THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his horse, Gordon, through the mountains. He was found dead, his body riddled with arrows, in a narrow canyon. The search for his murderer was the beginning of a long and dangerous trail.

CHAPTER II—Before leaving for his mountain station, Art Tilton, a bear hunter, takes over Cotter's job. He is a friendly, easy-going man, but he has a secret. He is not who he seems to be.

CHAPTER III—At the dance, Louie, a girl who has been in love with Jim Cotter, is the center of attention. She is beautiful and charming, but she has a dark secret of her own.

CHAPTER IV—Breck and Sierra continue their search for the murderer. They are both brave and determined, but they are also human. They have their own fears and doubts.

CHAPTER V—The riding had started. Breck and Sierra were on horseback, following a trail through the mountains. The riding was dangerous and exciting, but it was also a test of their endurance.

Howdy, ranger, he said, smiling broadly. He was a friendly, easy-going man, but he had a secret. He was not who he seemed to be.

Irene shrieked at the slabs of meat he brought. "My dear, a whole cow! Please give me just the leg."

The music was all but lost in the shouting and babble of voices. Yet the guitar strummed out its rhythm, and there was plenty of space about the blazing logs.

They danced in silence. Tonight there was that sweet, yielding quality about Louie which made conversation needless.

He strode away to where he had last seen Irene, wondering how she would meet him, being prepared for penitence, or disdain, or even flat cutting.

"Gordon! Isn't this wild! Don't you adore it? I'm having simply a grand time!" She slipped into his arms readily. "Don't let's miss anything!"

CHAPTER XIII—The cattle count starts. Breck turns back all cattle in excess of each man's quota. He is a brave and determined man, but he is also human. He has his own fears and doubts.

CHAPTER XIV—Louie comes to Breck to tell him that the government laws are to be enforced. She is a beautiful and charming girl, but she has a dark secret of her own.

CHAPTER XV—With the help of one boy, Breck tries to control the fire. He is a brave and determined man, but he is also human. He has his own fears and doubts.

CHAPTER XVI—Breck goes in his first forest fire. In a remote district inhabited by squatters, he is the only ranger. He is a brave and determined man, but he is also human. He has his own fears and doubts.
