after the chute opened," she answered, stooping to look out of the ambulance window. "I don't see the Hermod."

"But you can hear him? Right over us," Vance Le Roy said.

"The matron and the cripple and the old governess greeted her in character. The ancient woman saw in her the reincarnation of her own dim, daring youth, choosing, as she had done, the brightest future of her period, and the paralytic sublimated his own helplessness in her courage and skill.

"I told 'em it was all plumb fool-shness, tagging you round with that hospital wagon. Sairy Lynn," her great-grandmother said. "I said you'd come down like a leaf off a tree. 'En Dana was most generally do what we set our minds to! Leastways, us dark ones."

Lynn Dana smiled into her eyes. "I'm glad for you," he told her, "and proud. You've given me my best moment, Sarah Lynn."

Miss Fennington's high color was red, but her diction was as crisp

as always. "Let me tidy your hair a bit, she bustled up to her. 'I should have thought to have you wear a close net.'"

The girl slipped out from under her hands. The Hermod was down and Gunnar Thorwald was out and running toward her. She went to meet him.

"I'll know as soon as I see his face," she told herself. "I'll know the first second—"

Gunnar was still white, but she saw at first glance that he was angry, and her heart turned over in her chest. There was in his pale face a look of fright and of fury. She did not know what it meant.

Then he reached her, and she knew immediately and entirely what it meant, for he caught her into an embrace of urgency and iron and bent his bare yellow head and kissed her again, and the sides on the earth differed only from the one at an altitude of three thousand feet in facility and duration.

Sarah Lynn was held in a vise; she could not move her body or her lips, but her mind ran and leapt and soared.

"He does care! He cares—and he's furious—but he can't help it!"

Suddenly his arms loosened about her and he held her off, putting her thoughts into words.

"I have not wanted this," he frowned—in grave anger. "It is not my wish, my plan, Freedom I like. But—" he looked young, bewildered, aghast, and on his pale face were scarlet flecks from the still bleeding scratches on her own.

Sarah Lynn tugged at her handkerchief and pulled it out of her pocket. She was smiling, and she felt very gentle. "There is blood on your face," she said tenderly.

"Your blood!" he said sternly. "It is your blood upon me."

Sarah Lynn stood on tip-toe and wiped the little red smears away as handily as a mother would have done.

"I must love you!" she told him. "You could not know. I did not know until the moment when you would make the jump."

"That's what I meant. When you kissed me. It was different from any other kiss I ever—"

He said quickly, sharply—"You have, then, the so great knowledge of kissing? Who has instructed? Who—"

Conrad Jordan was calling them, walking toward them.

"Gunnar," he said casually, "Le Roy will drop the Hermod back to the field for you. We're all hunching with the old lady, and she is eager to get started. Mind driving my car? Lynn asked me to ride with him."

"Wait!" the youth said imperatively. "A thing has happened—"

"Well, I should say so!" Jordan agreed sensibly. "Miss Sarah Lynn Dana, daring young aviatrix, completed a sensational parachute jump with all the nerve and skill of a professional."

But the Norseman was not to be deflected. "Always I have said girls shall not marry," he looked at Sarah Lynn again with grave resentment, sighed, lifted his hands, palms upward, let them drop. "I make now the discovery that I love this girl."

"I think," Sarah Lynn murmured with a sudden accession of shyness, "ought to ride back with Great-Grandmother!" She ran away swiftly to the car.

CHAPTER X

Gunnar stood still in a clump of madrognas when he and Sarah Lynn were out walking after lunch.

"Now we talk," he announced stiffly.

Sarah Lynn halted before him, standing with folded hands.

"I love you," she said. "I love you, I love you. Love, I said always, was a weakness."

"I know," she nodded meekly. "Freedom I wanted; freedom like birds in the air." He seemed to be accusing her of having ruined his plan.

"I'm sorry," Sarah Lynn said. "I mean, I'm sorry you're so furious about it—and so miserable, but after all—" she tried to sound reasonable and detached—"birds do come down sometimes, don't they, and build nests and—"

He shrugged his lean shoulders. His mouth looked better, baffled.

"Everything blocking the way, I have conquered. Now this conquers me. I know it. Never can I lose you. If I fly across the ocean, still you are there. My life breaks in pieces. What now can I do?"

Then he reached her, and she knew immediately and entirely what it meant, for he caught her into an embrace of urgency and iron and bent his bare yellow head and kissed her again, and the sides on the earth differed only from the one at an altitude of three thousand feet in facility and duration.

"Gunnar," he said casually, "Le Roy will drop the Hermod back to the field for you. We're all hunching with the old lady, and she is eager to get started. Mind driving my car? Lynn asked me to ride with him."

"Wait!" the youth said imperatively. "A thing has happened—"

"Well, I should say so!" Jordan agreed sensibly. "Miss Sarah Lynn Dana, daring young aviatrix, completed a sensational parachute jump with all the nerve and skill of a professional."

But the Norseman was not to be deflected. "Always I have said girls shall not marry," he looked at Sarah Lynn again with grave resentment, sighed, lifted his hands, palms upward, let them drop. "I make now the discovery that I love this girl."

"I think," Sarah Lynn murmured with a sudden accession of shyness, "ought to ride back with Great-Grandmother!" She ran away swiftly to the car.

CHAPTER X

Gunnar stood still in a clump of madrognas when he and Sarah Lynn were out walking after lunch.

"Now we talk," he announced stiffly.

Sarah Lynn halted before him, standing with folded hands.

"I love you," she said. "I love you, I love you. Love, I said always, was a weakness."

"I know," she nodded meekly. "Freedom I wanted; freedom like birds in the air." He seemed to be accusing her of having ruined his plan.

"I'm sorry," Sarah Lynn said. "I mean, I'm sorry you're so furious about it—and so miserable, but after all—" she tried to sound reasonable and detached—"birds do come down sometimes, don't they, and build nests and—"

He shrugged his lean shoulders. His mouth looked better, baffled.

"Everything blocking the way, I have conquered. Now this conquers me. I know it. Never can I lose you. If I fly across the ocean, still you are there. My life breaks in pieces. What now can I do?"

Woodville Locals Mrs. J. Robert McCombs was a Beaumont shopper one day last week.

Leif and Mrs. T. A. Houston and son returned from a Crockett, Somerville and Houston visit. C. M. Easley, Jr., sailed from New York yesterday where he will spend some time in England, Switzerland and Belgium and will enter the Grenoble University in France the first of November. This school was founded in 1285 and is located at the foot of the Alps and will be a worth-while experience while he continues his studies of the French and German language, and as he hopes, overcomes the American way of speaking these languages.

High school has a larger number than ever before for the second week of the school year. The freshmen class holds it over the next four years, the 96 graduates will be the largest ever furnished by Woodville schools. The school year is starting off in a splendid way. If each and every pupil could only realize that he or she is very foolish not to get every bit of knowledge that can be gleaned from this corp of teachers. The parents eagerly read each week the bargain at the Woodville grocery stores and come in on week ends to get the most they can for their hard earned money.

School is an opportunity to get your money's worth, or you can cheat, idle away your time, if you do not especially dislike your instructor, you can cause him or her plenty of misery, but the lasting harm is to yourself, alone, and any boy or girl who does not eagerly get every bit of learning that the teacher can help you absorb, is very foolish and parents who take sides with a child against a teacher are indeed foolish, harsh language, but true.

Schools cost money, books cost money and good teachers also cost money, and how silly not to get our money's worth out of all three. MRS. J. H. WILLARD.

P. S. Mrs. Forest Pate has just brought the reports of the money cleared by the PTA play, Black Eyed Susan. After all expenses were paid the treasury is the better by $54.80. Those who helped in any way are to be appreciated, for these past ten days have been busy days for parents and teachers in getting the year's school work started.

Compare Red and White prices from week to week and you will observe that Davis Bros. never charge more and are often cheaper, besides Red and White quality is always the best. Trade at a home owned store. Visit our meat department for the best and cheapest meats. Adv.

ONE THOUSAND FEET ADDED The work shop at the CCC camp has been enlarged by the addition of 1,000 feet of floor space, which will be appreciated by the boys interested in shop work now being taught.

The additional 1000 feet of floor space doubles the capacity. Other improvements at the camp include the work of painting the class rooms in all the educational buildings.
