YOUR REFRIGERATOR MOTOR Twice Each Year
If you have the open or belt driven type of refrigerator unit, the motor should be oiled twice each year. Sealed unit motors need no oiling. A light motor oil should be used, but never use oil as light as sewing machine oil. S.A.H. 20 or 30 weight oil is the best grade available at your filling station is recommended. Oil should be fed slowly into the oil cups supplying front and rear bearings until both cups are filled. The two bearings are the only parts of motor that require oiling. Over oiling can damage a motor as well as under oiling, so do not oil oftener than once each six months. The motor will date last oiled or reuse date inside unit compartment. Then you will know when it is time to oil again.
