Hats off to the People who Produce your Electric Light and Power

The Charles A. Coffin Foundation confers a special citation for distinguished wartime achievement on the ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER INDUSTRY

Faced with unprecedented demands, the Electric Light and Power Industry has met every war-production requirement without delay and without impairment of its peacetime services to the public. This achievement merits the appreciation not only of American industry but of the entire nation.

THIS CITATION is rightly merited—for here is a branch of industry that has done a remarkable job that has not been generally recognized.

If electric power should fail, or if it be too little or too late, the disastrous effects would strike all America. Vital machines would be motionless. Millions of homes would be cold—and an eerie blackout would descend over the land.

But, electricity has not failed. Rather, in 1943 twice as much power was produced as in the year before the war—with the minimum of new facilities—and despite large losses of skilled employees to the Armed Services.

In the words of J. A. Krug, Director, Office of War Utilities of W.P.B., "Power men—public and private—should be proud of the job that has been done in providing power supply. Power has never been too little or too late."

We of General Electric, who have built a large part of the electric equipment which generates, distributes and uses the electric power of America, take pride in the way this equipment is standing up under the strain of "forced draft" wartime operation.

What is the Charles A. Coffin Foundation?
THE PURPOSE of the Charles A. Coffin Foundation is to encourage and reward distinguished achievement in the electrical field by conferring recognition to leading power and utility companies for intelligent service to the public by fellowships, by awarding graduate students, and by the grant of funds for research work at technical schools and colleges.
Establishment of the awards was announced in 1937 and was first presented in 1938.
On May 16, 1943, Charles A. Coffin in his 78th year retired from the active leadership of the General Electric Company. Mr. Coffin has been identified with the development of the electrical industry since 1878 through the formation and growth of the General Electric Company, of which he has been the president and leader for thirty years.
An expression of appreciation of Mr. Coffin's great work was given by the General Electric Company in 1941 in the form of a special award and with the wish that his distinguished leadership and contributions to the electrical industry should be a source of inspiration to all who follow.
