THINK BOBBIES

Ever stop to think that the word American ends with I CAN?

Every war is a national calamity whether it be a civil or foreign war.

Nothing is more than just a word, but it is the thought behind it that makes it a word. The word American ends with I CAN.

The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing.

A matter of new point. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing.

The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing. The larger we are, the more things we are capable of doing.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

- 1. The word independence is defined by the absence of fear and the will to depend on the absence of information and the absence of them.
- 2. Let all your words be like the flowers of a garden, sweet and fragrant, and let your actions be like the leaves of a tree, green and fresh.
- 3. Right motives are the foundation of thought, and strength and freedom to speech and action.
- 4. Independent thought is the only preparation for a proper study of the thought of others.
- 5. It is easy to be a world leader after the world's opinion is easy to follow. It is hard to be a world leader when the world's opinion is hard to follow.
- 6. There is often a much independent nature in the world, as in the case of the world's opinion.

PULPWOOD

Important in Peace as in War!

Few products are playing a more vital role in winning the war than pulpwood. And the South is proud of the fact that about half the nation's supply of this essential war material comes from this area.

Out of war-time developments will come a greatly enlarged field for pulpwood products and the South can look forward to a vast post-war market for this important crop.

Important in quality

Only the best is good enough for our boys, and you can't make the best munitions and supplies from wood that is rotted, charred or excessively crooked and knotty.

Make every axe-stroke count. Cut only wood that is sound and straight.

A WAR-TIME JOB WITH A POST-WAR FUTURE

MR. ROOSEVELT SAID

For three long years I have been going up and down this country preaching that Government should not take on too much business. I shall not stop that preaching. As an immediate program of business we must develop a business which we must substitute necessary functions that are not sufficiently essential in government. In fact, the continuation of government business, in our mind, must substitute necessary functions of government, and like the private citizens, give us business which we can no longer afford." (He said that, however, in 1932)

WHAT PRICE---One Pair of Eyes?

Those bright, sparkling eyes of childhood! Help them keep their sparkle---their clear, perfect vision. One school child in five has lost part of that sparkle because of defective vision. More than half the people over 35 have eyesight troubles. Why not conserve that precious eyesight by following these four common-sense rules?

1. Do all reading, sewing, etc. work at good playing 20/20 or a good (far) source, proper light.
2. Avoid glare from the sun. Don't sit facing the sun. Close your eyes.
3. Avoid reading when tired. Don't read in bed.
4. Avoid reading when eyes are tired.

New Style Suit—Save for War Bonds

The what-to-wear problem is easily answered with a well-fitting dressmaker suit in your wardrobe. The one shown here has the shoulder pads, a skirt with more fullness than last spring's silhouette complements the picture. This suit in your wardrobe will make you the talk of the town. The pattern is obtainable at your local store. The pattern on the suit you make means more War Bonds for you.

NO RESULTS EXPECTED. A man appeared in a newspaper office and asked an interesting question for the return of his wife's pet cat. "I don't know what bit of money for a cat," he said, "I won't have to pay it."

The INVASION of GERMANY Meets Stiff Resistance

By WAR STAFF EDITOR

ON September 14th, the invasion of Germany began. American troops crossed the border into Germany at Aachen, breaking through the Siegfried Line of fortifications known as "Westwall" which extends along the German frontier from the Dutch border to Seltford. Since the breakthrough, the Normandy peninsula in France, 42 days ago, Allied armies have traveled as much as 100,000 miles since the invasion of Europe 102 days ago. They have liberated the entire west of France, Belgium and Holland. The American units advanced a front which held through the main defenses of the Siegfried Line and Westwall and drove to within a few miles of the Rhine River. From Westwall to the sea, six great Allied armies were driving forward. A seventh special airborne army was poised for vertical attack. And everywhere the flag around the Wehrmacht was tightening. Its own forces were in rearing their heads and were moving northward through the Balkans into Hungary. Allied troops in Italy were stepping up pressure in the Gothic Line, the outer wall of the Axis nations that had entered the war as Germany's allies only in Hungary, Romania.

Drive Toward Philippines
Admiral William F. Halsey's Third Fleet planes sank or damaged at least 15 Japanese vessels ranging from warships to small craft in another tremendous American blow in the Philippines. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced September 20th.

The attack, directed against planes that were shipping in the Visayas Sea, Central Philippines, followed Halsey's strikes Sept. 20, 21, in the Manila area in which 40 enemy ships, and a small craft were sunk and 46 damaged. Further destruction of enemy shipping was reported by Capt. Douglas MacArthur whose Third Squadron, 7th Air Force, sank a 10,000-ton transport and damaged a 4,000-ton freighter, transport in the Sulu Archipelago, west of Manila on the Philippines.

Japanese aircraft destroyed by the fortifications was built by Adolf Hitler from 1936 to 1939. Through the years when Hitler was screwing German courage up to war, these defenses had played an important part in Nazi propaganda. They guaranteed the Fatherland it was declared against invasion from the west. The fortifications were guarded by saber-toothed tank traps, minefields and barbed wire entanglements. Each pillbox was so placed that its fire protected its neighbor. These small defense points were grouped to guard larger forts containing heavier weapons.

They were guarded by saber-toothed tank traps, minefields and barbed wire entanglements. Each pillbox was so placed that its fire protected its neighbor. These small defense points were grouped to guard larger forts containing heavier weapons.

Since D-day last June 6, the Germans have lost 400,000 men in the west. It was announced including 300,000 captured, 100,000 killed and 200,000 prisoners of action. The loss of 300,000 men is a heavy blow. It was believed that the total loss of the German army in the west would be 500,000 men. The loss of 300,000 men is a heavy blow. It was believed that the total loss of the German army in the west would be 500,000 men.

Continued resistance, he added, is detrimental to the Reich, since it means additional destruction with the final result will be negative from the German viewpoint. However, while the Reich will hold the reins in the West, the agents have nothing to gain by surrendering.

General Eisenhower disclosed officially the existence of organized resistance units inside Germany, and implied the possibility of them. He mentioned the 14,000,000 foreign slave laborers in the Reich to 40,000,000 according to plan.

He pointed them in a broadcast that the Allies already are supplying some of their number with weapons to be used against their Nazi overlords.

He pointed them in a broadcast that the Allies already are supplying some of their number with weapons to be used against their Nazi overlords.

COST OF FLYING PRIVATE PLANE
The C. A. A. estimates present flying costs for small private planes at $1.00 an hour (fixed overhead costs at $840 a year. At these rates 600 hours would cost $1,740.

These figures will undoubtedly be lowered enough to permit increasing numbers to own and operate planes, but costs will have to be reduced sharply to bring private flying to a level of more than a small hobby. Costs will be increased, moreover, because take-off, landing and storage requirements necessitate use of auxiliary automobile transportation.

The combined air road vehicle and helicopter type have not been produced in commercial quantities thus far. Conservative estimates place probable market for private planes at not more than 10% of total prospective demand. (Guaranty Trust) - Post-War Headlines

FIRST AID for Wounded Warships

An American warship in action is manned by two crews of fighters. One crew fires the guns and runs the ship. The task of the other crew is to maintain and repair battle damages, helping the ship to stay in the fight. Damage control men work right alongside the gun crews, putting out fires that enemy shells have started, repairing damaged piping and machinery, and keeping the ship afloat if she is badly hit.

An American warship in action is manned by two crews of fighters. One crew fires the guns and runs the ship. The task of the other crew is to maintain and repair battle damages, helping the ship to stay in the fight.

A damage control party made its way to the turret top at once and poured heavy streams of water into the flames. The "Savannah" continued to fight, with one turret out of action.

Destructive Power of Naval Weapons
The destructive power of modern naval weapons is terrific. In a rush of an hour during the Battle of Guadalcanal, for instance, one American destroyer was sunk, one was blown up, another was dead in the water, and two were damaged. An American cruiser was in flames, two others had been badly holed, and a fourth cruiser was damaged so badly she had to leave the action. All of this happened in the length of time you may take to glance over a newspaper.

In spite of this wholesale destruction it was an American victory for our side sank 13 Jap ships and forced the rest to flee. Our losses might have been greater and the damage to the Japs much less except for our damage control technique that kept "as many men at as many guns for as long as possible."

The essence of damage control is speed in combatting each emergency. A bomb or shell that bursts open a tank of high test gasoline and sets it afire can start a conflagration that destroys the ship if the fire isn't attacked at once and successfully extinguished. A torpedo that blows open a ship's side can shatter a series of tanks that end in the ship's destruction five minutes or less after it strikes. The damage control party's job is to prevent such catastrophes.

Fog and Foam Used to Put Out Gasoline and Oil Fires
In extinguishing gasoline and oil fires, foam is the principal agent; with water fog as a coolant and a protective screen for the operating personnel.

In fires involving electrical equipment CO<sub>2</sub> is used as the principal medium of extinguishment, as it is non-injurious to electrical equipment and is not a conductor of electricity. Water fog also is used as a protective screen where necessary to make entry. Electrical equipment is de-energized as soon as possible to remove the primary cause of the fire. Water fog is a non-conductor of electricity up to 5,000 volts.

War vessels are compartmentalized so that only a portion of the hull is flooded when a torpedo blows a hole in the side below the water level. Damage control men aren't satisfied with simply strengthening the bulkheads by flooding compartments when the compartment is holed. They also fill with fire-resistant material the spaces between and bordering the bulkheads. They try to prevent the fire from spreading to other parts of the ship.

"HAPPY VAL'S" Last Bombing Raid

By LT. R. K. MARTIN, D.F.C.

WE'RE really going places now," Lieutenant Martin said. "What a difference these last few months have made. When we first arrived in England we didn't have any fighter escort to speak of. So we Fortresses and Liberators squadrons had to go it on our own."

"We were sort of a test case, I guess, but to prove that daylight bombing would work and yet keep our losses at a minimum. For the most part, we made short hit-and-run missions over targets on the French Channel coast. We'd fly in fast over places like St. Nazaire, Abberville, and the pig-breast pens at LaFleur. Then we'd let our bombs ride and high-tail it out of there."

Previous photographs of B-29 Superfortresses did not reveal the numbers in pictures. This turret (A) is equipped with 12 mm machine gun. All armaments in turret (B) are controlled by turret crew. Before German flyers had a chance to intercept or catch up with us. Of course, our crews were looking for a good scrap with the Nazi fighters because we figured our fighters would take care of anything. Also, we were anxious to give the German industrial targets a good pasting.

Well, pretty soon we got our chance. On missions over Kiel, Bremen, Bielefeld and the Ruhr, we found out for the first time that bombing was really going places. We were really going places now.

"HAPPY VAL'S" Last Bombing Raid

most of our bombs were set to explode. You'd think you could burst a tank usually fall out of formation sooner or later. Nowadays when that happens, the fighter escorts who with the crippled and straggling bombers would have had only a little more than a year ago. Usually that meant for us, another bomber which failed to return.

"Flak," he recalled, "caused our loss 'Happy Val.' She was my B-29, and we'd brought her over the States. She'd taken a bad beating and never lost a man in her crew. Despite the fact that we had our way back from raids on Frankfurt, Nuremberg and Paris, I remember her to Paris as being especially precious."

When we were in the air, we were always looking for a good scrap with the Nazi fighters because we figured our fighters would take care of anything. Also, we were anxious to give the German industrial targets a good pasting.

Well, pretty soon we got our chance. On missions over Kiel, Bremen, Bielefeld and the Ruhr, we found out for the first time that bombing was really going places. We were really going places now.

LITTLE FUN

Ahead of His
 He had been courting Maggie for several months without definitely committing himself. Finally, assuming that the girl was accepting the long period of probation with patience and forbearance, the lady lover pulled out a well-thumbed notebook one day, consulted it briefly, and said:
 "Maggie, I have been counting up your good points and I have already got to ten. When I get a dozen I'm going to ask you to marry me."
 "Well," replied Maggie, "I wish you took back. I have also been keeping account, and I've been putting down your bad points. I have 10 in my notebook already, and when it reaches 12 you go to marry the blacksmith!"

Hotting Even
 Four young men visiting the friend before the war, considering themselves exceedingly clever, had a Chinese servant upon whom they played all sorts of pranks. One night they invited him to the floor, but there was not a word of complaint or sign of retaliation. He brought them their coffee and breakfast as usual, smiling.

The next day they put some in the Chinaman's bed. But when he brought them their coffee and breakfast, there was no resentment in his attitude, and he smiled handsomely as usual. So the young men decided they would play no more tricks on a good fellow like that, and they told him so.
 "No more milk on the floor?" asked the Chinaman.
 "No."
 "No more gutter and in bed?"
 "No."
 "Vally well," he agreed, "with a genuine Chinese smile, then he no more spilled in coffee."

Three Was Contractors
 The story goes that three war contractors met in a saloon and after an evening of cocktails, dinner and talking over business, they decided on an entertainment called for the check. It came to something over $30.
 "Let me take it," said the first, "I'm in the 50 per cent excess profit tax bracket. If I didn't pay the check the government would get half of it any way, so the dinner really only costs me $15."
 "No," said the second, "let me take it. I'm in the 45 per cent bracket, so the dinner will only cost me $16.50."
 "Don't be funny," said the third, "I've got a contract. I can charge this to expense and make $1 on it."

 She went to the butcher for spare ribs and asked him to give her some ribs that had been cooked. She said she would settle for sausage or liver, the butcher insisted he had none to give. She pleaded for bacon, for meat balls, fat mutton, the butcher said: "Lady, I just ain't got mutton!"

Alert No. One
 With a free day ahead, a 4-B Army Signal in Australia decided to go on a kangaroo hunt. Armed with his favorite rifle, he climbed into the back of his jeep and instructed the young colored driver to take off across the prairie. Puzled but obedient, the colored soldier followed the directions, and in short order they were in hot pursuit of a large buck kangaroo by full light. The chase had proceeded for some 15 minutes, with the jeep lurching and plunging over the rough terrain, when the driver yelled back:

 It looked right from the start as if they were going to throw everything in the book at us. We'd only been over the continent half an hour when we saw the first chutes in the sky. After that things started to look like those new-war fireworks of the Germans making massed parachute jumps.
 The Huns seemed to come up in waves. They'd fly out on our wings, lobbing rockets at us, and looking for loosely flown squadrons or a single plane to pick on.

This went on for an hour or so, then, as we got nearer the target, they started pressing their attacks home. They'd peel off 25 or 30 at a time, flying in from all angles. They'd swoosh right through the screening and flying like madmen, then they'd dart on ahead, return and give off a special performance—often a group of headlong as a ship leading a formation, firing their cannon at the nose. Keep Fallow and Hen Apart
 Do not put your 14-month-old pullets in with laying hens as they will very likely be kept away from the feed pannels by the hens and there is always the possibility that they will become infected with disease or parasites that the older birds are able to withstand because of their age.
 It is, however, perfectly all right to feed them laying feed if you wish.

Pasture Raising Chickens
 Despite the cost of feed in well over half the total cost of producing chicken meat, Dr. M. A. # Texas Farm News Reports

A letter containing South-down breeders in 10 states, Woodrow W. Munn, Reagan county agricultural agent, reports that he plans to buy a carload of mutton lambs and ewes to use in a H. club work. The lambs will go into feed lots and the ewes will be used for range demonstrations.

Farmers in the vicinity of Hereford, Deaf Smith county, are reporting good crop prospects. Owen F. Linn reports a yield of 4000 bushels in the 100-acre area of early cotton. This crop grossed $14,000. Good crops also are reported by Dudley G. Dean and Archie Scott, who plant 20 acres of cotton in partnership with Leon Laffin.

The need for conserving every available pound of grain and legume seeds, to avert a serious threat to livestock, has been stressed by J. M. Cooper, chairman of the Rock county Agricultural Conservation Association. At a talk held on the AAA program, farmers are offered a payment of $3.70 for harvesting specified grass and legume seeds in Texas. This appropriation may make it possible for as much as an additional two million acres of seeds to be harvested.

Shipments of parasite insects which destroy the pink bollworm are being flown from Peru to Brownsville by Pan American World Airways. The Peruvian government is cooperating with the U. S. Department of Agriculture in aiding cotton farmers with the bollworm infestation. Approximately 550 of the insects are shipped in ventilated containers every two days and are being sent to Louisiana as well as Brownsville. Officials believe these insects may curb the impending threat to Texas cotton fields by preying on the pink bollworm.

THE CAT AND THE KID

The service drought and heat of July cut the popcorn yield in Pecosville (Wheeler county), almost half from a promising early crop. The sixteen carloads shipped from Pecosville brought about $25,000.

The Texas spring pig crop, up to June, 1944, is 28 percent less than was recorded in the corresponding period in 1943. E. M. Regenbrecht, wildlife specialist for the A. & M. College, Extension Service, believes that many growers were stampeded into reducing the 1944 production far below goals set by the government. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, a further reduction is forecast.

The Dublin Development Club (Deaf county) has purchased a three-star Jersey bull from C. D. Springer, of Temple (Bell county). The bull was purchased for $300. It was bred by George Black & Son, of Pasadena, N. Y. The bull is one of the best in the Dublin trade territory and was purchased for the Department of Herds in the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The bull is being used on the dairy farm of J. K. Green.

Minnesota rabbits, which have been reported to be attacking cotton fields in the El Paso area, are being reported to be attacking cotton fields in the El Paso area.

The better yields of irrigated Red Bluff were delivered to George W. Stewart, of Dallas county, for the sum of $1,000 according to W. C. Maudslayi, manager of the Red Bluff irrigation project. The calves were from the eighth 14-month old.

Rabbits are the major pest of the cotton crop in the El Paso area. A total loss because of low yields in the El Paso area is estimated at $3,750,000. A method is being developed to protect them from rabbits. Rabbits with comparatively high tails fall the plants were up to two feet and the beans indicated production of about a ton for the acre. The plants can be harvested with a binder and used as hay, or the beans only can be harvested.

Dichondra, the new winter grass which Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Mingo, of El Paso, imported from California, has been attracting much attention and there have been requests for further information. According to the El Paso Times, the grass never has to be cut, chokes out dandelions, grows in shade or sun and stays green the year round. Dichondra looks like a dark green-leaved rug. Mr. and Mrs. Mingo planted a flat one-fourth of an acre yard two years ago and now their large lawn is covered with it.

The supply of protein pellets for winter feeding of cattle and sheep will be increased, according to a new program which has been resolved by W. H. Kiet, chairman of the Wichita County Agricultural Conservation Committee.

The supply of protein pellets for winter feeding of cattle and sheep will be increased, according to a new program which has been resolved by W. H. Kiet, chairman of the Wichita County Agricultural Conservation Committee. The plan calls for a bonus allocation of protein meal to mixed seed manufacturers who will use it to produce pellets containing at least 20 percent protein. Protein meal allocations are based upon previous production history.

J. D. Wilson, who is farming near Northside (Wilbarger county), is growing 300.00 per acre with alfalfa seed. On 16 acres, Mr. Wilson harvested 270 pounds of seed per acre, an average yield for the county. The U. S. Department of Agriculture in an effort to replenish the nation's depleted seed supply is now making a subsidy payment of $3.50 per acre in addition to a two and one-half cent per acre.

W. J. Demmon, age 19 of the Home community, Jasper county, is taking up 4-1 club work under the educational direction of W. M. Mingo about where his father, W. J. Demmon, left off. The boy is beginning as a part time hand in the family ranch. He is learning how to use a tractor and a higher speed truck for most of the farm work. The father told Demmon that it is his ambition to keep his son to understand all of the details necessary to the successful operation of a ranch.

The groups of Texas county fair club boys who introduced Dallis, the variety, grass seed into the county in 1943, are being given a special award for their service to the county. The award is a $1,000.00 bonus payment to the county Agricultural Agent J. O. Double.

John Craft and his son, John Craft, Jr., of Sweetney, Deaf county, are recommending a new variety of grazing cattle to farmers who plant the alfalfa crop for feed purposes. The result of their demonstration is causing some other stockmen to follow their example. The Craft's say nothing before would go to seed in the winter. Mowing before frost will all give clover a much better chance to produce winter pastures. John Craft, Jr., is one of the outstanding 4-H club boys of Brazoria county and says the good pasture is one of the main reasons for such a good calf crop in his herd and also for his low feed cost.

La Vell and Della Gay Teague, age 14 and 12, and members of the El Paso girls 4-H club of Castro county, appreciate the new clothes in their bedroom because they earned the money to buy them and it's their only one in the house. Last summer they earned enough money to buy a new dress for the living room.

The best rice of the 1944 season in Texas has been produced by Leonard Chappell, of his Navidad rice farm near El Paso (Jackson county). He sold 2,000 bags to the El Campo Milling Co. at $5.00, the OPA maximum for Early Prolific. Chappell threshed out only a few bushels for a sample but later started threshing the 140-acre field. No substitute has been made on the per acre yield.

A record crop of grain sorghum in Texas has been forecast by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The wheat crop, too, the department said, is even greater than estimated. The picture was not optimistic for the corn and rice crops which were expected to drop more than two million bushels from the July average as drought and heat parched the fields. The per-acre yield is down three bushels from last year.

Texas had 218,000 colonies of bees in July 1, a slight increase over the number on the same date last year. The U. S. Department of Agriculture reported. The condition of the colonies on July 1 was 80 per cent of normal and the condition of honey plants was 75 per cent of normal. The department reported 519,000 colonies in the United States in 1943. The 1944 crop is expected to be 4,000,000 more than the 1943 crop.

Texas hybrid corn scores again. When Harvey Hinger, Lampasas county 4-H club boy, inquired last spring what seed crop would be best for finishing his 4-H club, county Agricultural Agent Row H. Jenkins recommended five acres of No. 1 Texas hybrid corn. But Harvey's father, who had grown seed crops from open pollinated varieties on his farm for several years, doubted the success of the venture. Recently Harvey reported to Jenkins that "I brought you a load on that corn deal. My crop beat me so badly that I asked you to tell me that next year he intends to plant only hybrid. Samples of Harvey's crop are on display in Lampasas."

YOUR CROWNING GLORY

By LOUISE SCHLITZ

Washing one's hair has come to be regarded as a routine job. When it is all in the past, provided one does not allow it to become a nuisance, it is a simple matter. For authorities simply don't advise one of two ways: the shampoo method of hair washing, however, and millions of women are still using the wrong method. This shampoo was first used by hair washers in the early 1900s. It was a simple matter of using a shampoo carrier with its formula. The first guide to success in the direction of the hair, the shampoo carrier, is applied directly to the hair and scalp before any water is added. Instead of two separate washings, one shampooing and one rinsing, the shampoo carrier and water are added together before the hair is ready for rinsing.

Another prepared shampoo advice will bring the hair back with water and not with a follow-up shampoo. This shampoo is not to be used after the shampoo carrier. Using too much shampoo is the main cause of itching difficulties. Use only half the shampoo you're used to in a cup for the first washing. Rub the shampoo into a lather with your fingers, and pour it over the hair and through the hair. Now use the remainder of the shampoo and this time give the scalp a strong massage with handfuls of suds.

Rinsing the shampoo through the second time, but now pour a lot of suds over the scalp. Do not rub the scalp with your fingers. Instead, use your hands to wash the hair and scalp. When thoroughly rinsed, and most of the shampoo out of your hair, with a bath towel, and if possible, brush the hair with a comb. This is the best way to keep your hair healthy and shiny.

Which formula is to remain, you should know. Hair washing. Why do we tropical and tropical hair washing? Because it is a simple matter of using a shampoo carrier with its formula. The first guide to success in the direction of the hair, the shampoo carrier, is applied directly to the hair and scalp before any water is added. Instead of two separate washings, one shampooing and one rinsing, the shampoo carrier and water are added together before the hair is ready for rinsing.

THE FAMILY WASHING

Just about a good thing is possible in the family job of doing the family washing. The following information, Washington, D. C., is a good one to have handy.

Even such helpful and necessary things as washing, mending and ironing are often neglected and done rather than being the cleaning process.

Washing, while often neglected, is the most important part of the cleaning process. It is the most important part of the cleaning process. It is the most important part of the cleaning process.

Washing enough soap should be used to make a suds two inches thick when the water is poured. If the suds are not too thick, the soap should be added.

In hot water washing, use hot water, not hot water. Use hot water, not hot water. Use hot water, not hot water.

MILK, A PROTECTIVE FOOD

Milk is a natural foundation on which to build a family meals. For packed into a quart of milk are a lot of essential food values that would be hard to get otherwise.

Calcium is one of the elements which is found in milk. It is the most important part of the cleaning process. It is the most important part of the cleaning process.

CHICKEN CANNING

Called hens are best for canning. Old birds stand the long processing and high temperatures necessary in meat canning, whereas young tender chickens, when canned, lose flavor and develop a stringy texture.

Can chicken with a pressure canner. Home economists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture strongly urge safe processing in a reasonable time, takes a temperature of 250 F., far higher than boiling. Only way to get this high temperature is to hold steam under pressure.
