HOME KITCHEN ACCIDENTS
To cut down on kitchen accidents, Louise Bryant, Extension Service specialist in home management for A. & M. College, offers the following suggestions: A third of the injuries to children under 5 from home accidents come from scalds and burns. To avoid such tragedies, cook with the handles of all pots and pans turned to the back of the stove so they'll be out of reach of children. Be sure to cover your hand with a cloth before you lift the cover from a steaming kettle or roaster. Long, loose, flowing sleeves are dangerous. Cook in short sleeves and plain smooth aprons and dresses. Keep your curtains safe by fastening them so they can't blow into a fire. Don't touch anything electrical with a wet cloth or wet hands or when you're standing on a wet floor. Don't use kerosene oil to start a wood fire, and don't stand with your back to a fire. A fire extinguisher for the kitchen is a good safety investment.

"Well, sir, believe it or not," the sergeant in charge spoke up, "but we've camouflaged a field position so well that we can't find it now."

Lincoln Anecdote
Abraham Lincoln won many arguments through sheer force of logic. On one occasion, having failed to make a stubborn opponent see the error of his reasoning, Lincoln said, "Well, let's see how many legs has a cow?"
"Four, of course," came the ready answer.
"That's right," said Lincoln. "Now suppose we call the cow's tail a leg. How many legs would the cow have?"
"Why, five, of course."
"Now, that's where you're wrong," said Lincoln. "Simply calling a cow's tail a leg doesn't make it a leg."

Complete Cure
Smith: "Your wife used to be so nervous. Now she doesn't show a sign of it. What in the world did you do for her?"

"No Time for Foolishness"
Aunt Sarah was a very religious woman. One summer afternoon a very severe thunderstorm came suddenly and Aunt Sarah was much alarmed. She rushed into the room where her husband was reading and excitedly said: "I am very much alarmed as this is a very severe storm." The husband looked up from his newspaper and quietly said: "And where is your faith, Sarah?" To which she hastily replied: "This is no time for foolishness."

Priority Blues
All together: "Keep your temper, gentle sir," writes the manufacturer. "Though your goals are overdue for the month, or maybe two, we can't help it—please don't swear. Labor's scarce and steel is rare. Can't get rivets, can't get dies, these are facts, we tell no lies."
Bill: "My work is now up to me. So your order, we're afraid, may be quite a bit delayed. Still, you'll get it. I don't know, maybe this month, maybe next. Keep on hoping, don't say 'no,' we'll fill your order here and bye."

Handicap
"Did your garden do well?"
"No, every time my husband started digging he found a lot of worms, quit digging and went fishing."

Simple Substitute
The lady shopper had ordered just about everything hauled down from the roof.
"I don't see just the right thing yet," she said at last. "You see, I want to surprise my husband on his birthday."
"Well," suggested the tired clerk, "why don't you just hide behind a door and yell 'Boy' at him?"

Followed Orders
Mother: "Sonny go over and see how old Mrs. Harris is this morning."
Sonny (returning a few moments later): "She's 73 years, 6 months and 2 days old, she says."

Fine Distinction
Guest: "What's the difference between the blueplate special and the whiteplate special?"
Walter: "The blueplate special is 5 cents more."
Guest: "Is the food better on the whiteplate special?"
Walter: "No, but we garnish it with parsley and give you a blue napkin."

Doctor: "Have you told Mr. Brown yet that he is the father of triplets?"
Nurse: "Yes, doctor, and you must see him at once. He's having a heart attack!"

With, or Without?
The bishop, invited to a big city church, was informed that he must speak at both morning and afternoon services. Disturbed about using his robe twice without laundering, he consulted the hostess.
"That will be easily solved" said the hostess. "Mandy will launder the robe as soon as you get home from morning service."

The family and honored guests were seated at dinner when Mandy came in, touched her mistress's arm and whispered:
"The His Holiness has starch in his nightgown."

Gigantic Battles in Russia

ingrad because of the proximity of the enemy. The bulk of industrial equipment remains in Moscow and Leningrad. There are some neutral military observers who think the Russians may be able to superhumanly have a long grad. But the country is resigned to the ultimate fact of that city after a prolonged siege.

Ukraine Causes Worry
The position in the Ukraine is already worrying. The Russians have lost about as much of that region as they can afford to with out serious injury to the nation's productive capacity. The Nazis are at the gates of the Donets Basin. Once across the line, only the Volga stands between them and the Caucasus. Both the Donets and the Caucasus are vital spots in the territory of Soviet Russia. If the Germans succeed in worming their way into the Donets Basin they will be in a position to threaten the bank of Moscow's defense.

The general feeling of foreign military observers is that Hitler's ultimate objective is to establish a more or less permanent front along the line of the Volga river, including also, of course, the oil fields of the Caucasus. There are few who think he aims to go on to the Ural.

"I saw no evidence of dangerous national unrest in Russia. There may be millions who dislike the present system of government, but they dislike Hitler even more. Of course one hears grumbling and complaint, but the present regime is so firmly entrenched, the police so highly organized and all-pervasive and the opposition elements have been so severely decimated that political reaction seems most improbable—at least as long as the Red Army remains as loyal, united and determined in its resistance to Hitlerism as it is now."

Holding the writer of this memorandum in the highest esteem, I believe his estimate is of the utmost value in appraising the Russian situation. Nothing that has come out of Russia since October 2 materially modifies the conclusions he has reached.

A WISE MAN
A wise man said: "It is important not only to pick the right mate but to be the right mate. And contrary to many popular love stories, it is not during the first year of bliss that most dangers creep up. Marriages do not, like dropped chinaware, smash as a result of that first quarrel which the newly married hope is unthinkable. Marriage is a rooted thing, growing and flowering, that must be tended faithfully."
"Every woman wants to be told, not just on her honeymoon, but through all the years, every day, how much you love her. No repetition tires her; and as long as she is shown and heard in many ways that you love her, there is nothing not bills, sickness, fatigue, last year's clothes made over, the soft ferings of childbirth or the ravages of time—that matters."

NEW ELECTRIC FENCE
Electric fences for livestock are in themselves nothing new, but now is an improvement made by Charles F. Dalziel and James K. Burch of the University of California. Their fence is based on the "single-impulse" principle, which means that it shocks just once when it is touched. If a man grasps the fence the shock decreases to a safe, sustained, direct current, so that he can release his hand. The standard fence now in use delivers shocks at intervals of about a second. Dalziel thinks repeated shocks are torture.

PIPED COAL
Coal can be pumped through pipelines instead of shipped in cars, suggests Professor H. E. Babbitt of the University of Illinois. Transportation costs would be cut in half, and railway traffic eased. The coal would be pulverized at the mines and watered to make a sludge, which could be dried at the consuming end and blown in powdered form into industrial furnaces. Until now pipeline transportation has been confined to liquids.

The first steam sawmill in America was operated by David G. Burner in Texas, 1826. He was elected President ad interim of the Republic of Texas in 1836.

Poultry News Protect Poultry Feed Well

Protect Poultry On Way to Market
Marketing poultry is not only a matter of taking the birds to a poultry buyer, it is a question of handling the birds properly enroute to market.

Much loss and damage to poultry has been traced to improper handling between the farm and the produce buyer.

Birds enroute to market may be protected with little trouble, but several precautions.

Birds should be protected from drafts whether they are hauled in sideboard coach, or passenger cars, or in trucks. Having birds to market in sacks is unwise as it may result in smothering or lowering the vitality of poultry.

Sudden jolting or jarring when coops are dropped from a truck or car may result in injured breasts, legs or wings. Overcrowding of coops is injurious to market fowl. Coops should not have protruding nails inside or out, as they are likely to injure either man or birds.

Feed Well During Molt
Frequently, exceptional layers will continue to lay during the molt or will seemingly shed all their feathers at one time. In order to keep the layers in production during the molt or to have them feather as soon as possible to get back into production, they must be fed right. Feed regardless of the amount of feed grain that is available to them after the molt. Molters need an adequate amount of protein, vitamins and growth factors just as well as lay eggs, so that they will be able to get through the stage of molt and beyond the stage of feathering as well as production.

Poultry Management
There is a great deal to be learned about the production of eggs. The ability to produce eggs at the rate we breed stock is an essential for continued high production over a period of time. However, it is not only possible in the farm flock of average breed and even in some high production breed flocks, to increase production substantially by following the best possible plan of poultry management. The majority of poultry flocks are not pushed to the capacity of their ability to lay.

Demand and Price Good
With a continued reasonable price for eggs promised for some time and a decided war demand for maximum production, the producer of eggs will do well to "markeu to the cry" and get the most out of his present flock as well as plan for continued production next year. Right now, our chief concern is to increase fall and winter production in order to take advantage of the present favorable market conditions.

Exports of the flour will be to the American Medical Association. The flour was said to be especially well prepared with proteins and the important vitamin B.

Approximately 1,700 acres in eastern Texas and southern Texas have been designated by the Department of Agriculture in Washington for an emergency cash crop bearing production program this year according to Director J. H. Williamson of the A. & M. College, Extension Service. The program was prompted by a possible shortage of shipping wheat and soybeans to certain foreign markets from Brazil and India.

For years and years many farmers had the problem of a fall in World War I. East Texas, with its rich soil and success, according to H. D. Hudson, county agent. The reason was that the soil was too rich and the crops were too heavy. By using fertilizer, the soil was made more fertile and the crops were made more productive. The result was a big increase in the yield of the crops.

A midget calf was born recently to a 16-month-old Jersey cow on the Herman Just farm, ten miles northwest of Robstown, (Nueces county). The tiny animal, only a quarter of normal size, weighed 15 pounds at birth. One week later he had gained one pound, and was doing fine.

Annual expenditures of Texas farmers for implements and machinery are more than $33,000,000 while they spend over $23,000,000 a year for gasoline, repairs and oil, according to U. S. When average weights of goats shown in all sheep producing states except Texas was higher this year than the 1940 average, the Texas clip showed a drop of 6 pounds per sheep according to figures of the U. S. Department of Agriculture Marketing Service. A possible explanation is that in comparing Texas clip weights, lamb clips are included with grown wool.

After six years of planting, the higher the price of the Great Plains has given the sheep raisers a more profitable business. The clip is a good one, according to specialists. The clip of 1941 was an average of 60 pounds per sheep, and some of the best clips were made in West Texas. The clip is a good one, according to specialists. University of Texas geologists predict a peat in great extensive finds of the soft, spongy coal-like substance throughout the State. Millions of dollars worth of peat has been imported heretofore.

No one knows just when the cotton moth leaves its warm home in the South and goes North to meet the winter, there to end its days. Although they breed only in tropical climes, they have been found as far north as Canada.

Jewel Freeman, poultry raiser near Pittsburg, Okla. county, displayed an egg which was one for Ripley. On the side of the egg was an almost perfect black dot.

Based on October 1 conditions, Texas will have a 1941 cotton crop of 2,800,000 bales, the agricultural marketing service forecast shows. This forecast compares with 3,234,000 bales produced in 1940, and 2,766,000 bales the 1939 average.

Cowhands are wondering what to do about the shortage of rope caused by a government order placing Manila rope on the priorities list. Navy needs and the possibility that shipments from Manila might be stopped presumably are behind the order. Present inventories may have to last a long time.

Six to eight milk goats can be kept up on the food required for one cow, says G. Gibson, assistant extension dairyman. The goat will supply sufficient milk for the average family, and can be kept in good condition where it would be impossible to keep a cow. Gibson further points out that it is evident the number of milk goats in Texas is increasing steadily.

A record that in all probability cannot be equaled by any other Jersey breeder in Texas has been set by Ed Palmer, Dairy Products Association sales owner of the Rockdale Jersey Farms, southwest of Hempstead, (Hopkins county). Mr. Palmer now has at his farm three 4- or 5-year-old Jersey cows, in fact, or buyers. This condensed milk herd is out of the famous Jersey herd of Geo. W. Sisson, Jr., of Potsdam, New York.

Texas may be chosen as the proving ground to test the feasibility of growing cork in the U. S., according to information from the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Serv. The total loss represents all the milk that 3,249 cows of part of Texas is very similar to that of the mountainous portions of Spain, Portugal and North Africa, the natural habitat of the cork oak. The 1942 acreage allotment has been announced at 60,238 acres and a yield of 82 bushels per acre.

Traditionally quiet at night, the vast farm lands of Texas this summer hummed with noise of mechanized equipment working under lights. More and more farmers are reported equipping their tractors with lights and worked from dusk to dawn to escape the 100-degree temperature during Texas' summers. Night work is especially effective in the case of cotton picking. When moisture comes out on cotton plants, the poison dust will stick to the plant and kills more quickly and more efficiently than in the hot, dry dusty daylight hours.

M. E. Murray, manager of the Texas Dairy Products Association, says, "Since May 1, creameries in Texas have dumped 7,240 cans of cream in the sewer or returned it to farmers Star Jersey cows, in fact, or buyers. This condensed milk herd is out of the famous Jersey herd of Geo. W. Sisson, Jr., of Potsdam, New York. Credit to the loss side, also 7,500,000 pounds of milk returned by Texas' cheese factories to farmers as unfit, based on present market values, represents another loss of $168,750. This milk if used would have accounted for 39 carloads of badly needed cheese. AUNT MARY, Editor, 1809 Ashland, Fort Worth, Texas.

DEAR FRIENDS:

The following poem, written by Aunt Mary, is dedicated to the boy and girl readers of this department that appear once a month in your home town newspaper:

TO YOUTH

Youful dreams are fancy free,
High above this mortal sphere,
If the waking were tomorrow,
Would they ever be so near?

Young life is a dream, a dream,
A dream of hope and joy and love,
A dream of glory and of fame,
A dream that ends in death and glove.

Young life is a dream, a dream,
A dream of hope and joy and love,
A dream of glory and of fame,
A dream that ends in death and glove.

MILK RESEARCH

The average American consumes about 20 quarts of milk each year, which means that he produces about 100 pounds for the nation. This production is a business and it is one of the main reasons for the increase in liquid milk and Great Britain, China calling for more concentrated and dried milk is evidence that the market is even better than the manufacturers.

The milk industry is a science. Milk is easily contaminated and the cause of disease and food poisoning. One of the main reasons for the record is that the only as a business. According to the Board of Dairy Producers, it has been organized to defend its own interests as a general group of scientists and researchers in the milk producing industry. The milk industry is a business and it is one of the main reasons for the increase in liquid milk and Great Britain, China calling for more concentrated and dried milk is evidence that the market is even better than the manufacturers.

STORIES THAT LIVE

Do not think for a minute that the stories in this department are dead. They are alive and well and growing. The stories in this department are the stories of the people of Texas. They are the stories of the men and women who have made Texas what it is today. They are the stories of the men and women who have made Texas what it is today.

DEATH RATE

The low death rate among persons under 20 years of age is one of the greatest achievements of the life insurance industry. This does not mean that weight loss is necessary, merely that the tendency to excess weight increases with age and that the weight which is desirable at the age of 30 should be maintained at a later age.

LETTERS FROM THE READERS

Here is a night for me from a reader about her vacation. It is from Mrs. D. B. Barton, Belton, Texas.

My vacation was spent in Los Angeles, Calif. It was a great sight to see the new station in this city. There were thousands of people coming from and going to the station to meet the train.

The day was filled with thrills, on the sight-seeing bus. I went to see Baby Snooks broadcast which was very clever.

The most impressive sight I saw was continued next column.

FLOSSIE

There are about 3,000 different kinds of fish in America, and about five times that many in the world. Smallest of all fish grown are some of the minnows which are less than an inch in length. Largest is probably the great white shark, which grows to be 40 feet long. A 100-foot shark about 100 feet long has been found. This is the biggest fish story of all time. It has been a good many thousands of years since this creature lived. Millions of pounds of fish are caught each year and used as food. Most of these are caught from the sea by men who catch and sell fish for a living.
