Make the Most of Your Refrigerator in the War Against Waste

Follow These Pointers for Better Food Preservation

Don't eat fresh meat as soon as it comes from market and wrap with clean dry cloth but do not wash until ready to use. Wrap loosely in waxed paper (with ends open) and store in meat keeper or de-frosting tray.

Wash and freeze meat if you plan to keep it longer than two or three days.

Wash fish and seafood in waxed paper and store in or directly beneath freezing unit. Use as quickly as possible.

Ground fresh meat should be wrapped and frozen if not to be used day of purchase. It will keep longer if frozen in finely divided form.

Store quick-freeze foods in freezing unit. Do not try to refreeze thawed foods.

Store eggs in middle compartment of refrigerator. Do not wash egg before storing as it removes natural protective coating.

Spread tender, skinned fruit on lower shelf of refrigerator to prevent browning.

Do not wash or stem berries. Spread out on shallow dish or put in colander to prevent mold. Avoid bruising.

Wash, drain and place vegetable in crisper. Refrigerate as quickly as possible to prevent vitamin loss.

Never store bananas in refrigerator. They keep better at room temperature.

Never pour milk or cream back into bottles. Keep in covered jar or pitcher.

Keep opened cans of condensed or evaporated milk under refrigeration or wrap at fresh milk.

Keep butter in covered dish away from foods with strong odors.

Store cheese in covered container to prevent drying. A thin coat of butter on each side also helps.

Remove paper wrappings from all foods before freezing. Foods freeze better.

Keep leftovers and all liquids covered to protect flavor and vitamin content.

Wrapped bread and coffee in light containers will keep fresh longer if kept in refrigerator.

Always keep warm food compartment of refrigerator clean.
