WINTER COMPLAINT

"Babies and young children need as careful protection at this time of the year against winter complaint as they do during the warm weather against summer complaint, states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, in discussing seasonal disease hazards for young children.

Winter complaint includes influenza, tonsillitis, pneumonia, bronchitis, and other diseases of the respiratory or breathing system as distinguished from summer complaint which attacks the digestive system. Diseases like pneumonia may develop from a neglected cold, they may follow as an after effect of measles or whooping cough or one of the other so-called children's diseases; or they may occur suddenly and with very little warning. They are more prevalent in winter than in summer and they are even more difficult to combat than digestive ailments. Nearly all the diseases are spread through the secretions from the nose and mouth.

Respiratory diseases are particularly dangerous to babies and young children. Those not in vigorous health are more susceptible to these infections. The first line of defense is to strengthen their powers of resistance against ill health; the second is to keep them under medical supervision; the third is to keep them away from others—young or old—who have coughs, colds or fevers.

The importance of keeping young children away from persons who have colds, or any other infectious disease, cannot be emphasized too strongly. The utmost care should be exercised by those with colds and who are unavoidably brought in contact with young children. Children should be kept away from such persons and their coughs and sneezes should be directed into a handkerchief.
