

POST-WAR FLYING IN YOUR HOME TOWN

Freedom of Personal Flight
The development of aviation has been rapid and many of the rules and regulations made only for military use to govern it are already obsolete. Not only are many restrictions obsolete, but regulations could be made less strict, and in some cases, eliminated entirely. The Federal Aviation Administration is now studying the possibility of making such changes. It is expected that in the near future, the rules governing flight will be more liberal and that flying will be more popular than ever before.

Commercial flight of passengers and cargo has been limited to those few airlines which are licensed. It is expected that in the near future, the rules governing flight will be more liberal and that flying will be more popular than ever before. More Power to the Farmer

Producers of Food for Victory. One reason for America's wartime food production is the extensive use of labor-saving electricity on the farm. As its part in providing more power for food production, the industry has greatly expanded its facilities for serving farms and ranches of rural communities throughout the west. Since Pearl Harbor, over 3,000 new rural customers have been added to our lines. Numerous additional extensions to serve rural users within practical reach of existing lines in our territory have been surveyed and are scheduled for completion as rapidly as manpower and material shortages will permit. Today, one customer of every five we serve is a rural customer and the percentage is growing steadily. On the farm, as in business and industry, C. P. & Co. power is making for Victory.
