Bond Cost, Dollar Status Explained

Article VI
PRESENT FINANCIAL STATUS OF THE WOODVILLE INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT

All local, short term indebtedness has been paid. The school district does not owe anything but $1,100,000 on old bonds which cannot be paid off until the bonds mature. Regular scheduled payments are being made. Some of these bonds were long term loans for as much as 40 years. The last ones will be paid off in 1996. If the $3.1 million in bonds are approved, the school board hopes to keep payments down to a minimum of 25 years or a maximum of 27-28. Tax payers will pay much less interest on shorter term loans, and these bonds would be paid off by 2001.

WHY HAS THE TAX RATE GONE UP?

1. Local debt had to be paid--According to Mr. Linam, in 1973 the Woodville Independent School District owed $115,000 in short-term loans, money borrowed locally at interest to pay the current operating expenses. The school also owed $50,000 for buses which were on a 5-year note. It also had a debt of $42,500 in time warrants issued to put roofs on some of the school buildings and to pay for other major repair and maintenance projects.

The board and administration felt that these bills had to be paid. The only way to do so was to raise taxes 10¢ per $100 valuation in 1974. Within 2 years the district was debt free in the maintenance fund.

1973 tax rate per $100	*1.20	*.99 for maintenance
		.21 payment on bonds
1974 tax rate per $100	*1.30	*1.10 for maintenance
		.20 for payment on bonds

2. New State law made tax raise necessary in 1975-76--House Bill 1126 which restructured the financial process whereby Texas schools are operated and receive state funds made a 15% raise necessary in 1975-76. Woodville schools' assignment, what the district is required to raise in order to qualify for state funds, was raised from $69,000 in 1974-75 to $138,000 in 1975-76. The 15% raise in taxes was almost exactly this amount.

1975 tax rate per $100	*1.45	*1.25 for maintenance
		.20 for payment on bonds

For 1976-77 the local assignment required by the state of Texas was raised from $138,000 to 200,681. The district will have a 5¢ raise in 1976-77.

1976 tax rate per $100	*1.50	*1.30 for maintenance
		.20 for payment on bonds

The tax increase of 5¢ will not raise enough to provide the difference in the local assignment required by the state, but the school had a surplus in 1975-76 which will be used to make up the difference. Most other schools in Southeast Texas had to raise taxes.

Woodville schools have benefited more than the tax increase shows. Whereas the school district in 1975-76 was required by the state of Texas to raise $138,000, Woodville schools received $62,239 from the state. This is a large increase over what the school has received in the past.

All of this money is used for current operating expenses such as teachers' salaries, bus transportation costs, and maintaining buildings, many of which have been improved. Although the school district is in good financial condition for maintaining and operating its schools, there is no money to construct buildings. Construction of the building which are needed now can be financed only by passing bonds.

WHAT WILL THE TAX RATE BE IF THE BONDS PASS?

If the bonds are approved on September 28, the tax rate will be raised no more than 65¢ per $100 valuation. This is an assessed valuation of property. Ratio of assessment will remain the same and is far below market value. If the bonds pass, the tax rate will be

1977-78 tax rate per $100	*2.15	*1.30 for maintenance
		.85 for payment on bonds

This means that a person with $10,000 assessed valuation on his home would pay $5 more taxes annually. Persons 65 years old and over are allowed a $3000 exemption. With this exemption a homeowner would pay $45.50 more annually.

Student Power KHS Senior Mobilizing Students For New School

WOODVILLE--There is a student at Kirby High School who is not afraid of stepping on anyone's toes when he says, "I'm going to do everything I can to see that the $3.1 million bond issue passes when the ballots are counted on Tuesday Sept. 28."

The student is 18-year-old senior Larry Keith Whitton.

He says he wants to work for it, even though it won't benefit him directly, because "it will help the kids that come behind me."

Whitton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Whitton who live on FM92, is spearheading a publicity drive to try to enlist other potential "yes" voters on the Kirby High Campus and anyone else who holds a potential yes vote on the political question, he said.

He is in the process of forming a committee of KHS students and student council members who will work with him to insure the passage of the bond.

When asked if he thought the tax impact of the bond, if it passes, would hurt the retirees or persons on a fixed income, he said, "The way I understand it, taxes are going up anyway. I don't really believe that the taxes resulting from the passage of this particular bond will affect the people in the Woodville district that much. Woodville folks ought to care enough and ought to be able to afford this one."

"I feel that they'll be voting to upgrade the educational process here at Kirby High."

"It's hard to concentrate in those hot classrooms because it takes a long time to cool off...We need better facilities and the bond vote would raise the standards of the whole school district. Right now the conditions are not good."

County Fair Gates Open This Weekend

Tyler County Fairgoers will have plenty of treats in store this weekend as the first County-wide fair in a quarter of a century will again fill the air with the smells of good food, hot buttered pop corn, bar-b-que, and visual delights such as colorful hot air balloons and an exciting sail plane demonstration.

There will be many other attractions too.

Artists and craftsmen will be selling their wares underneath a huge tent which will mark the location adjacent to the Tyler County 4-H and FFA Arena and the Tyler County Airport.

Local artist Clyde Gray will be painting inside the tent for passers by to watch, there'll be cake sales and cookoff contests and plenty of arts and crafts pieces to buy.

Probably one of the most interesting visual experiences at the Fair will be the hot air balloons with woman pilot Jennifer Heywood who will put on a flight demonstration with admission charged to those who wish to fly in the colorful propane powered balloon.

Pilot Heywood, with her husband Tom and their family from Houston will be bringing to Tyler County's first Fair, since the early 1900's, several hot air balloons and sail plane. Tom "Crash" Heywood, an accomplished sailplane pilot, will also give a demonstration and offer flight to those who wish to take a quiet soaring trip over Tyler County.

Following a Fair Board Committee meeting Tuesday the group released a hour by hour schedule of events for the exciting weekend in store for Fair Visitors.

A kiddie carnival will kick-off the entertainment on Friday at 1 p.m. and run continuously through Sunday at 5 p.m. Saturday's list of events begins with Stock judging and home demonstration activities beginning at 8 a.m. and running through the noon hour, along with 4-H competition activities.

Square dancers will perform at 1 p.m. with Pam Die, a talented country and western singer, performing at 2:30 p.m. At 4 p.m. Tyler County singer Jack Primm (Continued on page 2)

Driver, left, surveys Burned Van After Thursday Accident

Accidents Mar Holiday

A three car collision on US 190 approximately 15 miles East of Woodville sent two persons to Tyler County Hospital Friday night.

Admitted to the hospital were Gloria Lyon, 22, of Houston, with back injuries and cuts, and Rhyce H. Hall, 70, of Newton, with severe head lacerations.

Sunday at approximately 4:20 p.m., John Teroit, 17, of Pt. Acres was pulled unconscious from Lake Steinhagen at Campers Cove and rushed to Tyler County Hospital. He was later sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital in Beaumont where he was in very serious condition.

Health officials Ed Kennedy from Jasper and Victor Cain from Tyler discussed the dumps with the court. A "Type 3" dump does not have to be covered but once a month could be burned as long as air pollution standards were met, and Units from the Warren Volunteer Fire Department responded and put out the fire. The driver escaped uninjured.

Court Discusses Dumps

WOODVILLE--The Tyler County Commissioners discussed the possible use of scattered "Type 3" dumps throughout the county as a means of solving the county's solid waste dilemma during their special meeting, Tuesday morning.

Health officials Ed Kennedy from Jasper and Victor Cain from Tyler discussed the dumps with the court. A "Type 3" dump does not have to be covered but once a month could be burned as long as air pollution standards were met, and could be close enough for the citizens to carry their own garbage to it, said the commissioners during their discussion.

In other business, the court set the tax rates for the coming year at the same 28 percent assessed value as last year.

The court also agreed to pay a bill for dental services totaling $161 for two "indigents" with revenue sharing funds, approved the use of Traffic Engineers, Inc. of (Continued on Page 2)

Classroom Assistants Sought

WOODVILLE--If you are the parent, grandparent or just a friend of a Woodville Elementary School student and have some free time, there may be a place for you as a classroom teacher assistant.

Cynthia McCafferty, chairman of the Elementary Classroom Assistants program, says that the organization needs volunteers to work one hour each week. "If you like working with children, and if you would like to do something to improve our school where it helps the most, in the classroom, we need your help," she explains.

Classroom Teacher Assistants are individuals who come to the school regularly, report to an assigned teacher and aid the teacher to be more effective in his or her work with the students, says Mrs. McCafferty.

Sometimes we take the students to a quiet area for extra drilling in spelling, math or reading. We also help with paperwork, so the teacher can spend more time with the students," explains

Mrs. McCafferty. "Our help may even show up in improved grades on a child's report card and we are always appreciated."

"We believe that this is the best way to improve the quality of education in our school right now," says the assistants chairman. "This is a way for each of us to show the children and teachers that we really do care. We may have a long wait before we can have new buildings, so our help is really needed now."

Anyone interested in or curious about the program may call Mrs. McCafferty at 283-2992 for more information.

Also, Mrs. McCafferty reports that mothers with preschoolers will expand a baby-sitter pool with the cost of the sitter being shared, or by exchanging care of the children between the mothers.

New Department At Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION—Texas A&M has a new Department of Horticulture Sciences as of Sept. 1.

Dr. Warren S. Barkham is professor and head of the new department, announced Dean of Agriculture Dr. H.O. Kunkel. Barkham has been director of raw material research and onion seed production of State Vegetable Products located in California and is also chairman of the national committee on liaison between industry and society with the American Horticulture Society. He was previously an associate professor of horticulture at North Carolina State University for nine years.

Horticulture has been offered through the Department of Soil and Crop Sciences since 1959. Texas A&M officials say the demand for graduates in horticulture has expanded rapidly from 59 students five years ago to an estimated fall enrollment of more than 500.

The responsibilities of the new department will include the supervision and coordination of Experiment Station and Extension Service activities as well as the instructional program. The department will have a research load of more than 400,000 at College Station and program leadership of more than 12 million in research located at centers throughout Texas.

Two degree programs will be offered in horticulture and floriculture. These programs include the use, propagation, marketing and selling of edible crops and ornamental plants. Students are trained in nursery and greenhouse production along with the retail florist business.

Malpractice Commission Approves Report

AUSTIN—The state's medical malpractice study commission has approved a report that shows the malpractice insurance crisis has boosted health care costs. At the same time, the problem has shrunk availability of care. The report also says the crisis could stifle medical advances.

Many doctors are forced to practice "defensive medicine" because of the threat of malpractice suits, says Milton Davis, M.D., a study commission member. Doctors have to use medically unnecessary tests, x-rays and consultants to be protected legally in the event of a suit. Unfortunately this makes patients' bills go up.

Doctors don't like this trend but have no other choice if the present situation continues. If a doctor gets sued, whether deserved or not, his insurance goes up, in some cases up to 30,000 a year. Some doctors' premiums have risen around 625 percent in about five years. Eventually some costs are passed on to the patients, Dr. Davis says. He is chairman of study commission Subcommittee II, the group that submitted the report in Austin on Aug. 27.

Doctors also are having to discontinue services to avoid the threat of suits and to obtain insurance. Insurance companies say general surgery and certain other procedures have become "HIGH RISK" because they are involved in so many suits. Many times a doctor can continue to practice only if he stops performing certain procedures for which he may be well qualified. Further, potentially valuable medical innovations may be avoided completely because of the legal risk, thus depriving the public of improvement in medical care.

The crisis has multiple causes; it is not the fault of any one group but it affects everyone, says Dr. Davis, a Dallas physician.

Solutions will require legislative action. Included will be a look at the authority needed to broaden the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners' jurisdiction.

The commission also approved asking for a law to develop a state-wide loss control program and a data gathering system to report on medical malpractice. The Board of Medical Examiners could use this data to investigate improper conduct.

Accent On Health

People who choose to live in rural or sparsely populated areas deserve the same quality of health care as their big-city neighbors. The problem is that not enough physicians and other health providers want to live in rural areas.

The problem concerns the entire health services system, both the public and the private sectors. For a number of years, the medical profession in Texas, through the Texas Medical Association, has looked for ways to encourage young doctors to locate their practices in small towns where they can serve the surrounding countryside.

According to Dr. Ed Schmidt, the past president of the Texas Medical Association, practicing medicine in outlying areas offers several advantages: "short travel time between places, no smog, no traffic problems, relative freedom from crime, a wholesome atmosphere are some of the examples he cites.

On the other hand, Dr. Schmidt recognizes that most young doctors are not attracted to rural practice. He explains, "Some doctors feel that they may not be able to cope with the situation, since they've been trained in an academic environment with a large amount of backup from big hospitals and medical centers. They don't find it 'comfortable' in a more isolated environment," he says.

It's also true, according to the medical association, that doctors in rural areas work harder, often longer hours, and generally have lower earnings than their big-city counterparts. Furthermore, the doctors-and their spouses-often miss the social life, entertainment, and other amenities of a metropolitan environment.

Dr. Mario Ramirez, who has based his practice in remote Roma for the past quarter of a century, knows firsthand the problems of both poverty and rural areas. Until recently, he was not only the only physician in the area, but he operated his own hospital-only one in the South Texas county. Now there's a new hospital in Roma, Grand City, but there is still a shortage of skilled medical personnel.

Dr. Ramirez believes that the best solution is to help young people from the rural areas obtain an education in medicine. Hopefully, after they receive their education, they'll return to their hometowns to practice among the people they know best. This approach has been used with some success, but it's inherently a slow process, and the young doctors don't always want to go back home once they've spent a few years in the bright lights of the big town.

According to Dr. Schmidt, science and technology are beginning to help rural physicians provide better care, and to end the feeling of isolation. New devices such as remote telemetry, closed-circuit television, and computers can be used to give the rural practitioners access to expert consultants and other sources of vital information even if it's thousands of miles away. Also, the expanded use of paraprofessional medical personnel, such as physician's assistants and paramedics, helps to relieve the rural doctor's burden.

Public health in Texas has made great strides in its effort to provide better service to people in the countryside. Although there are still some local health departments in only about 75 of the state's 254 counties, the state agencies now serve roughly 80 percent of the population.

Six years ago, the first of an Public Health Regions was established. This fall, the last two regional offices will be open for business.

According to Dr. Fred L. Juff, Director of the Texas Department of Health Resources, the whole purpose of the regional program is to form the coordinated and integrated regional staff capable of providing comprehensive public health services throughout the region, particularly in the rural areas that don't have access to a local health department.

The goal for both the private and the public sectors of the health care system is the same: to ensure that every citizen in Texas has access to the services he or she needs to "maintain" where people choose to live.

Family Fire Escape Plan

If you are dependent on your house, crawling, eyes stinging because of smoke, lungs burning as you breathe hot air, doors and passages blocked off by heat and flame?

Many Texans find out the answer to this question each year. For far too many, the answer is "no." For these people the end result can be serious injury or death, says the Texas Insurance Information Center.

The office of the state fire marshal reports that last year approximately 400 persons were killed and about 900 injured in home fires in Texas. Although panic can overcome anyone, children who don't know how to get out of the house and older persons too weak to escape in their own homes are in peril if a fire breaks out in their homes.

Although good fire prevention measures provide the best protection against home fires, even the most cautious can suddenly become a fire victim. Killer fires often start at night in the evening after everyone has gone to bed. Undetected, these fires can rage out of control in minutes, overrunning occupants with smoke. Fires spread so quickly that experts say there is only about a four minute safety margin between the outbreak of the fire and safe escape.

This is where a family fire escape plan comes in. Every family should have a plan that could have been prevented by an effective escape plan.

There isn't a better time for families to work out a plan than during the summer when children are home from school. The floor plan of your house and plan at least two means of escape from each bedroom—the normal exit and an alternate exit, in case the usual route is blocked by flames or toxic fumes.

Agree ahead of time what warning device or signal will be used to alert the family. Establish a meeting place outside so that a count of family members can be accomplished quickly. Rehearse your plan. This is especially important for children who will often panic and, tragically, hide in closets or under beds rather than escape.

In developing your plan keep in mind the abilities and disabilities of family members. An agile teenager might be able to go through a window or climb down a ladder, but a young child or grandparent may not.

Your local fire marshal's office or fire department can give you valuable advice on planning a home escape route.

Since early warning is vital, fire prevention experts suggest that home smoke detection equipment be installed. Such equipment is available in electronic, battery-powered and large department stores, usually for under $50. Purchase only those detectors that have been approved by an independent testing laboratory such as Underwriters Laboratories, Inc.

Whether or not you have such detectors, it is advisable to sleep with your bedroom door closed. The door may block off enough smoke to give you those precious seconds needed to escape.

If you suspect there is a fire on the other side of a closed door, test it with the palm of your hand before opening. Never open a door if it feels hot to the touch. The heat necessary to warm a door is enough to kill you with the first breath. If the door feels okay, test yourself against it and open cautiously. Be prepared to slam it shut if you are unable to get out quickly by an alternate route. Do not stop to gather up valuables or call the fire department. Once out, never return to the house. Call the fire department from a neighbor's house.

Here are some other fire safety tips from the Texas Insurance Information Center:

If caught in smoke, keep low. Crawl along the floor where the air is better and take short breaths through your nose until you reach safety.

If high rise or multiple story building, do not use elevators. If power is cut off, you may be trapped between floors.

Close doors behind you to block the path of the flames. Never lock them as this may prevent the escape of others.

Growing Pains Part Of Rural Population Growth

WASHINGTON, DC—People in rural communities have been accustomed to thinking about problems that come with population decline. Now they need to think about problems that come with population growth, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

The new population trend in rural areas is growth. For the first time this century except during the Depression years, population of nonmetropolitan counties is growing faster than the metropolitan population. (Nonmetropolitan counties are those with no city as large as 50,000 population.) More rural residents are choosing to stay in their home area instead of moving to the cities. Many rural migrants of the past are returning home, and more city natives are moving to rural areas.

USDA, most rural communities want to get in on the new population growth. Growth is a sign of a community's economic vitality and is usually a source of community pride. The growth can result in increased employment opportunities, upgraded skill levels among local workers, and improved local incomes. It can provide support for new public and private services and facilities long desired within the community.

But, cautions USDA, rapid population growth can also strain communities to the point where local governments have a hard time providing essential services. It can exert extreme pressures on land resources. And it can cause social problems stemming from a rapid influx of newcomers to a small community.

David Brown, a sociologist with USDA's Economic Research Service (ERS), says communities "experiencing growth and development need to be more aware of the effect of population growth on the community. They need to realize that small rural communities growing through new business development find that a new factory or shopping center can mean an immediate increase in potential demand for local firefighting services.

Changes in the use and value of land are another po-

Veterans Questions Answered

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q—Due to a World War II service-connected disability I am unable to work. I am currently receiving a 50 percent rating. Can I receive a pension for my disability?

A—Generally, a continuous rating for 20 years or more can be reduced. Q—Are there any additional benefits for veterans who are rated as being 100 percent disabled by the Veterans Administration, and in need of assistance of another person?

A—Yes. Veterans so severely disabled as to require the regular aid and attendance of another person may be entitled to additional payments under the GI Bill and living at home. Can I claim him as a dependent and receive an increased amount since he is under 23?

A—Yes. The dependent's own service does not contribute a bar to payment to veterans of increased educational assistance payments.

Q—I am a veteran going to school under the GI Bill. My son is also a veteran receiving benefits under the GI Bill and living at home. Can I claim him as a dependent and receive an increased amount since he is under 23?

A—Yes. The dependent's own service does not contribute a bar to payment to veterans of increased educational assistance payments.

Teachers Association Meets In Woodville

WOODVILLE—Obstacles are those terrible things we see when we take our eyes from the goals. Mrs. Aloha Proffend, President of the Tyler County T. S. T. A., is leading the first general meeting of the year for Tyler County educators. The group met in Kirby High School auditorium at 7:30 P.M. on August 30.

Goals for the year were outlined by committee chairmen and committees met briefly after the general session.

Sam Blackman, Region 6 Unitary representative based in Houston, reviewed the services available to member of the professional organization. Blackman emphasized that Unitary is funded by TSTA/NEA to provide the services needed for professional compensation, and permanent funding of education in Texas.

The Tyler County Unit reported 145 professional members and associates. Mrs. Edith Findley, Legislation, and Ken Freeland, Constitution, reported on their work. Make Sauerkraut From Garden Cabbage COLLEGE STATION—Making sauerkraut may be the answer for home gardeners with more cabbage than the family can eat. Sauerkraut is an economical source of Vitamin C and other nutrients. It is easy to make at home.

As soon as kraut is thoroughly cured, pack into sterilized jars. Drain enough of the kraut juice, or a weak brine made by dissolving two tablespoons salt to a quart of water, to fill jars to within one-half inch of top. Put on cap, screw band firmly tight. Process in boiling water bath 15 minutes.

Remove the outside green and dirty leaves. Wash well. If worms are present, soak in four tablespoons salt per gallon of water for 30 minutes. Quarter the head and shred the cabbage finely. Put five pounds cabbage and two ounces (three and one-half tablespoons) of salt into a large pan and mix with the hands. Pack gently into the crock with a potato masher. Repeat until crock is nearly full. Cover with a cloth, pans and weight. During the curing process, kraut requires daily attention. Remove scum as it forms and wash and sold the cloth often to keep it free from scum and mold. Fermentation will be complete in 10-12 days, the said.

Nurses Aide is a sixty hour course designed for train students to prepare for work as a nurses aide in medical related facilities. There are two classes in nurses aide available. The first class will begin Sept. 14. The class will meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. for ten weeks. The nurses aide tuition is $35.00. Shorthand I is for persons with no previous shorthand training. The course begins Sept. 14. The tuition for the course is $35.00.

Screwworms Hit Texas

DALLAS—All livestock shipped out of Texas must now meet federal inspection and certification requirements, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced Tuesday.

The intensified regulation is the result of action by USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) designating the entire state of Texas as an area of recurring screwworm infestations. Prior to this announcement, only the 39 southern counties of the state were so designated.

APHIS officials said the change will mean that all livestock, including cattle, sheep, swine, goats, horses, mules and burros shipped from Texas must be inspected by state or federal animal health officials or accredited veterinarians and be certified free of screwworms before shipment. Animals found to be infested with the parasite will be treated, and the entire shipment of livestock will be sprayed or dipped with a USDA approved insecticide.

In addition, all animals shipped from Texas into southeastern states are required to be dipped or sprayed even if found to be screwworm-free. These federal requirements have been initiated in order to prevent the spread of screwworm to the northeast, an area which has been free of the parasite for over 15 years.

Texas has been placed under stricter federal regulation as the result of an increase in the number of laboratory confirmed screwworm cases in the state in recent months. These cases threaten to facilitate the spread of this parasite of all warmblooded animals.

So far this year, over one-half of the 254 counties in Texas have reported screwworm cases. In the southeast, a greater number of cases are expected during the traditionally heavy mosquito season of August and November. The serious number of screwworm cases reported this year has been due to heavy rainfall in the state, producing ideal environmental conditions for the increase in screwworms.

Owners of livestock should constantly check their animals for screwworm infestations and submit specimens (larvae or worms) in the proper, self-addressed mailing kit available from County Extension Agents or offices, suggests Dr. Robert Miller, of USDA's Mission, Texas, screwworm laboratory.

Screwworms are the larvae or worms of the screwworm fly. Female flies lay their eggs on the edge of an open wound on any warmblooded animal. The eggs hatch, and the tiny larvae burrow into the wound to feed on the living flesh. Odors produced by the feeding larvae attract other female screwworm flies, which relieves the wound with their eggs. Untreated infestations often result in the death of the animal.

The USDA's Screwworm Eradication Program, operated by SPHS, is designed to eradicate the wild screwworm fly population by releasing millions of genetically sterile screwworm flies every week to mate with the fertile wild flies. Mating between fertile and sterile flies produce eggs that do not hatch, thus breaking the screwworm life cycle.
