THINK'MBOBBIES

● And then, now that the first chapter of the festivities has been closed, we pause and offer condolences and congratulations.

● America's answer to hitler is shown in the great agricultural products produced this year. And, too, Texas farmers are not the only state agriculturalists who are hitting the ball.

● As the wheels of the clock roll around we are wondering why lamentations are noticeable here, and yonder. Can it be possible, neighbor, that you lost your vote – that you voted for the loser?

● We are now in a new area of time. Last Saturday produced a change, brimming by jubilant to some, and to others, a painful disappointment, and now the race is on for the 1944th, which falls on Saturday, August 22.

● Most people wonder what is going to be the government's final attitude toward the convicted enemy spy. Is the government to go ahead and spend more than a week's time attempting to prove a spy is guilty, and then ah, issue a parole?

● And still, in spite of the duration shortage of many pleasures, it's noticeable that the fatalities are headlined in all the daily papers. As we have always said, the automobile is not dangerous, it is the human handling the steering wheel and pressing the prong hot foot.

● College Station agricultural agents are advising against burning of wheat stubble. To this, this writer adds we have never seen burned over land that was worth what it was before burning from an agricultural standpoint. We've seen thousands of acres of burned over land, and, to quote that famous Minnesota Swedish U. S. Senator, Knute Nelson, "Farm on that ground! Hell, you couldn't raise either Hell or Swedes thereon."

ENGLISH AS SHE IS SPOKE

Lord Louis Mountbatten, head of the Commandos, has a pet expression to the effect that something of which he approves is "all tickety boo." And in case Americans do not understand this outrageous piece of English, it should be explained that it means "oke-doke." Christian Science Monitor

CELEBRATED BIRTHDAY VOTING FOR FAVORITES

Rev. J. S Denny passed the 74th milestone of his Saturday.

He was speaker Sunday morning at the memorial service at the Methodist church, for Tom Copple who died in Uncle Sam's service a few weeks ago.

CAR WRECK INJURES COLMESNEIL COUPLE

Price Davis with Mrms. J. E. Hopson of near Colmesneil was in a serious wreck Sunday night when the car which Mr. Hopson was driving struck the railing of a bridge between Jasper and Newton. Approaching the bridge, Mr. Hopson slapped on the brake as another car approached the bridge from the opposite direction; the brakes locked and threw the car into the railing of the bridge, wrecking it and seriously injuring Mr. Hopson's hip, and caused cuts and bruises for all. They were hurried to the Jasper hospital.

I THANK YOU!

For the splendid response to my appeal for your vote and influence during the campaign just closed, I thank you.

To each of you, my friends, I am deeply appreciative and the consideration shown will be a pleasant memory for me.

WHAT HAS become of the Republican phrase, "Politics are adjourned"?

IF YOU imagine Yukon Territory is a part of the United States, you're all wet. It is a part Canada.

GRAND OPERA—we imagine Mussolini wishes he and his country had stuck to grand opera and let hitler's bums produce the war tunes.

HIGHWAY PATROL Chief Hill Foreman reported that arrests and warnings by the Highway Patrol men increased 22.5% over last June from 18,327 to 22,460.

WHEN YOU go to a restaurant and order a wimpy what do you expect to get? Nope, you are wrong again. A wimpy is a hamburger.

WOULD YOU believe it the word up has more meanings than any other word. We read, the other day that The Winston Sunphfied Dictionary showed up with 82 separate meanings.

IT'S AN ill wind that blows nobody good." Because of gasoline rationing, a church, which has been closed for 20 years in a small town in New York State, has been re-opened. Steering Wheel.

WHAT KIND of a response would you get in this plan of advertising? Wanted as many defense workers as possable to tell all about the government's secrets —when off duty? Apply to hitler & co., anywhere.

WELL, WELL, the campaign staged primarnally by Jimmie and Dan came to an end, as far as the first primary is concerned last Saturday. About the only charge not hurled at O'Daniel was murder—And to think these two men aspired to Congress.

I'M BORED with keeping a stiff upper lip. I want to develop a stiff uppercut. I'm tired of being made to feel sad. I want the experience—the purging, marshaling, driving experience of being made to feel mad. Fighting mad, ah, in the army.

SUPPOSE SOME of the high pressure (?) men in Washington, who, as a matter of fact, are political appointees, merely clerks themselves, indispensible (?) to the Washington set-up, and who, as a matter of fact are 3rd, 4th, 5th and, mayhap, the 8th assistant to the second assistant manager, were to be conscripted into Uncle Sam's army. Would that bunch of political feathers fly here, there and yonder?

IN EVERY war we have ever had, the same cowardly pack is found cringing far behind the fighters and clamoring for peace, though it might be peace without honor. Luckily for the United States we have always had men of strong hearts and abiding faith in high places to deny the pleas of the poltroons. Nevertheless it is something to be guarded against. This is going to be a long war, perhaps longer than any of our chieftains anticipate. It may last anywhere from three to five years. It must last until the enemy is defeated. The whole easy way of American life will change and privation and downright hardship may be our portion. Great sorrow will pobably visit thousands of our homes throughout the grimly terse announcements from the war and navy department of death action. It is in the darkest hours that the cowards will murmur.

DUBING WORLD War No. 1 everybody with anything to sell hiked his price about 2½ times. There was one bunch of men who were told by Uncle Sam what he could charge—we have reference to wheat producers. We know, because we were operating in a wheat country. The government subject the price for a bushel of wheat. It hurt, too, when these producers found it necessary to have a new pair of shoes. They paid as high as $17. Saturday's papers told the world 125,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat was to be sold at 93 cents. Parity is a price estimated to give the farmers the same relative purchasing power they enjoyed in a base period used in 1909-14. This 125,000,000 bushels of wheat is to be released for feed for livestock as well as for industrial uses. Feed wheat to live stock with thousands of men, women and children who are starving to death in the hitler overrun countries? It does not listen right.

IN THESE days of Red Cross work it is timely that The Booster publishes a life history of the one woman, more than all other humans combined, Clara Barton, who actually started Red Cross organization and work. It will be of interest to local Red Cross workers, as well as the younger folks who are now getting the idea of something about Red Cross work.

DRYING VEGETABLES AND FRUITS

During the present emergency, every opportunity is being taken to preserve the surplus food, and since drying does not call for sugar, metal or rubber, this form of preservation is coming into its own. Mrs. Fanye S. Tungate, Tyler County Home Demonstration agent, proudly displays two racks for drying and several jars of dried vegetables.

More vitamins are retained, the flavor and quality is higher when products are handled and dried speedily. The vegetables are pre-cooked in steam to retain the food value as well as flavor and color, then placed either in the sun or by heat. When the food is dried it is rigid and brittle. Stir occasionally each day for several days. Then store in small amounts in a lard can or large stone jar.

To cook dried foods, soak one-half to three hours in 6 to 8 times as much water. The food is more delicious when simmered instead of boiling.

NAVAL DISTRICT RECRUITING

It was announced by Lieut. J. F. Beebe, of the Houston District Naval Recruiting station, that all men who are subject to Selective Service between the ages of 17 and 50, even though they have registered their Induction Notice, still have an opportunity to volunteer for Naval Service.

Enlistments by volunteers for the past two or three months have far exceeded expectations. During the month of May when enlistments were opened for men to aveage the "U. S. S. Houston", it was really a pleasure to see the interest shown by every Red Blooded American who came forward and volunteered for this cause. The U. S. Navy with all this grand response, has one of the most stupendous jobs to perform and thousands of additional men are required.

There remains thousands of vacancies, in the U. S. Navy Construction Corps, known as the "Seabees," both for white and negro skilled men. The "Seabees" construction officer will be in the U. S. Navy Recruiting station, Post office building, Houston, on Aug. 6, 7, 8, for the purpose of interviewing white applicants, and negro applicants for the Seabees.

Men interested in having an interview with this officer should see their nearest recruiting substation or contact the official Navy Recruiting Traveling station Wagon in their district and investigate, obtaining transportation into Houston. All applicants must have at least three letters of recommendation as to their ability and experience in their line of work.

BOMBS BURST ONCE By GRANVILLE CHURCH

W.N.U. SERVICE

Presently a downriver boat snuggled into its berth with the ease of a ferry. It gave a pair of toots, delicate as a French railway train's, as the gangplank was wheeled to the vessel's side and the job of berthing completed.

Senor Montaya was unmistakable —tall, erect of bearing, very clearly the gente de pelo, the gente principal of these countries. He wore faultless whites, a crisp panama on curly black hair. Straight from the ship to the little group he came.

"My sincere apologies, Mr. Curtis, Mrs. Curtis," were his first words. He spoke with very little accent, though the timbre of his voice betrayed his Spanish origin. He made a deep bow to Lee, held out his hand to Curt. "I have been more than busy since—ah, Mr. Mitchell's unfortunate happening. You have discovered by now the reason I need a new Chief Engineer, no?"

An opportunity to study the other man came as the senor stooped to make a fuss over the boys. Apolonio Montaya was a suave gentleman whose bearing, as well as his speech, showed considerable culture. Certainly he was Spanish American, as the name implied, but of what country it wasn't so easy to decide.

Lee took the boys in hand, holding their interest with the selection of a gigantic, gaudy straw hat for each of them, from stock piled a dozen high on a vendor's head, while Senor Montaya led Curt on a quick survey of the docks and facilities here.

In the sheds, two items instantly caught the eye—two boxes forty feet long, ten wide, and quite thin for these dimensions. Curt cocked a brow at them.

Montaya said briefly, "Spare wings. We have two planes. One of them was tied up for weeks once by a damaged wing, so now we have spares on hand."

"I heard you've had considerable use from your planes."

"Yes," was the monosyllable reply.

"What make are they?"

It was a conversational question. It would have made no difference one way or another what Montaya answered, yet the question brought a sharp, quick glance from eyes that were beady black here in the gloom of the big receiving shed—and a rotund vagueness in reply.

One end of the bodega was piled high with barrels bearing the stencil of a well-known chemical firm. Curt paused before them, looked them over with considerable interest. Lime.

"So you treat the soil before planting?" he asked. "Over-acid, I suppose, from centuries of flooding."

A frown definitely stamped Montaya's forehead at this, but was immediately chased away by a smile that showed even, white teeth.

"That, Mr. Curtis," the senor replied smoothly, "is a question that would come under the head of chemical research. We have a chemical expert, Dr. Toenjes, from Amsterdam. If he likes you, he may be willing to answer your questions. But I wouldn't count on it," he said, with another flash of teeth. "Dr. Toenjes is quite jealous of his theories, which I expect will produce more and better fruit than Associated across the river."

As Curt was turning this over in his mind, Senor Montaya pulled at his lower lip—a lip unusually red even for his swarthy skin.

"It would be well for me to say something now, Mr. Curtis," he continued, his words falling precise and clear. "I have secured the best men available for the salaries I can pay in each line of work. All I ask of each man is to produce results in his own field. This is fair enough, no? If problems arise which overlap into another department, those problems are taken up through my office. I do not encourage short cuts between departments.

"I expect you to work along with us in this fashion. You are responsible for the engineering work assigned to you, just as Dr. Toenjes is responsible as Agricultural Superintendent, just as Mr. Lannestock is responsible for aviation and Mr. Ryden for transportation."

"Lannestock? Ryden?"

"Most of our contract employees are Americans. These two are Swedish. I brought them here as pilots. But we no longer need two full-time pilots. As Mr. Ryden proved himself capable in transportation matters, I have given him charge of that department."

Curt had a long-established habit of fiddling with his pipe when mulling over some point that needed thought. He suddenly discovered he'd been stuffing it during this polite harangue. Since the senor while talking had been leading the way into the open, Curt now lit up, expelling a huge cloud of smoke before he said mildly, with a smile:

"All of which is by way of telling me to mind my own business? Well, that's all right. You've hired me for the engineering end of your venture, and that's where my interest lies. I'll try to curb my wandering curiosity."

Senor Montaya eyed Curt a moment.

"I am quite sure we shall get along, Mr. Curtis."

They took a rapid look-see in the port office, Montaya introducing Curt casually, then returned to Lee and the children, seated on their pile of luggage. The boys' leashes were on them again, much to their audible disgust.

A pair of quick toots now came from the river steamer that had been loading all morning, even as the planes arrived. The bosses of the [illegible] for we have much to do before the rainy season, and it has not gone too well. But certainly I did not want him to antagonize the workers.

"One can—ah, drive some men, others not. It is a fine point to know how far one can go with workers. When I saw the many enemies Mr. Mitchell was making, I thought, 'But this is unfortunate.' I feared—ah, on 'accident.' So it was happy for me that I led him into talk of competent engineers. You were one he mentioned above others. You see?"

Two hours of fighting the current upriver, and they found at Tempujo another modern dock, with a long floating stage built to allow for the rise of the river in flood-time. Now, the river at low point, the wharf towered high above them. Their baggage was swung upward in a cargo net, a deckhand riding the hook to avoid the stairs, while Curt and the others climbed the long flight of steps from the floating stage to the landing above.

Spread before them, on the only rise of land for miles along this side of the river, was a small town built arrowhead-fashion around a fan-shaped railroad terminus of storage tracks.

Montaya pointed out a centrally located bungalow. "Your Tempujo office, Mr. Curtis. There is sleeping accommodation there for you. There will be nights when you are unable to get back to San Alejo."

Montaya led the party to two motorcars, automobiles with flanged wheels to operate on the narrow-gauge railroad tracks. Side windows of the sedan bodies rolled completely into the framework, making all-weather cars for the variable climate.

Montaya ordered the two motor boys ahead with the baggage, while he drove the Curtises in the second car.

Off they sped across the flat, uninteresting country, spots of it burned over. The railroad was quite straight for several kilometers, the railbed rough, and the resultant jolting brought comments from Curt.

"We had to push the road through in quick time," Montaya explained. "Our ballast had to be flonted down the river on barges, but now that our rails have reached the mountains where we have a gravel pit, the roadbed is being leveled. You will find the upper end in better condition."

Far off on his right was what appeared to be a tremendous salt field, but he knew it couldn't be that. Lime, went his thoughts, laid by airplane before planting. Sure, the scientific approach.

It took forty minutes to reach San Alejo, and, as Montaya had promised, the latter part of the ride was smoother. They passed three section gangs at work on permanent ballasting, one gang cribbing a fill with interlocking bars of reinforced concrete.

THE FBI BOYS

In these dangerous days as never before, Americans have come to realize how lucky they are in having such an organization as the Federal Bureau of Investigation. As they wiped out the kidnapping racket some years ago we began to honor and to put them. The kidnapper got so they would rather play the part of FBI man than that of the gangster which really meant something. But with the growth of the post-war era there has been a growth in efficiency, of adequateness, in the FBI, and now we find ourselves depending on these boy scouts in a mighty tortress.

PUERILE POLITICS

As the war progresses, the political holiday, which was supposed to be one of the good fruits, has become a farce. The hatred has become a farce of anti-administration tactics by the administration seems to be second only to their hatred of Hitler, Mussolini and their partners in mass murder and the war. At any rate, some Old Guard Republican news papers are devoting far more space to arousing the administration than they are to attacking the enemy and urging full co-operation in the war effort. They forget that the President saw what was coming and warned the nation.—Wayne News (Dem.).

MISUSING WAR STAMPS

Very properly, the government has warned business men against the use of war savings stamps in lotteries. Just as the use of the American flag in private advertising detracts from the dignity of the national colors, the use of war stamps for gambling purposes for private gain would reflect on this patriotic form of investment.—Grayville, (Ill.) FARMING IT

Now they raise their turkeys upstairs in the barn at the Turkey World Experimentol Farm. Top sketch shows a bunch of poults going under an electric hover, surrounded by a temporary wire fence. These turkeys will never even see the ground, with its load of bacteria and worms.

The newer dairy barns have iron pipe bumpers to prevent cows from tossing hay forward out of the mangers. Many dairymen are achieving the same results by stretching a tight twisted wire along the manger.

Right center sketch shows the winning pen of 10 White Leghorn hens in the New York state laying contest. In 51 weeks they laid a total of 2,850 eggs. If the contest had been for a full year they probably would have laid 2,905 eggs, which is as many eggs as 36 average hens would lay in the same length of time.

Mark Miller, farming it down in the poor land of White County, Illinois, beat all the ton-litter experts twice in a row. His 9 Chester White sows produced 20,610 lbs. of pigs from their spring litters—and then they produced 18,005 lbs. of pigs from their fall litters of the same year. It seems Farmer Mark Miller must have the right idea.

LEST WE FORGET

On July 9, 1940, Republican Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio said: "The idea that we can help democracy by going to war seems to me fantastic. It would be more likely to destroy American democracy than to destroy dictatorships in the totalitarian countries. I see no reason why we cannot remain a democratic nation even if the totalitarian ideas prevail in other parts of the world.

On July 9, 1940, Republican Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota said: "Little as we may like some portions of this earth and some peoples and some leaderships, we are going to have to get along with them, whether we like it or not. The utter extinction of liberty from the face of the earth may result if we do not stay home and mind our own business.

On July 25, 1940, Republican Senator Arthur Vanderberg of Michigan said: "The whole effort is to rush to conscription. So far as I am concerned, I will not be rushed into conscription in peacetime in America unless it is the last recourse instead of the first.'

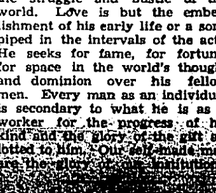
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Essential in the equipment of every Soldier, Sailor, Marine or Flyer is a first aid kit, consisting of bandages and antiseptics for instantaneous use. These materials are packed into a compact box and cost about $1.50 each.



We need millions of these first aid kits for emergency treatment. They are also used by Red Cross workers, in field hospitals and wherever needed until hospital treatment may be obtained. Even a child could buy one or more of these kits through purchase of War Stamps. Buy War Bonds and Stamps every pay day and invest at least ten percent of your income in these government securities. MAN—THE KIND THAT MAKES AMERICAN SOLDIERS

Man is that name of power which rises above all, and gives to everyone the right to be that which God meant he should be. It is better to be a self-made man, filled up according to God's original pattern. It is not a question of how much a man knows, but what use he can make of what he knows; not a question of what he has acquired and how he has trained, but of what he is and what he can do. Man is the creature of interest and imagination. His nature leads him forth into the struggle and bustle of the world. Love is but the embellishment of his early life or a song piped in the intervals of the acts. He seeks for fame, for fortune, for space in the world's thought and dominion over his fellow men. Every man as an individual is secondary to what he is as a worker for the progress of his kind and the glory of the gift allotted to him. One self-made man [illegible]

AH'S BEIN' TOOKEN

"Does yo' take this woman for yo' lawfully wedded wife?" asked the colored parson, glancing at the diminutive, watery eyed, bow-legged bridegroom, who stood beside 210 pounds of feminine assurance.

DISEASES CARRIED BY THE FILTHY FLY

Thousands of children and adults die every year from diseases carried by the fly. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, summer complaint, cholera, intestinal diseases, and frequently death follow closely in the trail of the common fly.

The control of the fly menace comes at top of the host of necessary public health measures which should be applied by every city and community in the State, and the most effective measure for control is to prevent breeding places. Flies breed in filth, and about eight days are required to complete a lite cycle. During her life time of several months, one house fly lays from 600 to 1000 eggs. Thus it can be easily seen that in a season which usually begins in the spring of the year, the descendants from one fly number countless thousands.

To eliminate flies, the breeding places must be destroyed. Manure piles, garbage, and other organic filth furnish the requirements of warmth, moisture, and food necessary for the propagation of the fly. Flies should be kept from contact with food or drink or utensils in which such food and drink are prepared and served. Likewise, they should be kept from access to privy vaults where they pick up the infections which they later spread to humans by contact with the food and drink and by unwashed hands and utensils.

See that your windows, doors, and porches are screened so that the stray fly from some careless neighbor will not molest your family. See that your grocer keeps meat, vegetables, and fruit screened from flies. Organize health measures to destroy the breeding places, control the flies' access to your homes and food, and establish standards of cleanliness in your community that will eliminate the fly.

"Section 49a. It shall be the duty of the Comptroller of Public Accounts in advance of each Regular Session of the Legislature to prepare and submit to the Governor and to the Legislature upon its convening a statement under oath showing fully the financial condition of the State Treasury at the close of the last fiscal period and an estimate of the probable receipts and disbursements for the then current fiscal year. IMPORTANT NOTICE

All retail merchants in Tyler county were reminded today by Clyde E. Smith of the Price control division of the local Rationing Board that they must file with the local board by August 10 a list showing cost-of-living articles and their ceiling prices which the merchant has added to his stock since July 1.

The filing of such lists by the 10th of each month is made mandatory by the General Maximum Attention also is called to the Price Regulation, No. 1, fact that many retail merchants still have not filed the initial listing of cost-of-living commodities and their ceiling prices, which should have been in the hands of the Tyler County rationing board not later than July 1.

Failure to file that list is a violation of the general maximum price regulation and Mr. Smith has been advised by the state office of price administration staff it is now making a field survey to determine how many merchants have not filed this list.

From Virginia

Senator Harry F. Byrd, the gentleman from Virginia who has repeatedly told the White House how two billions annually can be saved in non-essential expenditure has his axe whetted for fancy booddoggling in the office of Civilian Defense.

Byrd's latest discovery reveals that the OCD is fostering a campaign by which it proposes to enroll 25,000,000 people in bowl-activities as part of its physical fitness campaign. While not opposed to bowling, the senator can't bring himself to understand how such a program can be seriously undertaken by a federal agency when such pressing matters as planes, tanks, ships, guns and ammunition demand the undivided attention and resources of our government.

Just a thought here, if we lose this war, we will have no homes to protect, no machinery to use, no cars to drive, so give until it hurts. We can give better for our American boys than be forced to give to the Japs or Nazis. This is no joke.

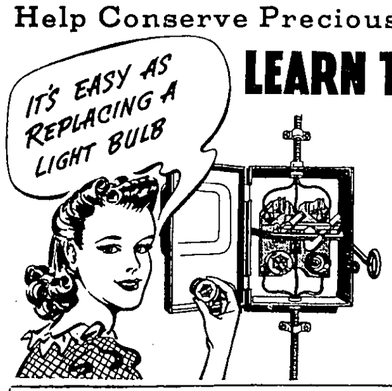
Help Conserve Precious Tires! Automotive Equipment!

LEARN TO REPLACE "BLOWN" FUSES



Many folks always have replaced their own fuses. Those who haven't can be a big help in saving rubber and automotive equipment by doing it themselves from now on. It's easy . . . and not only do you eliminate the wear and tear of extra trips by our service trucks; you also help yourself by restoring service immediately without waiting for the serviceman . . . who may be delayed these busy wartime days.

Here's How To Do It!

If Lights Go Out, check with your neighbors to see if their service is also off. If not, look for a blown fuse, as the cause of the trouble is probably in your own home.

Pull Cords From Outlets. If you're not sure what caused the fuse to blow, disconnect all appliance and extension cords.

Turn Off Main Switch. Stand on a dry surface. Set main switch at "OFF" position, so no electricity will flow through fuses. Main switch is usually on fuse box, but may be separate from same.

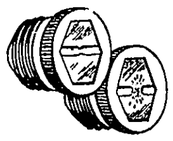
Remove Blown Fuse. Replace blown fuse with a new fuse of same size . . . generally 15 amperes for household circuits.

Turn On Main Switch. If new fuse blows again and you cannot locate the trouble call an electrician or serviceman.

Examine All Cords. Before reconnecting appliance or extension cords, look for breaks in insulation or loose connections that may have caused "short" and blown fuse. Repair or replace same to prevent a repetition of the trouble.

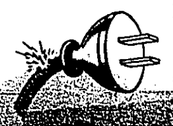
Never Use Substitutes. Never replace a blown fuse with a penny or with a fuse of too high an amperage. It's dangerous. Always keep a few extra fuses of right size on hand.

HOW TO TELL A "BLOWN" FUSE



Notice metal link under window of fuse. It is designed to carry a measured amount of current. When a circuit is overloaded or "shorted," the link melts or "blows out," and the current stops. The melted link and scorched spot under window indicate a blown fuse.

WHY FUSES "BLOW"



Fuse "blow outs" are usually due to wornout, damaged or loosely-connected appliance cords, or to circuits overloaded with too many appliances and lights. Without fuses your house wiring
