If You Fly the Flag At All Fly Old Glory Right

Surprisingly enough there is no Federal statute covering the display of the American flag. During the war, when the display of the flag is important to our national morale and it is so much in evidence, it is imperative that its use be clearly defined.

In the August issue of Cosmopolitan magazine, Lee Russell gives the following rules for the use of the national banner.

The Flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset on buildings and on stationary flagstaffs in the open. The Flag should not be flown in wet weather. It should always be raised briskly and lowered ceremoniously, and must never touch the ground. The church pennant is the only flag allowed to fly at the same time above the Stars and Stripes, and only during religious services in a military chapel or aboard a ship of our Navy. During other religious services, flags may be displayed on a staff equal in height to our country's Flag, but the latter should be in the position of honor, at the speaker's right. Our Flag should never be draped over the hood, top, sides or back of a vehicle, and should never trail in the water.

During a parade, when there is a flank of various flags, the American Flag should have the place of honor, the right. With a line of flags, Our Flag must be in front of the line at center. When carried high up over the middle of the street, the Stars and Stripes should be suspended vertically over the center of the street, with the union to the north on an east and west street, or to the east on a north and south street. The Flag should not be carried flat or horizontally but always aloft and free.

For indoor display, if you wish to place Old Glory in a vertical position, the field of stars should be to the flag's own right. The Flag should be uppermost and to the observer's left if the Flag of the United States is displayed against a wall in a horizontal position.

When used on a speaker's platform, the Flag, if displayed flat, should be above and behind the speaker. Our Flag should never be used to cover the speaker's desk, nor to drape the front of the platform. As a signal of distress, the Stars and Stripes may be flown from the mast head upside down.

When the Flag is flown at half mast as a sign of mourning, it should be hoisted to full staff at the conclusion of the funeral. Also during the Flag at half staff, it should be hoisted to the top of the staff and then lowered again.

Last but not least, don't let anyone embroider Our Flag upon a scarf or a handkerchief, nor print it on paper napkins or boxes.

The Barclay Barcley Reunion

Because of war conditions and the rubber situation the usual crowd of some 500 was cut down to about 175 last Sunday at the annual Barclay-Barkley family reunion at Gulf Pump station picnic grounds. Dr. Watt Barclay was re-elected president of the clan, Miss Virginia Boyd of Warren, secretary, Mrs. Eliza Cline, of Wharton, historian; and Mrs. C. M. Redman of Port Arthur, publicity chairman.

Mention of, and prizes were given to Walter Barclay of Chester as honor guest; to the oldest man and woman, Mrms R. L. Barclay of Temple; the one coming the longest distance, Wm. Barclay of Ft. Worth; youngest boy and girl were Miss Tedie Barclay of Beaumont and Robt. Lee Barclay of Segno; the youngest married woman, Mrs. Ella D. Landry of Silsbee, whose husband is somewhere with Uncle Sam's forces, and Mrs. Wm. Peters received a prize for having on display a tintype picture more than 70 years of age, which was of her and Dr. Watt Barclay's mother, Mrs Clara Barclay.

The day's happy association was brought to a close when Mr. and Mrs. Redman repeated their marriage vows in the old Foster-Barclay log house which is now the home of Mrms Herman Risinger. The ceremony was carried out by candlelight. The couple stood under a traditional gallery rafter known as "the marriage bower."

Rev. Ernest Martin read the marriage service. Herman Risinger was the groom's attendant and Miss Virginia Boyd, a cousin, of Mrs. Redman, was the bride's attendant.

Mr. Redman was attired in a to the late John Henry Kirby and frocktail coat which once belonged ding dress, part of which belonged Mrs. Redman wore an old wedto her mother and part of which was her original wedding ensemble.

Carrying out family traditions as nearly as possible, Mrs. Redman dressed in the "bridal chamber" of the old house, setting her veil in place before the oblong mirror hanging over a chest of drawers bought by Judge Barclay with several hundred head of wild mustangs and "some gold to boot."

Mrs. Redman for the past two years has made a biographical study of the Foster-Barclay families.

At the reunion Sunday many old portraits and tintypes, were on display.

Among the many from a distance attending, were Mrms R. L. Barclay, Temple, Mrms Wm. Barclay of Fort Worth, Mrms C. M. Redman of Port Arthur, and others from Conroe, New Waverly, Nacogdoches, Daisetta, and Vinton, La.

Under the caption "Do You?" The Christian Science Monitor asks the following pertinent questions which every American citizen should be able to answer in the affirmative:

When someone says: "It's Roosevelt's fault we're in this war—do you say: "That's what Hitler claimed in his speech that announced the Nazi declaration of war in the United States?"

When someone says "We ought to get out of the Far East, anyway, instead of sending our soldiers over there" do you point out that that is exactly what the enemy want the United States to do?

When someone says "Britain is fighting an imperialist war and has managed to drag the United States in for British interests" do you remind him that the Nazis told France that this was Britain's war, and then conquered France?

Whenever anyone relays rumors, spreads all-godly humorous stories or gossip, or asks questions designed to rouse suspicion of the government or America's Allies do you spike the rumor, uncover the nefarious intent of the seemingly harmless joke, point out the innuendo in the question, and show how all these are subtle devices of the enemy's effort to divide the peoples of the United Nations and to undermine national unity in America?

Do you? That is one important way most of us can help to defend our country, and to win the war. And the nation does need that kind of service today at the hands of its citizens. Charlotte Observer (Dem.)

A STATEMENT OF FACT

H. L. Yancy, of Lufkin, running for state representative against Otis Lock was in The Booster office two weeks ago and gave Mr. Edwards a notice for his speaking date here on that week's Saturday. He stated that he had failed to bring his check book and would pay the bill Saturday. On Saturday he sat here in the house and planned for a 30 inch ad for the next weeks Booster (last week's Booster, now) and asked me to make out the bill for both ads, and a check for both ads and the copy for the 30 inch ad would be sent us, sure, so we would get it Tuesday the 14. He again said he had forgotten to bring his check book. We are now going to press the last time before the election on day after tomorrow, Saturday, and no check or copy has reached us even though we held up The Booster until the mail came this morning. We leave it up to our readers whether we should have faith enough in him to vote for him.

It has been a long time since Texas has had an opportunity to do itself so much good as by the election of Governor Coke Stevenson. His sincerity and profound good sense are especially valuable to the State at this time when there is need for disciplining ourselves for the one big job - winning the war.

The value of such a man in the Governor's office is exemplified by the important fact that since he has been at the helm of state government good feeling, mutual confidence and trust have pervaded the state capital, and this salutary condition has radiated throughout the State. This is the sort of administration which Texas need, which every State needs, in order that it may do its part in the Nation's battle. Distractions arising from animosities, rivalries and perverse ambitions within the Government are not conducive to public confidence, nor to putting maximum strength behind the war effort. Governor Stevenson has enabled Texas to be one of the States in which petty "politics" does not handicap war participation.

Governor Stevenson enjoys the inestimable advantage both of a talent for "getting along with the people" and long experience in exercising that talent. He himself is a farmer and stockman, as well as a "small town" lawyer. It is doubtful whether a more fortunate combination of predilections and skill could be assembled for the job of heading this State in wartime. In him we have a Governor who regards his job as important enough to be a career in itself, not merely as a stepping stone to some other post or greater political power. Without indulging in personalities, it can safely be said that Texas would be in much better shape today if its Governors in the past had had Coke Stevenson's viewpoint.

If we are to achieve the balance required for winning this war, state governments and state affairs must of necessity take a position subordinate to national concerns "for the duration." Firebrands, even if only of the oratorical type, are not needed in state administrative posts, and if by popular error any such are placed in such posts, the business of winning the war will be hindered and not helped. Governor Stevenson has stood firmly for Texas' interests in all his official dealings with the Federal Government, and, because his sincerity and good will is recognized at Washington as well as at home, Texas has come out better than most States in these dealings. On the other hand, Texas' Governor has not failed in his American duty to further by every means his State's contribution to the All-American cause of victory over the Nation's enemies.

Governor Stevenson has been one of the most Texan of all Texas Governors. Born a Texan he has lived in Texas all his life; he looks Texan, talks Texan, thinks Texan. He has served his fellow Texans ably and well. He has earned renomination and reelection.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

SENATOR GLEN Fain of Livingston has announced himself as a candidate for Railroad commissioner. We have been watching this young man for some 16 or more years, and have been impressed with the way he does things. He is a right-off-the-bat speaker and can give a good account of himself in any position. Fain is a graduate of State U where he prepared himself in the art of proving Blackstonian theories, to say the least, are more or less meritorious. The Booster unhesitantly approves of Senator Fain for Railroad Commissioner, over any and all of the several candidates who imagine they are the only man for the position. If elected he'll make an enviable record.

Candidate for State Comptroller Butler Has Unique Hobby

Clifford E. Butler

Candidate Butler has the unusual hobby of giving away lucky birthdate silver dollars to candidates for public office, and others. You will see him carrying around a sack of iron men . . . if he asks you your age, tell him, and he'll give you a cartwheel with your birth date on it . . . he's not to do the asking however!

Candidate Butler claims to have elected U. S. Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, who succeeded the late Senator Morris Sheppard, and who won his post by the narrow margin of less than 1,500 votes in the state-wide balloting. At the close of his first campaign for Senator in 1941, our Junior Senator was the recipient of a silver dollar of vintage 1890, for a buck piece, along with the statement and prediction that he was now certain of winning. At the 1942 democratic executive committee meeting, held June 8, Candidate Butler gave both of O'Daniel's opponents Dan Moody, who was born in 1893, and James V. Allred, who was born in 1899, each one of his silver dollars, with the comment that he wanted to be fair and put the candidates for Senator on an equal basis.

Candidate Butler received 252,000 votes in the 1940 primary, and stated he is confident of retiring "the oldest, chronic, term-after-term professional politician in Austin," this election.

The democratic primary will be held Saturday, July 25.

general office in Houston, and for Sinclair at Pasadena.

Entered advertising business at Port Arthur in 1924.

Elected to Legislature, 1932; served six years from Jefferson County—was member of finance committee, military affairs, insurance, etc. Voted for assistance to the aged, crippled children, the blind and all needy persons.

National Defense Gov't employee at Camp Hulen from April, 1941, to February, 1942; and at Camp Swift from February, 1942, to May,

THE U. S. Government for the Construction Battalion also known as the "Seabees", it is announced by Lieut. J. F. Beebe, officer in charge of the U. S. Navy Recruiting station, Houston.

Men having experience in skilled trades should apply for enlistment at the nearest Navy Recruiting Station immediately to obtain transportation and be ready for a personal interview with the construction officer who will be in Houston on July 27, 28, 29.

Many skilled men have already volunteered for this branch of the service, and the call is out for many more. The trades needed at this time include stenographers, office workers, blacksmiths, bull dozer operators, carpenters, concrete workers, cooks, bakers, crane operators, dredge deckhands, quarry drillers, electricians, gas and diesel repair men, labor foremen, mechanics, pipe fitters, riggers and many other types of skilled labor.

It was pointed out that the "Seabees" will receive eight weeks training at a Naval base, and will spend part of the time following their line of work. They will also receive training in gunnery practice, including machine guns, rifles, pistols, and anti aircraft war-fare. They will be equipped to go anywhere in the world, and set up new bases for the Navy. Recruits in this construction battalion will be stationed outside the continental limits of the United States, and will not grow rusty during the war from disuse of their tools, and knowledge.

Age limits for these men are from 17 to 50, and interestmen should obtain three letters of recommendation certifying to their line of work, and ability to perform same in a skilled manner.

The Construction Battalion is also open to enlistments of negroes who are skilled tradesmen, giving them an opportunity to earn as much as $150 per month if they qualify.

MAKING BARLEYCORN USEFUL

Apparently the Government preferred to let the news be announced in a casual manner rather than to shock the sensibilities of those who feel the Nation can't get along without its whisky distilleries. At any rate, the news interjected incidentally into a senate agriculture subcommittee hearing on rubber that the Federal authorities intend to put whisky distilleries, and possibly some breweries, to turning out industrial alcohol should be welcome to every patriot who despises waste and abhors inefficiency, especially when the war effort is affected thereby.

Some of the larger distilleries have been distilling 190-proof alcohol for munitions, but all the bonds of smaller plants have gone on turning out whisky although there is said to be a four- or five years' supply of distilled spirits on hand in the warehouses.

Fulton Lewis, Jr., in one of his daily broadcasts over the Mutual network, argued that if the big distilleries operated at capacity and the smaller, capable of turning out 140 proof alcohol, were reconditioned to distill 190-proof, we'd have enough alcohol from grain, plus the amount that is made from blackstrap molasses, to fill the needs of the War Production program without even touching the country's sugar supply at all."

It should be explained, however, that the WPB is diverting some of the distillery-made alcohol to the manufacture of synthetic rubber and that the molasses supply has been materially lowered by submarine warfare.

Still, the whiskey industry is capable of making a still further contribution to the war effort: The 550,000,000 gallons of liquor on hand might readily be redistilled into the industrial alcohol which is so greatly needed.

ATTENTION, MADAM PERKINS

The Supreme Court ruled that a teamsters' union in New York City was within its rights when it held up trucks at the entrance to New York's Holland Tunnel and made their drivers pay $9.42 for the services of a union man. Justice Harlan Fiske Stone called this: Piracy Hijacking. Not long ago the Navy Department wanted to ship some heavy machinery from a plant in Rhode Island to an embarkation point. The Government could not hire a truck, because a strike was on. It was finally forced to commandeer a truck. At the Holland Tunnel the union pickets made the Government unload that commandeered truck because it was "unfair." The machinery was loaded on a union truck. Hours of valuable time were wasted.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN SPOTTED FEVER

With the announcement of two deaths in Brazoria county, Rocky Mountain spotted fever has made its first appearance in this state. Four cases have been reported to the state health department in July, and Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health officer, has cautioned the public to beware of ticks, since Rocky Mountain spotted fever is transmitted by tick bite. While originally found only in the Rocky Mountains, this disease is now reported from a large number of states outside of that area, including some as far east as the Atlantic coast.

Dr. Cox stated that the people whose occupations expose them constantly to tick infestation may partially protect themselves by being inoculated with a vaccine which is prepared from infected ticks.

An individual can avoid this disease by avoiding the bite of ticks, and the best way to do that, if living in an area where this disease has been noted, is to make a systematic search for ticks on the body, especially in the summer season.

The tick which is apparently the sole agent by which this disease is transmitted, usually make its appearance with the onset of warm weather and should be considered as a health hazard until after the middle of the summer.

Dr. Cox advised that ticks should be removed without touching them with the fingers since infections have been acquired in this manner by removing the insect from dogs or other animals.

GEORGE DOWNING IN ACTIVE SERVICE

Ft. Knox, Ky. - The Armored Force School, where the tens of thousands of technicians for the Army's hard-hitting armored divisions are trained, today had rolled another class of tank mechanics off its fast rolling human assembly line.

Among the graduates, announced from the offices of Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Chief of the Armored Force, were: Technician George S. Downing, 3rd Armored Division, Camp Polk, La., son of Mrms. George Downing of Colmesneil. Technician Downing entered the service in July, 1941.

The Armored Force School, of which the tank department is only one of nearly a dozen sections, is headed by Brigadier General Stephen G. Henry, commandant. Now one of the largest technical schools in the world, several times more students than the number graduated from any civilian university or college pour out of its jeeps and classrooms each year.

The Tank department is headed by Lt. Col. Frederick M. Thompson, as director.

W.N.U. SERVICE

"Of course," Curt mused on, "it's a pretty slick hombre who could put anything over on Old Man Moore. I could give even money the Old Man figures they'll go broke getting into production, then plans to bid in and take over the concession cheap. Maybe throw a bridge across the Negro and handle the fruit once from pick up to the dock at Soledad."

McInnis grinned, but said nothing. The bartender placed the drinks before them, then left to lend a hand in the kitchen lean-to.

Alone now, and with a furtive glance to be sure Lee was occupied with the children, Curt pulled forth Zora Mitchell's letter. He spread it open before the other, and his face was serious, his voice low.

"Jerry, what've I got into?"

McInnis read the note, refolded it, slid it back to Curt. He frowned. He took a long pull at his drink.

"All right, Jerry, out with it," Curt spoke again. "What's up?"

"Well, Curt," his friend said finally, "my reason for coming down to the coast to meet you wasn't altogether social. But now I'm here, I have my doubts. There's nothing I can put a finger on." He paused.

"Come on, pal, we know each other's first name. Spill it."

It came out slowly and in pieces.

"Well, Curt, I can't help feeling there's something fishy about your new outfit. They have more men on their payroll than we have, for instance, Americans as well as natives, trying to get things set before the next rainy season. That's all right. But Soledad's the only live spot such as it is—within their range. You couldn't call Cabeza a satisfactory place to liven a fellow up over a holiday.

"So—well, damn it all, you'd expect that gang to come to Soledad once in a while. But no one ever does. The two Swedes and the Dutchman I told you about are the only ones who ever get to Soledad, and that's only on business, to supervise receipt of shipments.

"And they don't talk! We tried to get up a ball game with your people once. No go. It's as though this Montaya was afraid his men'd spill something to our advantage. And that's carrying the rivalry theme a bit far for this business and this country. I—well, you see how vague it is, only a feeling . . ."

Curt reflected. He pushed his glass around in circles on the bar. "Ever get over to the new planting yourself?"

"No," grinned McInnis. "That wouldn't be etiquette. The Old Man paid them a courtesy visit once, but we're rival outfits. If I went over they'd think it snooping. All the dope I've had on them is picked up from natives. You know how stuff gets around.

"And that leads right into what I really came down here for. It was especially to—uh, warn you. But, he held up his hand, "don't ask me against what. I don't know. That note from Zora Mitchell I'd talk to her as soon as I could. Sounds like she knows something."

He held an uncomfortable silence for a moment. Then:

"I got hold of a rumor after you called me several days ago. There's no evidence, mind you, and it was too late to stop you by cable. Well, the natives working for me have their own ideas about Mitchell's death. They say it was no native did the job, but a couple of white men. But Curt," he expostulated, "you know no white man would hack a guy to pieces the way Mitch was found."

Curt thought this out.

"Huh, unless it was to hide the fact that it was a white man's killing. And suppose it was a white man, Jerry, or a couple of them? So what? Old Mitch knew his job, but he certainly piled up enemies. You and I know that well enough. He made engineers out of us, first job out of college, but we got plenty bruised in the process. Men with less sense of humor than we have can't take the treatment he dished out."

Curt pulled at his drink reflectively.

Mcinnis found him early in the morning—fortunately before the buzzards did. Let's see, the 11th, it was. About a kilometer outside of Tempujo, in a ditch by the track. The damn zopilotes were wheeling overhead, so he got the section handcar, loaded the body onto it—"

"The 11th?" interrupted Curt. "That's the date of their letter to me! They didn't waste any time. Wonder how they picked a man so quickly?"

"Well, the date's correct. I remember because we had an early evening dinner-dance on the Tekla at Soledad the night before Mitch was found. And the Tekla pulled out for Cristobal about 9:00 p. m. on the 10th."

"It did!" exclaimed Curt softly. He looked at McInnis. "Their letter to me was dated the 11th, but air-mailed from Cristobal on the 12th. Didn't notice that discrepancy at first. When I finally did, I figured the letter either made a plane to the Canal Zone, or was misdated in error."

"We have no air service in Panama from Soledad—direct. Course, it's less than two hours by air to the Zone, but I doubt they'd make the flight just for a letter. Anyway, I know a messenger from Tempujo brought mail to the Tekla just before it sailed. Came as our party was breaking up and going ashore."

"Then the chances are the letter to me, dated the 11th, was put aboard the Tekla which sailed the 10th. Actually mailed before Mitch was found murdered. Right?"

"By God, Curt, that's so!" McInnis brought his palm down on the bar. "Mitch was killed some time after dark on the 10th and discovered early on the 11th."

"Meanwhile . . ." Curt fell silent, then looked up keenly. "The two Swedes are white men."

McInnis frowned. "And there are plenty more white men where you're going. No, Curt, the Swedes are not what we'd want for bosom pals, but we've no right to jump to conclusions. Besides," he dropped the scowl and grinned, "I did some checking up myself. Had my motor boy ask questions here and there. The Swede made the run from Tempujo to San Alejo late that afternoon, while Mitch was staying in Tempujo overnight."

Another silence fell between them. Then Curt spoke harshly.

"Jerry, there's more here than meets the eye. If Mitch's killing was a grudge payment, then, Tierra Libre being what it is, there's little we can do about it. Nothing, in fact. And there's nothing for me to worry about. I don't make enemies like Mitch did. But if there's more behind it . . ."

McInnis heaved a sigh.

"Curt, be careful! Don't mount any white charger over Mitch. He asked for it. He's been asking for it for years. And you've got Lee and the kids here now. But if—well, I don't have to say it, but if you find you're in a spot, call on me."

They downed the last of their drinks and strolled to face the room. But before rejoining Lee Curt brought up another matter.

"By the way," he said slowly, studying his friend's face, "I saw a destroyer headed for Soledad this morning. American. I suppose—looked like ours. Any particular reason for it?"

"No. The country's quiet as a church meeting. Dr. Arecas only one step removed from being a dictator, sure, but a good one. Seems to be what the people need, they're satisfied. He's solidly entrenched, too, there's no opposition to speak of. But . . ." He paused.

"Well?"

"Well, we had a Navy visit only a couple of weeks ago, and they certainly aren't scheduled to stop in again so soon." He added, in a puzzled tone, "Funny I didn't see the ship as I came down the coast."

"You were pretty low in the water and they were some distance off."

"Huh. Well . . ." He shrugged.

They started across the room to rejoin Lee and the boys. McInnis dug his fingers into Curt's arm.

"See Zora Mitchell, Curt, first thing you get to San Alejo. But only to find out if you have anything personal to guard against," he said insistently. "Don't borrow trouble. You're a family man now. What's more, the family's right here with you."

"Yeh, I see what you mean," Curt answered dryly, his eyes on Lee and the children.

CHAPTER III

McInnis shoved off for Puerto Soledad at once. His launch was built for service, not speed, and bucking the tides along the coast would slow him down further.

On the dock it took the combined efforts of both Lee and Curt to keep the boys out of mischief.

HELLO, HITLER IS CALLING!

Hitler called up the Devil
On his telephone one day,
And the girl at Central listened
To all they had to say.

"Hello, it's Hitler speaking,
Is old man Satan home?
Just tell his it's der Fuehrer
Who wants him on the phone!"

Said the Devil, "Howdy, Adolph."
Said Hitler, "How are you?
I'm running Hell on earth,
So tell me what to do."

"Me tell you?" the Devil said,
"Listen, pal of mine,
You don't need help from me,
You're doing mighty fine.'

"Yes, I was doing fairly well
Until some time ago,
But then a guy named Uncle Sam
Warned me I should go slow.

"He said to me, "Dear Hitler,
We don't want to be rough,
But it seems to us, by dam,
That you've raised Hell enough."

"I though his lease-lend plan
Was bluff, he'd never put it thru,
But soon he put me on the spot,
And told me what to do.

"So that's why I called you, Satan,
I need advice from you;
For I know that you can tell me
Exactly what to do."

Said Satan, "My dear partner,
There isn't much to tell;
Uncle Sam will make it hotter
Than I can here in Hell.

"I've been a real old Devil,
But not half as mean as you.
So the minute you get down here,
This job is yours to do.

"I'll be ready for your coming
And I'll keep the fires bright.
I'll get your room all ready,
Soon as Sam begins to fight.

"I know your days are numbered
And there's nothing else to tell.
Hang up the phone, put on your hat
And come on down to Hell."

A SWITCH TO LULLAVIES

"Some fly east—sone fly west—
Some fly over the cucoo's nest."
—(Old Nursery Rhyme.)

Somewhere beyond the Southern Cross above the Seven Seas,
Along the bitter far-off roads,
their pinions catch the breezes.
Their wings are black against the sky, by desert, surf and dune,
The ancient lullaby is lost against a rougher tune—

Some fly east and some fly west
—and some will fly no more;
Far, far out from the eagle's nest their mighty motors roar.
And wing by wing their rule will grow above all sea and sod,
Until they strike the final blow
for country and for God.

Faintly I hear the old, old song when golden dreams were young
But louder still I hear the wings when sudden death is flung.
Bravely the eagle rides the air,
but in my fading dreams,
The dim, lost lullaby returns—
how far away it seems—

Some fly east some fly west—they take the endless track.
Through flame and steel they face the test around a world and back
Their golden youth blots out the sky, they let the comets plod,
As each one flies to live or die
for country and for God.

War Research

In war the advantage is on the side with the best weapons. The work of scientists in America's research laboratories, developing new materials and new equipment, means a lot to our fighting men.

1. It takes years to build up and equip a large, organized, and able staff for research. Fortunately, industry did this long ago.

2. Long before Pearl Harbor, laboratories like General Electric's were serving their country—solving technical problems of war.

3. History repeats! In the last war "wireless" was developed for military needs—to become, with peace, a giant broadcasting industry.

4. So it will be this time. Research will help to win the war, and its many wartime discoveries will help to build a better future.

General Electric believes that its first duty as a good citizen is to be a good soldier.

Have You Bought Your WAR BONDS

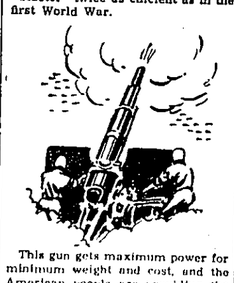
The 75-millimeter gun is a divisional weapon used by the Artillery as an anti-tank gun. It has been replaced to some extent by the more modern "105", known as the heaviest of divisional weapons. The 75-mm gun costs $12,000 and has been converted by our Ordnance into a "blaster" twice as efficient as in the first World War.



This gun gets maximum power for minimum weight and cost, and the American people are providing the finance through the purchase of War Bonds. If you do your share and invest 10 per cent of your income in War Bonds, adequate supply of this efficient gun can be assured our fighting forces. Buy War Bonds every pay day. U. S. Like all other businesses, we are complying with the Office of Defense Transportation's order to reduce tire mileage 25% as compared to last year. This means fewer trips for our cars and trucks, so if we are unable to answer service calls or make deliveries quite as promptly as in the past, please remember that it is due to circumstances imposed by wartime conditions. Every ounce of rubber we can save is that much more for our armed forces.

How You Can Help Us Reduce Car Mileage and Still Maintain a High Standard of Service

1 Learn to replace blown fuses yourself. It's easy as changing a light bulb. Ask any of our employees to show you how. Keep extra fuses on hand.

2 Please do not ask for delivery of small items such as light bulbs or appliance cords. Buy them when shopping for other things and carry them home with you.

3 Give us as much advance notice as possible if you decide to move so your call may be grouped with others and taken care of on a single trip.

4 Arrange to pay for service by check or in person at our office before expiration of payment period and save tire wear caused by special collection trips.

5 Avoid requesting "rush" service. You can help us conserve rubber by making it possible for us to handle your service calls and deliveries on regular trips.

Prompt and courteous service to our customers has always been a policy of this company and we look forward to the day when we can again make deliveries and service calls without restrictions. In the meantime, we know you understand the reason for this message and will be glad to cooperate. We'll give you the best service possible under present conditions and will sincerely appreciate your help. With a little advance planning, you will be occasioned little or no inconvenience.
