TOP OF THE MORNING

"Now when I was your age, we didn't have all the advantages you kids have today," each older generation has told the young people from as far back, perhaps, as Adam.

And we suppose as society has progressed and become more affluent, that the statement, to some extent, has been true. Certainly in this country the pioneers cleared the wilderness, built homes, established cities and towns, and left them as a legacy to their children and grandchildren. Other men pioneered in science, in mechanics, in medicine, and in other fields. Succeeding generations took these legacies and advanced them until today we have a highly sophisticated society within which some people feel stymied and therefore frustrated.

This it has been that each succeeding generation has had more advantages than its predecessors. Granddads reared six children on a blackland farm and since his work day was sun to sun he probably didn't have time to meditate on his hardships. At least he didn't complain about any. In fact he seemed proud of what he had accomplished and even, at 85, wasn't too bitter toward the Yankees for shooting him out of his saddle during the Civil War.

In the next generation, my dad was a little more inclined to look back at some periods of his youth with discontent. Mainly the custom of letting school out in the spring so that the boys could help chop and plow cotton, then holding school in the summer so that they could let out again while it was being plowed. Then after he was a young family man there was the Model T Ford which, on cold mornings, was started with a kettle of cold water, the rear wheel jacked up, and cranked with a strong right arm. As his first-born, it was my duty to sit under the wheel and, when the motor began sputtering, to quickly pull the spark lever down. (The spark lever had to be up when cranking of the motor would backfire with enough force to break an arm, and many a Model T driver suffered that fate).

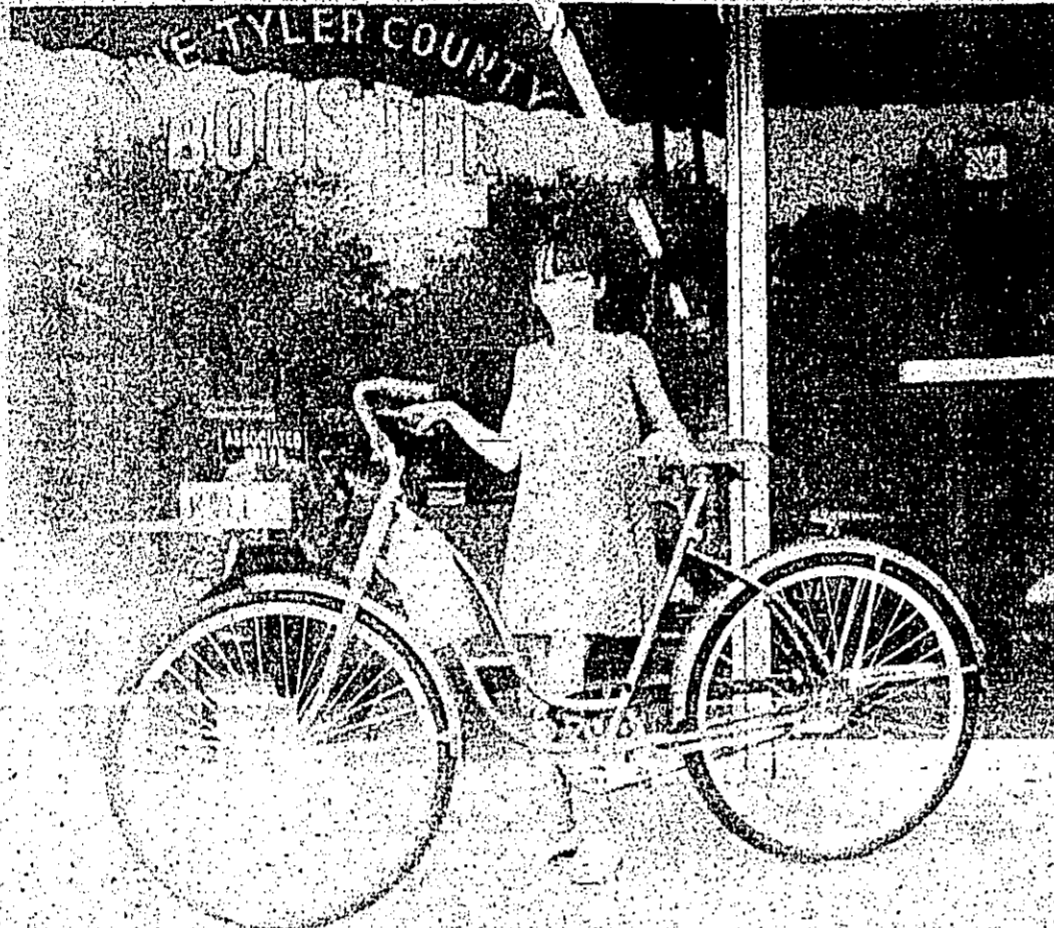

Now my own generation had a great deal to complain about. The long walk to school, rain or shine. Having to earn our own spending money by working after school on Saturdays. Not being allowed to drive the family car (now with self-starter and gear shifts) as often as we thought we should. And others, but we won't go into them here.

The point we want to make is that as society becomes more affluent and we have more and more advantages we also seem to develop a greater number of grievances. Of course, tomorrow's young people will have their problems. One of them may be that all the other kids are spending the weekend on the moon and they can't go.

Chester Sets Old Timers Day August 23

Kathy Faircloth Earns First Bicycle Selling Subscriptions

Chester's second annual Old Timers Day has been set for August 23 under the sponsorship of the Chester Merchants Association. The festivities will begin at 10:30 a.m. This year the affair will be held in downtown Chester and will feature dedication ceremonies for the Chester gas system, Chester water system, new high school building and recognition of the newly remodeled saw mill.

U. S. Rep. John Dowdy and State Representative Don Adams will be among the guest speakers. There will be other entertainment including a style show. All former residents, residents of the county, and those from adjoining counties are invited to come, bring a basket lunch, and enjoy an old time social with the present residents.

In addition to the water and gas systems, Chester has become an incorporated town of which all residents are extremely proud, and the sponsors want everyone to come and see the great progress it has made during the past five years. The first Old Timers Day last year was attended by a large crowd and the sponsors want to make this one much bigger. Everyone in the community urges all past residents, friends, and neighbors to come and spend the day with them.

A motion by R. C. Galbreth to keep the qualification board in session until the trustees heard from officers of Tyler County Industrial Corporation relative to the agreement on the tax moratorium was adopted.

Two bids for hard surfacing the parking lot adjacent to the old football field were presented to the board. Eugene Boykin entered a bid for $214 and Matthews Brothers $2108.95. On recommendation of Supt. B. H. McGuire both bids were rejected, and Boykin was hired to cover the area with iron ore gravel.

AG NOTES

By CLYTON R. CURRIE, County Agent

Several reports of chinch bugs infesting St. Augustine grass have been received. In fact, there are more severe infestations in large areas such as the Southeast portions of the state. However, reports have been received from North and Northeast Texas. Description: The adult bug is 1/8 to 1/4 inch long, has a black body, reddish yellow legs and fully developed wings. Each front wing is mostly white, but is marked with an irregular black patch at the middle of the outer margin. The newly hatched nymph (young) is bright red and has a whitish band across the back. Chinch bugs suck the plant juices which results in yellowish or brown patches occurring in the lawn. Infested areas frequently are first noted along edges of the lawn. As the insects continue to feed, the grass begins to work outward.

In most cases, when chinch bugs are present in sufficient numbers to cause yellow or brown patches to appear in the lawn, they may be found by pulling up a few blades of grass and examining the roots. If chinch bugs are present in small black clumps, they will appear as small black spots on the roots.

Good fungicide to control leaf spot disease. Apply malthion to combat possible insects. Prepare to stake tall varieties and pinch back the seed growth to encourage compact plants or low compact varieties.

Begin to select and order spring bulbs for an October and November planting. Prepare high beds, adding peat moss or other organic materials to insure drainage. Most spring bulbs demand sun or partial sun and full moisture.

Remove faded calcium foliage and blooms to encourage new growth and healthy appearance. Chinch bugs demand frequent waterings.

August lawn care. Keep the August lawn watered well. Lawn areas should be protected from a lack of moisture, are much more susceptible to insect and disease attacks.

Apply a nitrogen application of fertilizer if you have not fertilized in the last 30 days. Apply 6 pounds of sulfate of ammonia per 1,000 square feet of lawn or 3 pounds of ammonium nitrate per 1,000 square feet of lawn. Apply fertilizer when the grass blades are dry and water after application.

Funeral Services Held Last Friday For Clevie Wheat

Funeral services for B. Clevie Wheat, 85, of Chester, were held at 2 p.m. Friday in Edwards Funeral Home chapel. The Rev. B. L. Harkey officiated. Burial was in Magnolia Cemetery in Woodville. He died at 1:45 Thursday at the Woodville Nursing Center, after a long illness. He was a native of Chester and was a member of a pioneer family. He was a rancher and stockman and for a time worked for Gulf Pipefitting Co. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Surviving are his wife, Leona, of Chester; a daughter, Mrs. Vera Bacon of Groves; son, J. C. Wheat of Joliet, Illinois; one brother, W. R. Wheat of Coahoma, Louisiana; grand-daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Baker of Fort Neches; and several nieces and nephews.

Most beat the men's record of 15 minutes. Other girls in the sludges included LeVane Barber of Freeport, Brenda Bumstead of Warren, and Beverly Egan of Freeport.

Men vying for the record also included Leo Spruell of Freeport, Paul Tapp of Bonham, Steve Albert of Wylie, Steve Thompson of Marshall, James Hogan of LaPaca, Ark., Kermit Tandberg of Orange, and Bobby Raines of Warren.

The trip to the Corvatsch proved to be so sensational that ETBC club members returned the following morning to try their ability at snow skiing. With a bit of advice from the touring group's bus driver, Johnny Hansoff, the would-be skiers crowded the Corvatsch's slopes along with some of Europe's finest professionals.

The Corvatsch, chosen site for the 1976 winter Olympics, witnessed some very un-Olympian free style from ETBC's 25.

The day was begun in perfect pitch when a young novice put his skis on the untrained feet atop the high slopes walking back and forth to the bottom like everyone else. With a flash, he was off, getting started at all in addition to getting their skis caught in a tangle. They managed to cross each other's path long enough to get tangled with each other.

Betty Seale of Canton, seemed to enjoy the activity, even though she declared that her skis should be fastened to her seat rather than her feet.

Janeth Bass of Mt. Pleasant, also had her troubles. She attracted quite a crowd of on-lookers amused at her efforts toward getting to her feet.

Doraine and Ronnie Strible of Channelview, and James Hogan of Lavaca, Ark., weren't exactly pros either. Pauline, son of Wylie, got in the act, too, with some good skiing and some beautiful spills.

Rose can in aluminum. Rose planting areas.

A late summer pruning (mid-August) will encourage new growth and fall blooms. Make this pruning a corrective one, removing the dead canes and the terminal and vigorous tips. Cut the canes to vigorous tips, from 24 to 30 inches from ground level.

For best results, a light application of nitrogen may be needed. Adjust after pruning to encourage best growth color and fall growth.

C. Water and mulch. New growth will be inadequate unless moisture is supplied. Water rose throughout and refresh mulch if necessary.

D. Continue a routine spray program to control black spot and other fungal diseases. Fungus must be sprayed every 10 to 14 days.

E. Spot check new and existing plants for insects and diseases. Prepare new

The faded blooms of rose can be pruned or removed to encourage a second bloom. Keep check of mildew and control with anti-fungal PM and water to encourage new growth.

Even though cooler days and nights may exist, plants continue to try and grow. Light applications of nitrogen may be needed. Adjust after pruning to encourage best growth color and fall growth.

Keep check on late summer insects and diseases such as mildew, spider mites, chinch bug, on St. Augustine lawn.

ETBC Chorus Members Try Skiing in Switzer Land

Hill of the 50-member East Texas Baptist College Chorus of Marshall and their sponsors skied atop the 11,500-foot snow-covered Mount Corvatsch, Switzerland, on a day off recently. The occasion was their month-long tour with the Kammerchor of St. Gallen, Switzerland.

The Corvatsch, both a winter and summer ski resort, is a highly popular resort, attracting international personalities. A gondola lifts visitors from the foot of the scenic mountain to the top of the snow-covered slopes.

Atop the Corvatsch is a large oval restaurant, a cable car station, and several ski slopes. With all the snow and those steep slopes just waiting to be challenged, 50 ETBC-ites were not about to sit quietly on the sidelines.

Several students, led by sponsor Ben Egan, Shreveport attorney, decided to try the European style of snow sliding down steep slopes without skis. Known in Tean terms as "rumples", sliders climbed up the steep slopes, hopped over the edge and slid down the snow-covered slopes feet first or end over end, as the case may have been.

One of the highlight events in the "rumples" was a slide from one of the highest of the Corvatsch slopes to the bottom graded with an ice-filled pond. Ben Egan and Larry Duffey, Corning, Ark., led the race. In total meters, much to the delight of the spectators—especially when both missed the ice-filled pond by only inches.

Gaye Overstreet of Kountze also got a special round of applause from the crowd when she attempted the feat and al-

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

BY VERN SANFORD

No creature is shrouded in as many myths and half-beliefs as the rattlesnake. It has been established beyond doubt that the truculent western diamondback rattler accounts for more deaths than any other species of snake in the United States. Also that more people die from snake bites in Texas than any other state. Specifically, 10 to 15 deaths annually. These facts, among others, come from "A Guide to Texas Snakes," authored by Gerald G. Raun, and published by the Texas Memorial Museum in Austin. In his book, Raun points out that the annual national death rate from snakes (about 40) is less than that caused by stings of bees or wasps, or surprisingly, that caused by lightning. As for rattlesnake myths, he debunks the much-told one that a man can be bitten by a rattlesnake when he is threatened by danger. "This old folk tale has been around for as long as European man has been familiar with rattlesnakes," Raun writes, "and will probably persist for a long time to come." He continues, "I have met no fewer than six eye witnesses to this miraculous event in the five years! The old part about it is that I would not hesitate to accept the word of these persons on any other topic and I doubt that any were consciously lying to me." Raun, "if such an event were true, some herpetologist who spends his life studying snakes could not help but have witnessed it come true." This tale does have a logical foundation, much more so than the fables of hoopsnake or milk snake. It lies in the fact that rattlesnakes are ovoviviparous and the young at birth are active and aggressive miniatures of their parents. If one kills a female rattlesnake who is about to give birth, and cuts her open in such a way as to free the young, a dozen or so active little rattlers will be released. Hence the belief that the female must have swallowed them to protect them from harm. Thus, a fable is born along with a brood of rattlesnakes. Raun points out that with prompt and proper treatment it seems quite likely that less than three per cent of the people bitten by poisonous snakes would die. Many of the deaths in Texas, he feels, occur among uneducated field hands who often fail to get medical attention. Actually, according to Raun, there is no excuse for an adult to be bitten by a snake. "If you are in an area where there are apt to be snakes, look where you step, sit, or stick your hand," he cautions. "Anyone who steps over a log or sticks his hand in a hole without looking is asking for trouble." Many people falsely believe that the rattlesnake gives birth to young just as a mammal, like the human, does. "Not so," says Raun. "All snakes produce eggs. In some species like the rattlesnake the eggs are retained within the female's body until hatching." Another myth that Raun debunks is that the forked tongue of a snake is poisonous. "Purpose of the tongue," he says, "is as a device for chemoreception ('smell') which aids the snake in relating to his surroundings."

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS

The Bible says: "They who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength." (Isa. 40:31) Forget the past—you can't see it. Forget the future—you can't see it. Live in the present. The proper place to start standing strong and steady is in the present. It comes from the Lord chair—Dale Holdridge, The Spirit of my being. If we need physical strength, let us get a best generation. Fred and Chylen Feagin, and Birdwell's Department Store.

Defending Your "Castle"

More than three centuries ago, English Lord Coke proclaimed that a man's house is his castle. It still is. Generally speaking, you have a right to repel unlawful intruders, using as much force as is necessary—including even deadly force. For example: A home owner, hearing someone trying to break into his kitchen in the middle of the night, grabbed a gun and went to investigate. Entering the dark kitchen, he discovered that the intruder was himself. When the man instead began to move forward in menace, the home owner fired a fatal shot.

Truller and by 1968 was Texas' first and only Defense Communications Agency.

INSURED

Although brought to trial later on a homicide charge, he was found guilty. The court said that, considering the threatening circumstances, he was within his legal rights in defending the sanctity of his home.

The doctrine is not meant to protect your home merely as a pile of bricks and mortar, but rather as a personal haven of safety for you and your family. Therefore, it applies just as much to someone you rent as to someone you own.

Furthermore, you may get not only against an intruder but also against a visitor who refuses to leave when you tell him to.

On the other hand, you must not in any event use more force than is reasonably necessary under the circumstances. Take the case of a man talking politics with a visiting neighbor become incensed and asked him to leave. The neighbor arose to go. But he did not move fast enough for his ex-wife, who speeded him along with a vicious kick. Result: the home owner was held liable for assault and battery. The court said the kick was simply not justified by the circumstances.

Nor may you arbitrarily widen your legitimate circle of defense. In another case a girl's protective father saw, approaching the house, a youth whom he had ordered to stay away. The father opened the front door, stepped outside, and shot the caller in the arm.

Here too the home owner was ordered to pay damages.

A man's house is his castle," said the court. "But he has no right to go (outside) and attempt to kill a man who has done no act indicating the intention of making forcible entry."
