Late Filings Make School Board Races

Last minute filings have produced several unexpected races in the five April 1 school board elections in Tyler County.

Troy Pfeider, 41, a forester, filed with the Woodville Independent School District office last week as a candidate for Position 1 on the WISD. Dr. R.E. Swearingen, the board president, is the incumbent in that position and has also filed for re-election.

In the WISD Position 2 race, housewife Beth Allison and building contractor Jim Pool will be vying for the seat being vacated by incumbent Bobby Kinnon.

There will also be two races in the Warren school board election.

J.R. "Dick" Johnston, an electrical engineer, has challenged incumbent Harold T. Davis, a foodstore owner, for Position 5 on the board.

In the Position 4 race, Joe Thomas Weeks, retired, and Luther Moyer, a retired Gulf Oil Analytical engineer, are running. R.H. Elliot, the incumbent, did not file for re-election.

Eight persons have filed for the April 1 election in Colmesneil which will fill three at-large positions on the CISD board.

All three incumbents filed for re-election. They are building contractor Charles Faircloth, retired Gulf States employe Val Blanchette and sales representative Bill Hooks.

The five newcomers who filed are logging contractor Hardy Carlson, Texaco employe Leonard Durham, Civil Service employe Bobby Lord, businessman Kenneth Freeman and housewife Debbie Freeman. The Freemans are also husband and wife.

CHESTER ISD
Two races have developed in the Chester school board elections.

Eunice Standley, a housewife who was appointed to fill an unexpired term, and a pipe fitter B.D. Conner have both filed for the two years remaining in that term.

In the other contest, six candidates have filed for three at-large positions on the CISD. The only incumbent to file was Sam Darden Jr., Incumbent Franklin Handley and Phillip Pate are not running.

The other five candidates are Aubrey Cherry, a sawyer for Champion International; Larry Trest, an insurance agent and Baptist pastor; Wilbur Neal, self employed; Donald Wayne Woodrome, self employed; James P. Wilson, self employed; and James T. Loving, pastor of Hampton Hill Pentecostal Church.

SPURGER ISD
Incumbent Henry Joe Jordan will serve another three-year term as no opponents filed for his Position 2 post on the Spurger school board.

In the Position 1 race, however, four persons have filed in an attempt to win the seat being vacated by longtime board president John M. Hicks.

Mobil Chemical employe Virgil Segrest, Eastex Paper

employe John Morris, Johnny Smart and E.L. Matthews have filed for Hicks' seat on the board.

Hicks is running for Tyler County Precinct 4 commissioner.

All five board elections will be held on Saturday April 1, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Polling stations and other information will be given in the March 30 edition of the BOOSTER.

Fires Destroy Two Homes

Fire destroyed two Tyler County homes this past week and sent one man to the hospital after suffering burns to his face and hands.

Woodville volunteer firemen responded to the first call late Friday evening at a farmhouse located approximately five miles off Town Bluff Road. Keith McGovney, 26, told firemen he was attempting to start a fire in the woodburning stove in the one room house when the liquid ignited, shooting out into the room and burning his body.

There was no phone in the farmhouse, and McGovney said he had to walk some distance before reaching a phone and notifying authorities. By the time firemen arrived, the farmhouse was completely destroyed. McGovney was taken to Tyler County Memorial Hospital by an Ellender Ambulance, where he was treated and later released. Early Monday morning firefighters went once again to a residence to find the house totally engulfed in flames. Eugene Maxie was occupying the home when he told authorities that an electrical wire shorted, sparking a flame in the attic above the kitchen. Maxie was able to save a few pieces of furniture before the flames destroyed the frame house. No injuries were reported.

Woodville City Manager Walt Davis stated that the W.F.D. has answered 27 calls this year which he said is "average" for this time.

Savon Drug Stores have expanded into Tyler County with the opening of a new store in Woodville this week. Located at the former Griffin Pharmacy site on Charlton Street, Savon Drugs went into operation Monday

Municipal Ballots Light For April 1 Election

Many of the county's incumbent elected city officials will not have to face an opponent in the April 1 municipal elections as last week's filing deadline found most of the positions uncontested.

In Woodville, incumbent Mayor Terry Watts, 36, will not have an opponent, but there is one newcomer in the race for two at-large council seats.

Home builder John A. Gilchrist filed for the city council and will face incumbents Dr. James Radford, 42, and Doug Tolbert, 53, in the April 1 balloting.

COLMESNEIL
All three incumbents escaped a race on the April 1 ballot and will return to office. They are car dealer Cecil Ogden, school teacher Ross Gardner and retired Gulf Oil employe Rex Christy, 37.

CHESTER
The biggest race in the county appears to be in Chester, where voters will elect a mayor and three aldermen.

Salesman Ollie Woodrome, 67, was the only candidate to file for the mayor's post. He will replace outgoing Mayor Robert K. Moore.

In the council race for three at-large positions, two of the incumbents have filed for re-election. They are home-maker Sue T. Davis, 45, and retiree John Wallace, 76.

Newcomers are Dennis K. Johnson, 20, a service station attendant; Charles McMillan, 40, owner-operator of an Exxon station; and David A. McLaughery, 28, a personal safety director for Champion Building Products.

The other incumbents, B.E. Pool, will not run for re-election.

BILL BAILEY

Bailey Is Western Parade Marshall

Bill Bailey, "well known country" and western disc jockey from Houston, will ride his famous Lorraine Steer, "Chisolm" while serving as Parade Marshall in the 1978 Tyler County Western Week-End Parade on Saturday, March 25.

Bailey, who has been recognized by "Hoe-Haw" as one of the Top 10 Country Music DJ's in America, is also a Vice-President of the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo, and has served as a Director of the Country Music Association. Active in civic affairs, both on a local and State level, he has served as a school board member in Deer Park, vice-president of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, and is known by many as the rodeo announcer at the annual Texas Prison Rodeo in Huntsville.

"Bill Bailey has long been a favorite of mine and having served for the past three years on the Houston Show's Area, Go Texas Committee which was directly under Bailey, I've come to admire his energies, abilities and devotion to community affairs and I am proud that he has accepted my invitation," said Jim Clark, director of Western Week-End.

Bailey will also make an appearance at the Rodeo at the 4-H FFA Arena at 4 p.m. following the Big Western Week-End Parade.

County Approves Equipment Purchase

Acting on the recommendation of Precinct III Commissioner Leon Fowler, County Commissioners voted to accept a bid submitted by Mustang Tractor and Equipment of Houston for a road maintainer for that precinct.

Total price for the Caterpillar 130 G Motor Grader is $48,827, and will be paid for by down payment, with the remaining balance in time warrants. County officials will meet in regular session Monday, March 13, items on the agenda include approving monthly reports from county offices and Sheriff Lewis Craven will discuss personnel for the Corps of Engineers.

Dogwood Princesses

Gilchrist Files For Woodville Council

Woodville home builder John A. Gilchrist has announced his candidacy in the April 1 city election for a position on the city council.

"I am running for a position on the city council because I have a very strong interest in our community," said Gilchrist. "I feel that my occupation as a home builder, and day-to-day association with the workings of city government, give me special insight into the needs of our community. I firmly believe that Woodville will experience rapid growth in the next few years, and I would like to actively participate in this growth."

"I hope that the people of this community will consider my qualifications as a candidate for councilman when they go to the polls," said Gilchrist.

Style Show

The annual Spring Style Show sponsored by the Woodville Reading Club will be held Saturday, March 18, at the Woodville Inn at 7:30 p.m.

Door prizes will be awarded and refreshments will be served.

Tickets are on sale now and can be purchased at J.B. Best Clothing Store, Jacques Ladies Shop, Warfield's, and from all members of the reading club.

All proceeds will go to the Kirby High School Scholarship Fund.

Where Will Kirby Sit Now?

By TRISH BROWNING
Where will Kirby sit now? Now that Griffin Pharmacy has become Savon Drugs, the coffee shop of the store has been closed. The coffee is still available but the familiar tables with the familiar faces are gone.

"We've been gathering" there for more than 30 years, just about the bull and heart of all the latest gossip," Kirby said with a touch of reminiscence in his voice.

Kirby and his friends Sam Sullivan and Roy Pace started haunting the store back in the late '40s when Dick Best first opened the shop. At that time, however, there was a soda fountain in the shop and floats, shakes and other assorted foods could be purchased besides the cup of "needed" brew that started the whole affair.

As time progressed, and more space was needed, the fountain eventually shut down, but the tables and chairs were left along with the coffee pot.

Around this "watering hole" one could learn 17 in told, the merits of a good hard working wife, how to rid the farm of pesky rodents, and the favorite for "best Sunday's ball game." It was a virtual cornucopia of information.

No one actually knows how many decisions were made at those tables following a friendly debate with neighbors. No one actually knows the tall tales told and laughed at, the problems in business that were discussed or how many times the future of the county was decided over a friendly cup of coffee.

There are certain advantages to having a place to sit and enjoy a fresh pot of the stuff. One can truly say that Kirby, as one coffee drinker put it, "without having your friends there to talk to between sips."

The decision to discontinue the coffee service came as a surprise to most folks and I watched as a few, after many years of doing so, almost enter the shop and quickly stop in mid-stride and remembering that this time of friendly gathering was no more.

Old habits are hard to break they say, but gathering with old acquaintances to share a moment or two is even harder to discard after thirty years.

Kirby summed up the whole situation with a few simple and direct words. "The information center is closed," he said, with a note of finally adding wistfully, "We need a coffee machine somewhere."

Well now, I know where the spare tire was. Know how to operate the jack. What I have never figured out is how you get the trunk tire loose from the bolts and doodads that hold it in place. Or how anyone more than six feet tall can get in the trunk with the tire, with any expectation of either one of you ever getting out of the trunk. Kirby and I got the blown tire off the car, lugged on the spare, and found out it was flat.

VIP all this time is pating up and down on the side of the road, hurling impressions that can only be meant for me.

Thank goodness for company radios. Connected with the Diboll dispatcher, and a service truck was there in a few minutes. That little bit of legendariness impressed VIP as it did me.

As the months passed, Ole Brownie just kept getting more perverse. Eight roofing nails tore another tire off the rim. You'd have thought I was hauling non-union coal.

At the strangest times, the darn thing wouldn't crank. So, up with the hood, and make believe you know what you're looking at. The only things under the hood that I could see were the fan belt, the oil dipstick, and the water bottle for the window washers.

But Ole Brownie always reacted favorably. When she wouldn't crank, get out, lift up the hood, look wise, check the battery, clean the hood, get back in, and she starts without a whimper.

But this last week, Ole Brownie darn near carried it too far. We were cooling along, just as quiet as you please, when the gears started grinding. Ole Brownie tried to lurch into the ditch, and we proceeded to shut her down.

Finally got nerve enough to walk around back and take a look I hadn't noticed any parts in the highway, at least.

But strange of strangers, the right rear axle and wheel (naturally), had pulled loose from the differential and the tire was resting on the lip of the fender. Course that tire was chewed up pretty bad, fighting its way out of the fender well, but by lodging itself on the fender, probably kept me from cartwheeling like A.J. at Dayton.

Fellows at the repair shop swear nothing like that had ever happened before, as they remembered, and the wrecker driver says, "you were lucky. Usually when that happens, both wheels come off."

I got news for that wrecker driver. Nothing Ole Brownie does is usual. I've just got to find out what did that made her so made she'd throw a wheel.

Things mechanical have always been an enigma to me. I've always been a First and foremost among my frustrations is the automobile that carries me on my appointed rounds.

Ole Brownie has been an interesting piece of machinery, but in recent months has been developing a perverse personality all her own.

Fairly docile most of the time, Ole Brownie only develops a mean streak when you (a) have somebody important in the car with you, or (b) when you've been running an hour late since morning, and are trying to get that last project completed before dark.

In the first category, VIP in the front seat—Ole Brownie always left me with a report like the first cannon shot at Fort Sumter.

Notes From An Oldtimer

They Don't Make Syrup Like Dave

A few weeks ago in one of the grocery stores, there was a stack of half-gallon cans clearly labeled "Old Fashioned Ribon Syrup." The store has been closed. Dave Enloe, who was the man behind the counter, was peddling under that name. That stuff probably never saw a case pack much less an old fashioned cane mill like the one Dave Enloe ran.

Remember Dave Enloe? He was long and lanky and the spit in the image of the pictures in the history books of Abraham Lincoln. You'd have sworn they were him.

Now there was a man who knew how to make real ribbon cane syrup. His mill was over on Turkey Creek on a farm where he raised some hogs.

Getting ready for a cane grinding took plenty of hard work. First the cane in the fields had to be stripped of its leaves. That was the meanest job of all. The edges of cane leaves are sharp like razor blades. Up at the house you'd hear him "Ouch" any time a body got sliced by one. Then the stalks had to be hacked off close to the ground and thrown on a pile to be loaded on the wagon for carting to the mill. When an especially fine stalk was cut, it was thrown onto another smaller pile. These stalks were for keeping at home for chewing.

The Enloe mill was situated on a rise above the creek and on the opposite side was a deep gully with long sloping banks. When the juice was squeezed out, the stalks were tossed over into the gully. Most of the "chews" never got to the bottom but landed on the slope where they spread out making the steepest, stickiest slide a bunch of kids ever had. You took a running start, jumped, and slid on your bottom as far down as momentum would carry, then, slipping and sliding, you crawled in all fours to the top again.

This jumping and sliding and laughing and hollering kept on all day. The old Dan plodded around the circle pulling the shaft that turned the press that squeezed out more chews to make the sliding better.

Dave Enloe himself did the skimming. He stood by the vat and skimmed off the foam with a long-handled ladle, emptying the ladle after each skimming into a mash barrel that stood at the front end of the vat. When until it reached the end, the pure, clear syrup was poured into clean, shiny, gallon cans, and sealed by tamping the lids on securely.

If you're real expert to cook the syrup, the fire had to be just right, hot enough to cook the water out of the liquid by the time it reached the end. But if the fire were too hot, the syrup could start turning to sugar crystals by the time it hit the bucket.

When you were done, they drank fresh cane juice, when they were hungry, they went down to the creek and washed the sticky off hands and faces, so they could eat the picnic lunch the "growlers" had brought. Then back to the cane-chew slide they went.

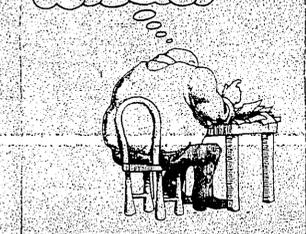

Sometimes the fun wouldn't be finished until next day. When the elders were clearing up and loading the wagon, the boys first, then the girls would go down to the creek to bathe and put on clean clothes. No mother would want to take a bunch of dirty, sticky kids home to put to bed.

Clearing up meant cleaning the cooking vat, tossing the last of the chews into the ravine, unharassing old Dan and turning him loose. Most importantly, the mash barrel had to be emptied. The mash would ferment and the Enloe hogs were in that pasture.

One time someone did forget to empty that mash barrel. When Dave Enloe went out to his farm that Sunday morning, his pigs were all over the place, lying on their backs kicking and squealing; even old Dan was staggering and lissayed and whimning like a drunk-en old dog. Was that man dead?

I bought a can of that gooey mess in the grocery store thinking it would be the Enloe's old fashioned ribbon cane syrup. Now I'm going to have to eat that stuff, no self-respecting animal would touch it.

By ERNESTINE FAIRCLOTH
Our residents at Woodville Convalescent Center have really been taking advantage of the few days of spring-like weather we have been having. If you pass by our home you will see smiling faces swinging and rocking on our porch. Some are out working in their flower beds and some just out for a stroll soaking up the sunshine. Our March birthday party will be held on the 14th at 2 p.m. Mrs. DeLoach, alone with a few other ladies from the First Baptist Church of Woodville will be here to host our party. Residents celebrating birthdays this month are: Burl Ashworth, Calvin Busby, May Bradshaw, Gordia Broom, Lydia Gooder, Gerdin Hughes, Paul Scarborough and Muggie Tucker. The Melody Masters will be here at 7 o'clock this Thursday to entertain for our monthly dance. If you are sitting at home with nothing to do, come out and shake a leg with us. Our residents are really enjoying this event and I would like to send a big thanks to the Melody Masters for bringing them this enjoyment.

The exercise class will meet Monday, Wednesday at 9:30. This class is slowly but surely increasing in size as the residents are beginning to realize that if you'll limber your muscles up a little each morning, it will help you to feel better and help you make it through the day.

The "Joyful Noise" will have their regular practice at 10:00 a.m. Wednesday morning. The class is really working hard getting ready for their invitations to different churches, groups and organizations.

The craft class will meet at 2:00 p.m. Wednesday morning. They have well-planned kitchen decorations and other little goodies up for sale. You can come by our home anytime and look over their shop. They are now getting ready to work on the floor for the Dogwood Festival.

The beauty shop will open at 9:00 a.m. Thursday morning, and then at 2:00 p.m. there will be a domino party.

Church services for the week will be at 10 Friday and at 9:30 on Sunday.

Water Suppliers Make Regular Tests

Purity of drinking water is something to which all subscribers to public water systems are entitled, but many water customers can't be sure what they're getting.

The reason? Many smaller public water systems are not submitting samples to the Texas Department of Health for analysis, even though they are required to do so by federal and state law.

"The Safe Drinking Water Law, and the Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations promulgated under the Act, make the submission of samples for bacteriological analysis from public water systems a requirement under federal law," said Mark V. Lowry, surveillance and technical assistance branch chief of the Water Hygiene Division.

"In addition, the collection of such samples has been a requirement under state law since 1945."

The purpose in submitting and analyzing samples is to determine whether contamination is occurring in the distribution system. Such contamination may be the result of low or fluctuating pressure causing backflow or backsiphonage of contaminated water into the lines. There may also be improperly connected or constructed appliances which use water, cross-connections, line breaks, or other problems.

"With the complexity of modern-day plumbing systems and the constant building activities in urban areas, the list of possible avenues of contamination is endless," says Lowry. "Therefore, it is imperative that samples for bacteriological analysis be collected and submitted regularly as required by law."

Lowry says during calendar year 1977, the Texas Department of Health received and recorded more than 300,000 sample reports. These records indicate that more than 90 percent of the population of Texas that is served by public water systems is served by systems that submit bacteriological analysis samples regularly.

"Many of the smaller systems, particularly those serving less than 5,000 persons, are not submitting samples," he said.

"This is despite the fact that samples are analyzed by this Department's regional laboratories at no charge to the water system. Since the records of all such analyses must be maintained by the water system officials for review by the customers, people wishing to determine the status of their local utility should contact the utility officials directly and ask to review these records," Lowry said.

Although legal actions to require submission of water samples are proceeding, the Department's resources for this task are limited, he said.

"In addition, any fine assessed to the water system officials for failure to comply will in most cases be passed on to the water consumer. Therefore, the Department strongly appreciates the assistance of the individual consumer in encouraging the water supplier to submit samples. This situation represents a rare example of the consumer being able to assist in safeguarding his own consumer interests, as well as the public health of the community," Lowry said.

Congress passed the Safe Drinking Water Act in 1974 which in effect gives the Environmental Protection Agency and states the responsibility of the new minimum drinking water standards, said Lowry. "The interim regulations promulgated under the Act require your water supplier to periodically sample and test the water pumped to your tap. If tests reveal that the national drinking water standards have been violated, then your supplier must take action to correct the situation," he said.

"When there are violations, the water supplier is required by the Act to notify the user and to announce the violation to the newspapers, radio and TV stations."

In the Interim Regulations, standards have been set for 10 chemicals, six pesticides, bacteria, radioactivity, turbidity, or cloudiness. Most of these substances occur naturally in the environment and in the foods people eat. The regulations reflect the levels that can be safely consumed in water. Taking into account the amounts of exposure from other sources.

Two substances, bacteria and the amount of nitrate found in the water, pose an immediate threat whenever they are exceeded.

"Coliform bacteria from human and animal wastes may be found in drinking water if it isn't treated properly, or if contamination is occurring in the distribution lines. Waterborne diseases such as typhoid, cholera, infectious hepatitis, and dysentery may pose an immediate threat to children under six months of age."

Most Needed Jobs Listed

WASHINGTON—As an aid to young job seekers, the U.S. Labor Department has published a list of 87 occupations frequently in demand by employers at state Job Service offices in the past year which require some college or high school preparation.

The department also reported a 35 percent rise in Job Bank listings in 1977. The first extra edition of "Occupations in Demand at Job Service Offices" was designed by the U.S. Employment Service to help students and recent graduates make better informed career and job search decisions.

To show the most recent job openings, the extra edition gives the 87 occupations requiring college or high school that were most frequently in demand by employers at local Job Banks during September, October, November 1977. Employers listed a monthly average of 155,000 such openings with Job Banks in that period.

Following are examples of jobs that require some college and some experience, the average number of openings available during the month, annual or hourly pay range, and average number of openings available at the end of the month.

Accountant, electrical equipment, manufacturers, government agencies, chemical plants, and educational institutions; Buffalo, Little Rock, Wichita, and 17 other areas; 1,874 openings; 7,771 to 117,757; 1,123 available at month's end.

Computer programmer, business services; machinery manufacturers; general government; and insurance agencies; Baltimore, Cleveland, Ft. Worth, Trenton and 32 other areas; 2,447 openings; 8,953 to 118,291; 1,727 available at month's end.

Electronic technician, manufacturers of photo-optical instruments, transportation equipment, and general business firms; Cincinnati, Dallas, Milwaukee, and 19 other areas; 1,446 openings; 7,396 to 114,365; and 925 available at month's end.

The extra edition also indicates which jobs require college, but in many cases little or no experience. For example:

Nurse (RN), health service institutions, human resources agencies, general government; Chicago, Kansas City, Orlando, and 21 other areas; 1,654 openings; 78,292 to 113,325; and 1,170 available at month's end.

Practical nurse (LPN), same employers as for nurse; Albany, Houston, St. Louis, and 37 other areas; 2,185 openings; 10,758 to 110,756; 1,297 available.

Recreation leader, membership organizations, educational institutions, human resource agencies, general government; Atlanta, Birmingham, St. Louis, Washington, D.C., and 22 other areas; 2,627 openings; 76,557 to 110,300; and 1,758 available at month's end.

Jobs requiring only high school preparation but some experience include:

Administrative secretary, business firms, membership organizations, social service agencies; and general government; Dallas, Louisville, New York City, and 40 other areas; 3,319 openings; 6,578 to 114,329; 1,651 available.

Mechanical, dentures, metal products fabricators, manufacturers of machinery and electrical equipment, transportation equipment; Cleveland, Dallas, Philadelphia, 13 other areas; 1,324 openings; 6,343 to 141,599; and 857 available.

Service establishment manager, eating and drinking places, educational institutions; clubs and membership organizations; Chicago, Harrisburg, Milwaukee, and 23 other places; 1,758 openings; 5,908 to 112,482; 944 available at month's end.

Tool and die maker, manufacturers of transportation equipment, rubber and plastics, electrical machinery and equipment; Akron, Long Island, Madison, Rochester, N.Y., and 19 other areas; 1,468 openings; 3,471 to 71,932; and 944 available at month's end.

Job requiring high school but in many cases little or no experience:

Manager, retail stores, credit unions, general merchandise stores, eating and drinking places, auto sales and service; Atlanta, Indianapolis, New Orleans, Puget Sound, and 56 other areas; 2,339 openings; 5,427 to 110,813; and 1,592 available at month's end.

General office clerk, durable goods wholesalers, educational institutions, health services, social services, general business firms; workers were in demand at most Job Bank locations; 1,468 openings; 3,471 to 71,932; and 944 available at month's end.

Typist, insurance printing and publishing, and banking firms; police and courts, and general government; Birmingham, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Newark, and 24 other areas; 2,586 openings; 6,343 to 9,746; and 1,033 available at month's end.

The Occupations in Demand bulletin has been published by the Labor Department's Employment and Training Administration (ETA) since June 1977. It identifies jobs most frequently listed with state Job Service agencies and is the first large scale national effort to tell job-seekers what types of jobs are most often available, how much they pay, and where they are located.

The ETA emphasizes that there is no guarantee that jobs listed in the bulletin are still available. They are occupations for which there was a recent continuing demand in the case of Job Service bulletins was September, October, November 1977.

Persons wishing to obtain single copies can get them from Job Service offices or by writing, the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. While supplies last, they can also be obtained by writing the U.S. Employment Service, (Attention: Training and Information Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. 20213).

Real Estate Calls For Perseverance

A successful real estate salesperson is a blend of hard work, persistence and diplomatic communication skills, according to Dr. William Smith Jr., chairman and professor of business law, insurance and real estate at Baylor University.

A real estate salesperson must often "substitute perseverance for charisma" because of the competitive nature of his career, Dr. Smith said.

Texas has about 82,000 licensed real estate salespersons and brokers. For many of them, income from real estate is merely "jam of the bread," Dr. Smith said. "And there are a lot of housewives and barbers that might make one sale a year."

In order to rise above the "hobby salesmen," the successful salesperson learns to communicate effectively with his clients, Dr. Smith said.

"You're a middleman trying to find a price acceptable to the seller and the buyer," he said. "A salesperson's responsibility is to inform clients about financing, taxes and legal responsibilities."

Many licensed salespersons enter the real estate business without a college education. "There's no doubt that you learn by doing," Dr. Smith said, "but within three years a college graduate can catch up with the man who has had no college education when he's been in the business 10 to 15 years."

College courses in real estate business law and business mathematics provide a partial foundation for a real estate career, Dr. Smith said. Additional courses in English and speech complete the training necessary for the "persuasive" nature of real estate, he added.

With this kind of education, "you could go into government service," he said. "You could be a property manager, appraiser or a mortgage broker."

There are other job opportunities for real estate majors in banks, advertising agencies and savings and loan associations.

Some colleges and universities offer intern programs for students majoring in real estate. "The students observe real estate transactions to gain first-hand experience," Dr. Smith said. "They learn how salespersons contact prospective buyers, show property and complete sales transactions."

With 90 clock hours of real estate education, sales applicants in Texas may take a comprehensive examination to obtain a license. Applicants for a broker's license in Texas must have completed 180 clock hours of real estate courses and have served with a licensed broker for two years. License requirements may vary from state to state.

Exam questions are taken from the state's real estate manual in areas of license law, contracts, instruments, mathematics, contracts and mortgages.

A newly licensed salesperson can expect to earn about $10,000 the first year from real estate commissions, Dr. Smith said. Commission rates fluctuate from five to eight percent throughout the nation. There are unlimited sales possibilities in growing cities and states throughout the nation, Dr. Smith said. Large cities such as Houston, Dallas

Freedom Awards Applicants Sought

VALLEY FORGE, PA.—Nominees are currently being sought for the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge for consideration in its annual national awards program which will, for the 30th consecutive year, honor individuals and groups for their work supporting and perpetuating the ideals inherent in the American political, social and economic systems.

The program is comprised of twenty-five separate categories of real estate activity. Nominated material must have been written or created after October 1, 1977 and must be submitted to Freedom Foundation by October 1, 1978.

Areas in which material is eligible include journalism, speeches and public addresses, youth, advertising, electronic communications, and film, community programs, non-profit and corporate publications, government and education.

All awardees are selected by an independent panel of state supreme court justices and national officers of veteran, patriotic and service club organizations, which convenes each November at the Foundation's Valley Forge headquarters.

In addition to awardees in the program's regular categories, the jury may recommend individuals and organizations to receive special national awards for activities the award deems "unusually meritorious."

A separate area of the awards program is the recent "Private Enterprise" award. This award is presented to individuals, instruments, and college educators who initiate programs which develop a better understanding of the American private enterprise system.

Whisperings From The Holiday Pines

By BARR BOOTH
The highlight of this week was a dance recital by LaLinda's dance studio. Staff and residents alike just tingled to the music as little feet gaily danced up and down the dining room. We were favored with the following number: Tina Whitacre and Laurie Fortenberry did a tap dance. Melissa Currie, Teresa Cook, Tina Shawn, Michele and Monique Odum did a ballet dance with brooms. Never did see a broom swing like that before. Cheryl Grammer showed us a glimpse of a penquin. Another tap dance was presented by Lynn & Joan Jordan. We were then shown another ballet by Shelly Martindale & Stephanie Hill. Tina Whitacre did a ballet solo. Then Shannon Morrell danced for us, followed by Allisa Hayes, Stephanie Isacks, Mollie Odum & Tamarind Odum. We certainly do express our thanks and will be looking forward to another recital as soon as possible.

Some of our residents visited friends in the hospital. We miss Mary Thompson, Evelyn Bernal and Bud Wisenbaker, who are patients in Tyler County Hospital, and hope they soon will be able to return home to us.

Easter is early to Holiday Pines, with the arrival of bunnies made by Mrs. Rayburn's art classes at Kirby High. These beautifully made bunnies will do much to brighten our days this month. Thanks so much to everyone who helped in this project. We appreciate your thinking of us.

With spring planting upon us, we appreciate the efforts of Mr. Ora Baker who came over and plowed a section of garden for us. It is only because of the interest of friends and volunteers that we are often able to carry on certain programs. A special thanks, Mr. Baker.

Perhaps someone reading this is thinking that they have no special ability we can use. Try us and see! If you have some talent, skill or love you want to share, we can show you the biggest smiles of appreciation around. Even if you can only spare an hour or two a month, we can find a place for you. Contact Barb Booth at 283-3397 to enrich your own life as well as ours.

Bingo prizes this week were won by Mr. J.T. Lindsey, who won the first and last game, and also by Mr. Lazenby, Anna McQueen and Pearl Swindell.

The winning ticket for our quilt raffle was drawn by one of our residents, Mary Wright. She drew the name of our administrator, Mrs. Ruby Marrero. Upon receiving the quilt, Mrs. Marrero presented it to Sharon Collier, who will soon be leaving us to be married. Congratulations for winning Mrs. Marrero, and to Sharon for getting to keep the quilt everyone wanted.

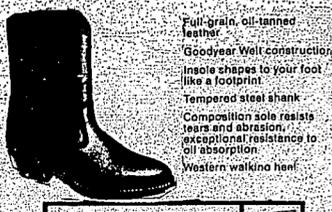

We'd like to say goodbye to both Josie Bailey and Mr. Marion Thompson, who have left us to live with family members. We shall miss you both, and wish you the best.

We would also like to say goodbye to our previous activities director, Ann Metzler. Ann was presented with a baby blanket and a baby carrier when she left. Be sure and come in and show us your new little bundle.

NOTE FROM OUR ADMINISTRATOR:
Just think how happy you'd be if you lost everything you have right now—and then got it back again. This is how some of our residents feel when they get a visit from one of you—come by and visit and give back something lost—a time-friendship, or a relationship with someone.

Arts Meeting Set For Tyler March 11

TYLER—The Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities, and the Texas Arts Alliance will sponsor "Spotlight on the Arts in East Texas," an informational meeting on March 11, from 9 a.m. to noon, at the Tyler Museum of Art, 300 Mahon Avenue, Tyler.

Goal of the program is to provide information and ideas to encourage greater participation in the arts by the people of East Texas.

"Spotlight" will feature a presentation by the Commission's Visual Arts Advisory Panel, experts in the visual arts who act as resource people for the Commission to review and make recommendations on visual arts grant applications.

Colmesneil News

By LOU ELLA MOSELEY
Saturday night is the date for the next supper at the Community Center. Bring your covered dish and join the group for an evening of games, visitation and fun.

Friday was a full day at the Center. The morning began with a meeting of the Home Demonstration County Council, directed by the county Home Demonstration agent, Bellinda Covington, and closed with a delicious covered dish luncheon. The afternoon program consisted of a very interesting CPR school of instruction with Frankie Rogers, lab technician at the Tyler County Hospital, as instructor. A large number from throughout this vicinity participated.

On Thursday the local 4H club met in an instructive meeting at the Center and on Sunday morning members of the Brotherhood enjoyed a delicious breakfast here. Saturday night is the date for the next community supper here. Everyone is invited to be present for delicious food and good fellowship with neighbors and friends.

In the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordan Schandorf on the past Sunday were her children and grand-sons, Mr. and Mrs. Don Young of Woodville, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wigley of Lufkin and Mr. and Mrs. Leland Schandorf also of Woodville, each with a little son. Joining the group at their family dinner was the father, Floyd Hignett of Colmesneil.

Sincere sympathy is extended from neighbors and friends to the Haralson and Mann families in the recent death of Wilda Mae Sidoric of Austin, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ross Haralson, natives and members of pioneer families of Colmesneil. A beautiful memorial service was rendered at Edwards Funeral home on Saturday afternoon with burial in the Colmesneil Cemetery. Her son Mike and his wife of Austin, joined other relatives from this vicinity in the services.

At home for the weekend from Sam Houston University were Tim Brown, Rhonda Fowler and Teresa and Jay Benton. Congratulations go to Teresa, Jay and Roger Ogden for again making the Dean's List and also to Rhonda for winning the Miss Huntsville Talent Show. Rhonda, with her two sisters, Glenda and Gina, spent Sunday at the Fat Stock Show in Houston.
