POLIO MAY OCCUR WITH NO PARALYSIS

Abortive cases of poliomyelitis may occur without a patient showing paralysis, Dr. Burke Dewberry, city health and welfare director, said today in correcting a story which appeared in yesterday's issue.

The newspaper said a total of 47 cases of poliomyelitis have originated in Fort Worth through July 20, of this year. Forty-one of these individuals have shown muscular weakness or paralysis, he said, but "those first symptoms and accompanying laboratory findings are considered sufficient for a diagnosis of poliomyelitis to be made by the attending physician and no serious confusion of terms by a representative of the City Health Department.

The statement that cases not showing paralysis within two weeks, the poliomyelitis suspicion's proved unfounded, merely means that the disease is not contagious, Dr. Dewberry said.
