PULPWOOD

a good business to STAY in!

Many people around here started cutting pulpwood during the war as a patriotic measure. They also found it was good business.

We believe pulpwood production will continue to be a good business in peace-time as in war-time for both full-time and part-time producers.

It is a business with no reconversion problem. There are shortages of all kinds of civilian needs that will keep the industry going at top speed for a long time to come. And beyond that are a lot of new industrial uses for pulpwood developed during the war. Every indication points to continued high demand and good prices for pulpwood.

Thunderhead

MARY ONARA
STORY BY

Thunderhead had learned to keep his head out of the rain.

Ken regarded the gray "Thunderhead" horse with a look of interest. He had never seen one like this before in the country of Oklahoma. It was a white horse with a dark head and neck, and a dark blaze on its forehead. The horse was standing in a paddock, and Ken was looking at it from a distance. The horse's head was turned towards Ken, and he could see its eyes clearly. The horse's coat was white, and it had a dark mane and tail. The horse's legs were white, and it had dark hooves. The horse's body was white, and it had a dark patch on its neck. The horse's head was dark, and it had a dark blaze on its forehead. The horse's ears were dark, and it had dark eyes. The horse's mouth was dark, and it had dark teeth. The horse's nose was dark, and it had dark nostrils. The horse's body was white, and it had a dark patch on its neck. The horse's head was dark, and it had a dark blaze on its forehead. The horse's ears were dark, and it had dark eyes. The horse's mouth was dark, and it had dark teeth. The horse's nose was dark, and it had dark nostrils.

"That old one," pointed Rob. "Your share is perfectly safe. You'll have a fine little horse out of that. Remember, when the best pastures are over, you'll have a fine horse." Rob's eyes were fixed on the horse. The horse was white with a dark head and neck, and a dark blaze on its forehead. The horse's ears were dark, and it had dark eyes. The horse's mouth was dark, and it had dark teeth. The horse's nose was dark, and it had dark nostrils. The horse's body was white, and it had a dark patch on its neck. Eye Work

Give him better light for easier seeing

Rightly seven per cent of what a child learns he absorbs through his eyes. That's why good light for home study is so important. For better seeing, use your child do these four things: (1) Make sure bulbs in his reading or study lamp last at least 100 hours. (2) See that lamp is properly aimed to prevent glare from exposed bulbs. (3) Place lamp close enough to work area for maximum light. (4) Have enough general room illumination to prevent harsh contrast of bright light and deep shadows. Better light means better grades!

HOW MANY $'S IN MY FARM TREES?

HOW MANY $'S IN MY FARM TREES?

These boys are learning how to estimate the amount of wood that can be cut from standing trees. They have products from their farm woods. This is one of the study groups of 30 Georgia boys attending the recent one week Forestry Training Camp held at the Lenoir-Walker State Park near Waynesboro, Georgia. The camp was sponsored by the Southern Forestry Extension Association as a part of its program to encourage and demonstrate the proper care and development of the South's forests. The camp was financed by the two Georgia member mills of the Association, Union Bag & Paper Corporation and United States Paper Company, due to their interest in this education. The U. S. P. Co. Division of the Southern Extension Service provided the Georgia Division of Forestry, Reclamation and Soil Conservation Service with equipment and technical assistance in the field of forest management. The Georgia Division of Forestry, Reclamation and Soil Conservation Service is pleased to have participated in the camp and to have seen the boys' interest in the study of forestry.
