Commissioners Approve Rackley As New County Extension Agent

The Tyler County Commissioners Court met Monday and attempted to tackle a 20 item agenda many of which had to be held off till a special called meeting this Friday, Jan. 12 at 10 a.m., at the Courthouse.

Highlighting action which was completed on Monday, the Commissioners heard and accepted a recommendation from District 9 County Extension Agent Shirley Neel that the Court hire Liz Rackley a native of New Boston, in Bowie County to hold the County Extension Agent position recently vacated by Belinda Covington, who recently accepted a similar position in Nacogdoches.

The commissioners said they were encouraged by Mrs. Neel's recommendations and said that they hoped Miss Rackley's transfer to Tyler County could be effected as soon as possible. Neel said she hoped the move could be made by March 1.

Rackley has served a two year stint as County Extension Agent—Home Economics in San Jacinto County and is a 1973 graduate of East Texas State University in Commerce. Her responsibilities in Tyler County will include establishment of Home Economics Program here in cooperation with the Program Building Committee along with the Family Living Committee.

The court approved the County Extension agents report, the county treasurers report, and the group gave permission for Justice of the Peace John Spanhanks and Roy Drake to attend a Peace Justice school.

Other action saw the commissioners set the official county holidays for 1979 by shifting Columbus Day holiday toward Christmas so employees could have a three day vacation.

In other routine business the court set official election hours from 7 a.m. till 7 p.m. and agreed to pay a $25 monthly charge to the county rural fire departments.

Appointments were made for supervisory positions over responsibilities at the Tyler County Airport, the Tyler County Sanitary Land fill and the courthouse. Commissioners Riley and Fowler agreed supervisory positions respectively with Judge Allen Sturrock supervising the court house activities.

The court also accepted the county clerk's year end report noting in a complementary manner a nearly 50 percent increase in clerk's office revenues for the past year due to an increase in criminal fines and the legislature raising the recording fees.

The court also approved the bonding requirements for each commissioner at the Monday meeting.

COMMISSIONERS MEET—Tyler County Commissioners came to their feet Monday when they were asked to study what holidays they set as official courthouse days off in 1979. Shown above are Precinct Commissioner Adnell Odum and Commissioner Kenneth Lowe checking out the days off for the coming year.

Expansion, Repairs: Friday Topics

Expansion for the County tax office and discussion needed repairs to the Tyler County Courthouse, will be major items of discussion at a special called meeting of the Tyler County Commissioners Friday at 10 a.m. at the courthouse.

The commissioners will pick up where they left off several months ago regarding a request from Tax Assessor Collector Barbara Tolbert seeking a major expansion of the tax office.

"With our business increasing daily and the fact that we're doing the car business now, the people just don't have any room," she told the Court at the regular monthly meeting Monday.

Tolbert said, "I just want to make sure the tax office facilities are what the people want."

Commissioner Leon Fowler said, "I think the original bid was too high ($56,000) but that I'd like to see us get on with something. I think we ought to readvertise for bids."

The Commissioners agreed to table discussion of the project till Friday.

Other big ticket items slated for discussion Friday will be remodeling/repairs for the Courthouse and a request from the District Attorney's office.

Other items to be discussed will include: a request from Robert C. Greer with the Texas City Refining Company, seeking permission to lay pipelines across county roads in Precinct 1 west of Warren.

approve paying bills of the County Auditors office consideration of request from Austin Fuller to attend a civil defense seminar in Austin on Feb. 20, 21 & 22 appoint a County Historical survey commission to initiate an inventory of bridges on county roads that need to be replaced.

advertise for bids to sell used grader and truck parts from Precinct 4.

discussion of court reports salary for the 88th Judicial district. The court convenes on the first floor of the courthouse in Woodville, regularly on the second Monday of each month. The public is invited to attend the meetings.

Woodville Council Meets

Woodville City Fathers met Monday in regular session at the City Hall hearing several appeals from residents concerning city services plus a request from State Highway Department for cooperation on Hwy. 69 improvements from the Hwy. 190 intersection north to the Woodville City Limits.

According to Homer Smith the resident Highway Department Engineer from Jasper, the project which could be started soon is part of some Woodville to Col. McNeill improvements along Hwy. 69 which include: installing a 44 foot crown with two 13 foot lanes and two 9-foot shoulders. The roadway would have more climbing lanes and some grade level improvements.

"It will be a two or three year job once we get under contract," Smith said, suggesting that the city approach the District Engineer from Beaumont seeking a cost relief from the project which he said might cost around $125,000. Smith intimated to the council that their portion might fall somewhere near the $25,000 mark. "But I don't know."

Smith related a Kirbyville project to the council where a portion of the funds was provided from state funds.

Councilman Doug Tolbert expressed concern about the cities responsibility in replacing water and gas lines as a result of the project.

In other business, the council heard an appeal from Woodville Motel owner Jim Dillon where he expressed concern about the city's expenditures of tourism funds to draw tourists to our area.

"The more people that come, the more money they get, the more taxes you'll get," Dillon said.

Dillon, who has for the past several years been a member of the Chamber of Commerce Tourism Committee, told the council that he has had experience in the field and would be glad to work with them in directing tourism dollars toward good advertising purposes.

Appeals were made by J.W. Henry for a promised Cable TV hookup which has never been completed. Council action called for City Attorney Joe Wheat to write the American Cablevision Company in order to get the Henry's hooked up.

A continuing drainage problem next to the Birdwell Building on West Bluff St. prompted building owner Judy Birdwell to appeal to the council for drainage repairs which it is hoped would solve water leakage into the store, which is adjacent to a city alley.

Birdwell spoke directly to the City Engineer who assured her after getting council approval that they would spend an estimated $500 on the project so that the situation would be corrected.

Mrs. Birdwell thanked the council for their quick response to her request Monday night, even though she said she had grown old with the problem over the years.

An annual audit prepared by the new Woodville Certified Public Accountant, Tom Weaver was accepted by the council without much discussion. Weaver said that the audit figures that were presented by him were rendered according to generally accepted accounting principles. He expressed thanks to city employees for help in working up the financial opinion.

A request by a local ambulance entrepreneur, Nate Greenup for favorable comments regarding a proposal by him to establish a Non-profit-making Ambulance Association which he said was currently being drawn by local Attorney Jim Clark, was also heard by the council.

Greenup told the council that memberships would be

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENTS—Resident Highway Engineer Homer Smith of Jasper is shown Monday, describing planned improvements on Hwy. 69 north from the Hwy. 190 intersection to the Woodville City Limits. Costs of the project may impact the city heavily and Smith was visiting council to explain some possible alternatives.

Post Office Plans Rural Patron Address Changes

Within the next two weeks, the Woodville Post Office will begin renumbering the addresses of our Rural Route Boxes. Postmaster Bruce Latiolais announced today.

New numbers will not be assigned over the entire route at one time, but boxes will be re-numbered in sections and those customers affected will be notified by mail as to what their new mailing address will be and the effective date of such.

In addition, all customers on the Rural Route will be requested to complete a Customer Listing Form, listing the names of all persons receiving mail in their individual box.

All rural route customers can rest assured that the renumbering process will in no way delay or curtail delivery of mail addressed to their old box numbers, as we will continue to deliver mail addressed as such for as long as it takes to notify all correspondents of their new mailing address. Postmaster Latiolais said.

"We realize also that this will cause some inconvenience, but once our addresses are revised and our customer listing files are updated, duplication of box numbers and use of alphabets in addresses will be eliminated and a more accurate and efficient delivery service will result," said the Postmaster.

"We request your cooperation in the successful completion of this process and in notifying your correspondents as soon as possible after your box number has been changed and if we can be of any assistance please contact this Post Office," Postmaster Latiolais requested.

Browder, Blake Comment On First Legislative Day

—Browder—

Representative Jim Browder was surrounded by his wife and children as Secretary Steve Oaks called the House of Representatives to order at noon Monday.

The promise of working with a Republican Governor does not pose a great problem according to Browder. As he explained, "I feel the republicans and conservatives and moderate democrats have basically the same goals." Although many bills have been prefiled so far, Browder tends to take a wait and see approach regarding their impact this session.

"You can introduce anything but getting it through the committee system is something else," he added.

The most important bill of this session will be the enabling legislation for the tax relief amendment passed last year. These bills may face a tough fight in the house, Browder feels, because the same people who opposed the tax relief amendment will oppose the bill to make it work.

—Blake—

The state capitol was filled with legislators and their families as the 66th Legislature was called to order at noon Monday. Senator Roy Blake was very optimistic about the prospects for this legislative session. When asked about working with a republican governor, Blake replied, "I've visited with him (Gov. Elect Clements), briefly and I like some of the things he says. I'm going to try to forget the fact that he's a republican and work with him."

Blake expressed doubts that Gov. Elect Clements would be able to cut taxes as much as had been promised during the campaign, but added, "This was a goal Clements had and certainly we all need our goals, we'll work toward that end because I'm certainly in favor of cutting taxes."

Among the meaningful tax relief bills filed so far is one that would take a one cent levy of the state sales tax revenue and return it to property taxpayers in the form of a reduction in their school taxes.

Senator Blake introduced a bill which would keep people from drawing unemployment compensation when they leave their jobs voluntarily or are fired with just cause. Blake explained, "I think people drawing unemployment compensation after they voluntarily leave a job is wrong and going to work to remedy this."

Service League To Meet

The regular meeting of the Woodville School Service League will be held Monday, Jan. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the Library at the Wheat Junior High School.

A representative from the administration will discuss the new process for accreditation that will be going on in the Woodville schools.

Service League meetings are currently held on the third Monday of August, January and May. An amendment to the Bylaws will be voted on at this meeting to change the August meeting to September.

All Service League members are asked to attend. This meeting is open to the public and all friends and families in the Woodville district are invited. Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Letters To The Editor

Holly Hill
Friendship, MD, 20758
Jan. 11, 1979
Dear Sir,
I am writing a book on "The Claggett family and its descendants" bearing other names. An offshoot of this family used to live in Tyler County and descendants may still be there. If you would publish this letter asking living relatives or anyone having knowledge of them to get in touch with me, I should be most grateful.

Anderson Barclay, one of the earliest settlers of Tyler County and one of the captains of Santa Ana at San Jacinto, married Sarah Ann Prather, a Claggett descendant. Their children were William Walter (who moved to Polk County), John E. Elizabeth, Mahala V. Anderson Jr., Jerry, Milton H., Artelia and Amelie.

Anderson Barclay Jr. was probably A.E. Barclay, living in Tyler County in 1860 with Mary, James and Elizabeth and Thomas W. Amelie married a Mr. Platt and was living in Tyler County in 1890, with daughters Nora and Georgia. Milton H. Barclay was living in Tyler County in 1900, among his twelve children were Tabitha, Matthew, Dora, William, Lela and Edgar. I know nothing more recent.

I am determined to make the part of my book that will deal with Tyler County history and people as complete and accurate as I can, should appreciate any help with this from your readers very much indeed.

Yours sincerely,
Bruce M. Claggett

Theater Group Plan Monday Meeting

There will be a meeting Monday to continue formation of a Woodville Little Theater at the Woodville Country Club on Wednesday, Jan. 15, at 7:30 p.m. Betty Stafford is temporary chairman of the organization.

Reports of the nominating and by-laws committees will be presented to the group. Anyone interested in any phase of play production is invited to attend the meeting. This will be a family organization and all ages are welcome.

There are many types of jobs associated with a Little Theater. Of course there are the officers who try to guide in a business-like manner while trying to promote a cultural and social atmosphere.

In preparing for a production people are needed to read and select suitable plays, those who help with the ticket and distribution, poster, other types of publicity and design and printing of programs.

For actual production of a play, other than a one-act, jobs to be filled are those of set design and construction, set decoration, make-up, acquisition of wardrobe and help with costumes, changes during the play, lighting, sound effects, acquisition and on-stage management of props, used in the play, set changes when needed and curtain operation.

Rehearsals started week for the March 2 presentation of "A Midwinter Night's Dream" by William Shakespeare, directed by Dorothy Letkovits. The cast includes Millie Gardner, Tom Burke, Beth Stafford, Scott Tolbert, Mabel Utley, Gloria Smith, David Letkovits, Betty Ann Berman, Scott Tolbert, Rhonda Hall and Pety Watts.

Anyone interested in helping with the play, those interested in Little Theater activities who are unable to attend the meeting, may call Dorothy or David Letkovits at 283-5145 or Betty Stafford at 283-2653.

In years to come, it will be difficult to find a Houston cougar fan who does not know of the Houston-Tyler Darn Cotton Bowl game.

The "Cougars" have faired in the standings, now down to about 15,000, are sitting on their laurels, waiting to see if they are going to be taken over by a much more comfortable environment to see the game.

Many of us at home gave the game to the Cougars and watched over to watch the struggle between Penn State and Alabama, many of us cheering over the frustration of the Panthers trying to grab the brass ring. Number One in the nation, Meanwhile, there's an earthquake in California, but nothing to what befell Michigan, when USC scored who turned out to be the winning touchdown without the ball ever crossing goal line.

And Oklahoma and Nebraska were kind of in Houston-Tyler, by the time New Year's night rolled around. After all, nine football games, and the last one, a return didn't make the audience.

For the record, Texas' last battle was on Dec. 31, 1978, and Houston Oilers had worked off with the marbles earlier than Texas.

Woody Hayes, capped his 28 year coaching career at Ohio State by coaching out a Clemson player who had the audacity to intercept a pass on the field.

Woody had had lots of practice picking on television cameramen and reporters, but the Arkansas, taking in the sun, and Houston Oilers had worked off with the marbles earlier than Texas.

Child Welfare Workshop

Child Welfare Board members, from throughout Texas, met in Houston, Texas, recently participated in a series of workshops aimed at improving their skills in "boardmanship."

The workshops were supported by the Board's Child Welfare Advisory Board and the Texas Department of Human Resources, and are part of a statewide effort to strengthen child welfare board membership.

The workshops were held by Nedra Wilcox, assistant professor of Social Work at Lamar University. Mrs. Wilcox is a former protective services program director for TDRH and has been active in community efforts to recognize and prevent child abuse.

Board participants in Tyler County are Eileen Mason, Harold Jackson, Dora Kethan and Carolyn McGuire.

The agenda covered subjects ranging from a general overview of child abuse and neglect to the legal authority of child welfare boards and their relationship with TDRH staff. The workshops also included a seminar on child organization and the setting of goals and objectives.

Warren coach Billy Williams said, "Goodrich isn't a bad Class B team, but we made quite a few turnovers in the game."

The Warriors season record now stands at 9-5 in non-district play, while holding a 0-2 District mark.

TWO CAN TANGO! Pam Kervin, of the Warren Warriorettes, fights for possession of the basketball with a player from the Liberty squad, in action at the Colmesneil girl's tournament. Liberty surprised the Warren squad, beating them by the score of 56 to 37. Brenda Heisler of Warren looks on.

Warriorettes Slay Eagles

WOODVILLE—The Warren Warriorettes, in search of another District 172A crown, edged the Woodville Eagles, girl's team, by the score of 43 to 42 in Woodville's first District game on January 2.

Woodville kept the score close throughout the entire game, down by only one point going into the last period.

Warren's top shooters were Kay Freeman, who hit 12 points, and Pam Kervin shot for 16 points.

The Warriors season record, including non-district play, and a 1-1 District record, their only loss coming against Newton.

Bulldogs Beat West Hardin

COLMESNEIL—Using the hot hand of Darren Bean, the Colmesneil Bulldogs redefined themselves for the upcoming District 50-B race, defeating West Hardin by the score of 62 to 41.

Bean led the Bulldogs with 20 points, with Kevin Davis and Thomas Deason both shooting for 12 points.

Bulldog coach Ben Stewart said, "We played pretty good, but we hope to improve before District starts."

Rebels Defeat Yellowjackets

CHESTER—The Chester Yellowjackets dropped a heartbreaker to the Class A Evadale Rebels, losing by the score of 40 to 38, in a non-district action on January 5.

The game was close and exciting, at least to the spectators. But Coach Mark Warner, of Chester said, "We didn't play as good as I would of liked. Evadale is pretty good and they shot well."

Chester will have their hopes of winning the District title disputed by Brookland, Zavalla, and Leggett, which are considered the teams to beat in the District 50-B.

The Yellowjackets season record now stands at 6-13.

Up In The Air! Janette McNeil, a player on the Colmesneil Bulldogs squad, goes up in the air with an unidentified Chester Lady Jacket player, and fights for possession of the ball. The Bulldogs, burned Chester in semi-final action at the Colmesneil girl's tournament, winning by the score of 57 to 16.

Colmesneil Girls Win Over West Hardin

COLMESNEIL—The Colmesneil Bulldogs girl's team, led by the duo of Jierette McNeil and Lisha Gilder, put the West Hardin girls team by the score of 76 to 41 on January 2.

McNeil and Gilder teamed up for a total of 57 points, with McNeil leading the scoring with 32 points, and Gilder putting in 25 points.

The victory over West Hardin extended the Bulldogs winning streak to 15 straight games, losing only the opening game of the season.

The Bulldogs are the defenders of the District title. Will they run rampage over the rest of the District this year? "We'll be in there," says Colmesneil coach R.B. Moffett. "But Zavalla and Chester are going to have a say so. I also talked with the coach of Brookland, and they are playing off and on."

Chester Loses 62-45

BIG SANDY—As the District 50-B race starts, the Chester Yellowjackets are getting ready for their District season.

The Yellowjackets met the Big Sandy Rebels in a non-district game, and ended up on the losing side of the score, dropping the game by the score of 62 to 45.

Big Sandy led by eight points going into the last period, but then they ran over period, but they started pouring it on in the last few minutes of play to significantly pad their margin.

Tyler County Hobbyist Turns Pro

BY D. MOREY SITTON

Tools of this trade include torches, saws and grinders. Here VanValkenburg demonstrates his expertise with the torch.

A cold blue flame hisses from the torch, as drops of silver turn molten red under the heat. Within a minute the job is done—the finished product, "raindrops" of silver which will decorate bracelets, earrings, rings and pendants.

This jewelry, all highly polished silver set with turquoise, coral and other semi-precious stones, is the work of Kenneth VanValkenburg.

VanValkenburg, with his wife, Gladys, moved to Tyler County six years ago from northern New York State. The move was prompted, he says, to escape the chilling winters of the north and to reestablish a country lifestyle.

Known as a silversmith in the trade, VanValkenburg's interest in jewelry making began as a hobby. He was influenced, he says, by relatives he and his wife visited in California already in the jewelry making business.

A craftsman who "learned by doing," VanValkenburg prefers two methods of working with silver. Although, he says, several different techniques can be used.

The first method involves cutting designs, such as leaves, or the flat backing which the stones in rings and bracelets rest on, out of sheets of silver. Embellishments are added by using silver wire, which can be purchased in many forms, including triangular, beaded or square.

The second method, called casting or the "lost wax" method, requires the use of a wax model of the ring or item to be made. The wax model is set in a plaster-of-paris like substance. Silver, which melts at 1640 degrees F, explains VanValkenburg, is then forced into the mold by hot steam. After the silver sets, the mold is removed and the piece is ready to be cleaned and polished.

Not all methods of casting are as sophisticated, he says. One particularly fun method, yielding beautiful results, utilizes a coffee can, pinto beans, water and melted silver. First, says VanValkenburg, he fills the can with beans, then adds water to within an inch or so of the top. When the liquid silver is poured over the beans, it takes on a free form design—each time unique and original. These clusters are then polished and are used primarily as pendants.

Jewelry and stones go hand and hand, says VanValkenburg. And, many of the stones used in his work have been the result of rock hunting trips taken by he and his wife. He says their most frequent find is the "leave-er-right" and adds with a chuckle "leave-er-right-there."

Many steps are involved in transforming a rough rock into a "cabochone" or the polished, smooth stone ready for mounting. The first step, "slabbing off," is done with a diamond saw. The thickness of the stone is determined at this stage. Next, explains VanValkenburg, the desired shape and size of the finished stone is traced on with a template. At this point, he says, the stone is attached with wax to a rod. Using this handle, the stone is ground on a series of carbide wheels, each increasingly finer grained for a smoother surface. The final polishing, he says, is done on the leather surface of the polishing wheel.

At his craft for the past three years, VanValkenburg can be found making jewelry at his shop in the Big Thicket Gardens.

VanValkenburg uses a steady hand as he puts this stone to the grinding wheel.

Make Learning Real, Rewarding

COLLEGE STATION
Make learning real and rewarding for children by celebrating their achievements. Every year thousands of youths drop out of school because they are falling behind with school, a family life education specialist reports.

Most of them are of average or even high intelligence. Yet, learning has little value to them. Patricia Lamson says.

Ms. Lamson is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

To a young child, even more than an older child or a college student, learning must be real, and it must be rewarding.

MAKE LEARNING REAL
Learning must relate to the child's own world and to what has meaning to him. For example, happenings within the family are important and real to children. They love to tell friends and teachers about them. Celebrations, birthdays and holidays are real learning experiences, but they are much more, the specialist explains.

These happy experiences can help children grow emotionally mature.

Celebrations also provide an opportunity to develop and continue family customs and traditions.

Also, take time to listen to what children have to say about experiences which occur outside the family, she adds.

MAKE LEARNING REWARDING
Little children need parents and teachers to respond to their discoveries and appreciate what they create. Everyone likes to feel pride in personal accomplishments, children feel the same.

A smile, a nod and a few words of praise are usually enough to make a young child feel better. Ms. Lamson points out.

This is a time in a child's life when he responds most to Communication provides many opportunities to help children develop a foundation for understanding and learning words, numbers, time and measurement concepts, as well as encouraging them to express themselves.

Also, neighborhood walks can become learning experiences if parents take the time to point out nature happenings, street and traffic signs, colors, shapes and numbers or objects in familiar surroundings.

It also enables the child to begin to acquire a sense of space and skills necessary for learning a sense of direction and direction.

In addition, stimulate their curiosity and learning good attitudes about learning by going with the children to "look up" answers to questions.

Use books, reference books, libraries, and information to find answers to questions, rather than becoming discouraged by the child's recommendations.

Boost Performance Of First Calf Heifer

COLLEGE STATION
The key to a profitable cattle operation is to get a calf from the first-calf heifer back on her breeding track fast. Spitzer offers two general management practices which should become standard procedure in cattle operations:

1. Separate heifers from mature cows the last three months of gestation and through the breeding season. This will keep heifers from having to compete with mature cows for available feed.
2. Breed virgin heifers 20 to 30 days earlier than the regular cow herd to assure early calving. Calving early will give heifers enough time to return to heat during the second estrus period, which would then correspond to that of the regular cow herd.

If a producer is short on feed or is faced with thin heifers at calving time, he should wean calves early or alter the suckling pattern. Weaning calves at 30 to 90 days of age removes one of the primary stresses on the heifer and makes more nutrients available for other body functions such as growth and rebreeding. An alternative is to limit suckling to one time per day for 30 to 45 minutes until the heifer shows heat. This should not begin before 30 days after calving and can run for about 45 days.

Research by Dr. Ron Randed with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station indicates that once daily suckling can dramatically decrease the interval from calving to first heat after calving while having little effect on a heifer's milk production or total calf gain to weaning.

Not all heifers are created equal. Giving heifers in your herd a little special treatment can boost their reproductive performance, contends the specialist. "This can mean extra dollars in future years of production due to a larger calf crop as well as increased weaning weights of early-born calves."

IRS Tax Help Available

BEAUMONT—Many taxpayers look forward to filling out their income tax forms about as much as Columbus did about the time he set foot on the Americas. Yet for those who need help, it's available at Internal Revenue Service.

"We have changed the instructions and made them easier to read and follow," says Ray Ealy, local IRS Director's Representative, pointed out.

The instructions received in the mail with the tax forms can answer most questions and alert taxpayers to deductions that they might have overlooked. Ealy added.

IRS supervisors and other quality review personnel monitor tax assistance telephone service to make certain that assistance is accurate and courteous.

"Walk-In Help-Taxpayers who need to ask questions person-to-person can get individual help at the IRS office," Jack Brooks, Federal Building, Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Smoking Harmful to Unborn

More than 90 percent of adults believe smoking is harmful to their own bodies. But the numbers of teenage girls who smoke is climbing, and only two-thirds of young women smokers realize smoking can harm an unborn baby.

Pregnancy is a perfect time for women to kick the habit for good, says the American Lung Association. A recent survey showed that 35 percent of women quit smoking during pregnancy.

Another study at Stanford University Medical Center, which featured special techniques to aid behavior changes, found that one-third of pregnant smokers in the experiment quit smoking and were still nonsmokers when they were contacted nearly a year later.

An American Lung Association booklet for pregnant women, "Smoking and the Two of You", presents these sobering statistics to young mothers-to-be: women who smoke during pregnancy have more stillbirths, spontaneous abortions, and premature deliveries than women who don't.

"Your unborn baby doesn't breathe before the moment of birth. But it practices some motions of breathing while exercising certain chest muscles," says the Christmas Seal publication. "The effects of cigarette smoke are so immediate and so powerful that your baby's practice movements slow down, after smoke. The Christmas Seal people advise all pregnant women to stop smoking to create a life-enhancing environment for their unborn children."

Offices Close Due To Fire

The Better Business Bureau announced today that offices will be closed to the public for the next two weeks, possibly till the end of January, due to the recent fire of January 2nd.

Renovation of the entire office complex and sorting of files will take a tremendous amount of time, stated Mary Ann Kittell, Bureau Manager.

Although the Beaumont Fire Department did an outstanding job in extinguishing the blaze, which started in an antique light fixture, before irreparable records were burned, there is extensive smoke, soot, and water damage which could not be avoided. The Better Business Bureau is extremely grateful for the immediate response and the careful attention given to preserving records by the crews of the 8 supplier trucks which responded. "As quickly as the fire was spreading, we could have lost invaluable, irreplaceable records, as it is, these are damaged, but to what extent, we don't yet know, since the office staff are all out with the flu, presumably due to exposure to the coldest weather of the winter during the

Soldiers Return: 1864

In 1864, the age of about 30, John W. Stevens of Liberty County enlisted as a soldier in the Confederate Army. Taken prisoner after the Battle of Gettysburg in 1863, he was eventually freed in exchange of prisoners between North and South. Granted a 30-day furlough in Savannah, Georgia on November 16, 1864, Stevens decided to return briefly to Texas to see his family. Following the capture of the Vicksburg, Mississippi by the Union Army in 1863, however, regular transportation between the eastern and western portions of the Confederacy had become totally disrupted. Thus Stevens was obliged to travel the final four hundred miles of his trip on foot. Growing steadily weaker, but obsessed with the idea of seeing his wife and children, he trudged steadily on. On December 15, 1864, he passed through the East Texas towns of Jasper and Woodville, and was at last within a day's travel of his home. The first portion of a two-part series tells the final leg of the journey, as recounted by Stevens in his 1903 publication, Reminiscences of the Civil War.

Cold Weather Fire

PLAYING WITH MATCHES - This cold weather disastrous scene (at right) turned out to be one of mercy as a fire which started on Tuesday, Jan. 2 by a two-year old, playing with matches in the Johnny Wootten home, where seven persons reside, didn't take any lives. A five-year-old brother witnessed his sister playing with the matches, which resulted in an estimated $15,000 worth of damage. According to Woodville Volunteer Fire Marshal Alva Cook, approximately 17 volunteers responded to the scene with an estimated 25,000 gallons of water used. The fire started at 10:22 a.m. and was tapped out by 11 a.m. (PHOTO LEFT) shows fireman Steve Evans preparing to go into residence.

Opportunities Exist For Volunteers

PHONE FRIENDS ARE FUN. Unfortunately, some people don't have any. You could become very special to an aging adult by just calling him/her weekly to chat or perhaps talk about a problem he/she might have. You will be joy-hearing Garry say, "It Gets Sweeter." Garry is presently serving as Music and Youth Director at the First Baptist Church, Alvin. He has a wife, Kaye, and three children: two boys, Kyle and their son, Randy. Tyler County will remember Kaye Owens as having been a "phone friend" in the past. She was a very good teacher at the First Baptist Church, Alvin. Partnerships To Get Close IRS Looks AUSTIN-The federal tax returns of partnerships, particularly those showing losses exceeding $25,000, are coming under closer scrutiny, according to the Internal Revenue Service. IRS District Director Robert M. McKeever said that a high percentage of returns showing losses of more than $25,000 will be examined.
 The tax official said that IRS has doubts about the accuracy to determine the correct tax liability of these kinds of returns, beginning with partnerships returns filed during FY 1978 (October 1, 1977-September 30, 1978).
 "Of interest is income from any partnership, syndicate, group, pool, or any other venture which is not a trust, estate, or corporation for federal income tax purposes," he said.
 McKeever said that, in the past, partnership returns have not received the same examination, emphasis as corporate or individual returns. The increased activity in the partnership area is part of the IRS' program to detect questionable tax returns, he concluded.

Rural 'Hero' Sought

WACO-The search is underway for Texas rural hero of 1978.

The Rural Heroism Award, sponsored by the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, is presented annually to some deserving person who has performed an act of exceptional bravery during a time of crisis, according to Ben Bullard, Council president and assistant safety director of the Texas Farm Bureau.

All entries must be submitted by March 5, 1979 to the Rural Heroism Award Committee, Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, P.O. Box 489, Waco, Texas, 76703, according to Bullard.

The heroic act or deed must have occurred within Texas during 1978 and should be related to farming or ranching operations.

Nominations should include a written account of the incident, the nominee's address and phone numbers, newspaper clippings, if any, should also accompany the nominations if available.

The award will be presented at the Monday morning opening general session of the 40th Annual Texas Safety Conference and Exposition, March 25-28, Shamrock Hilton in Houston.

Shipping Fever Under Study

Texas ranchers and feedlot operators lost cattle valued between $30 and $50 million each year to an old enemy, shipping fever.

"Shipping fever is the cattle feeding industry's number one problem," commented Dr. David Bechtel, Cattle Feedlot Consultant and president-elect of the Texas Veterinary Medical Association. "Between 10 and 20% of all cattle shipped in to feedlots are affected by shipping fever. This gets to be a pretty substantial number when you remember that Texas feedlots finished over 4 million head during 1977."

Shipping fever is a complex respiratory disease that affects young cattle. Extensive research is underway to more accurately define the cause of shipping fever through three bacterial pathogens and several influenza-like viral infections, accentuated by stress, are the generally accepted causes.

"The number of animals affected in any shipment is directly related to the amount of stress the animals have undergone," explained Dr. LeRoy Gayle, state veterinarian at the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory at College Station. "In some shipments I've seen a low of 1% affected to a high of 60%." In one recent case, a feedlot received shipment from the southeastern part of the country in which 20% of the cattle died and the other 80% were affected to some degree by shipping fever.

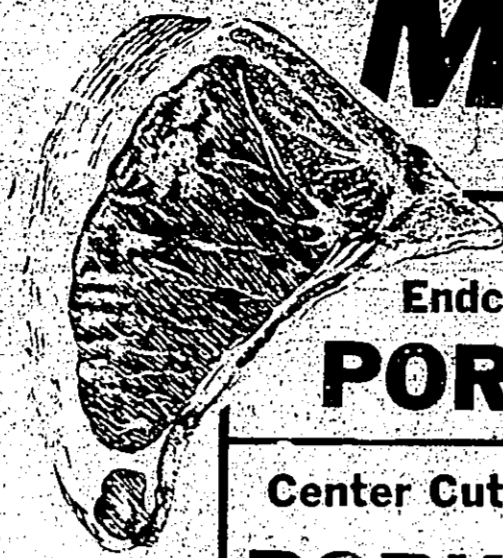

For ranchers buying stock for winter pasture, Dr. Gayle suggested that purchase be made within the rancher's general area. "Stock shipped long distances have usually been subjected to more stress and, therefore, are more likely candidates for shipping fever," Dr. Gayle explained. "If you're buying from an order buyer, insist on seeing the invoice so you'll know where the cattle came from and how far they've traveled. The kind of weather during shipment can make a difference, too, in the incidents of shipping fever."

Dr. Gayle also suggested that, when practical, each calf's temperature be taken as it is taken off the truck. Besides high temperatures, other shipping fever symptoms are dehydration, drooped ears, nasal discharge, restlessness and eye inflammation. A veterinarian should advise the owner about antibiotic treatment since some antibiotics are not effective against the respiratory illness. Good nursing, clean water, the best hay and no excitement are also prescribed for the sick calf.

"The bad part about shipping fever is that you can't get it fastidiously to what happens," Dr. Bechtel continued. "You may lose some of the calves and the investment you have in them, and those which are infected may not completely recover, so have a poor weight gain. When you've got shipping fever, you can't lose it with any."

Lamar Accounting Major Gets 4.0 Score

BEAUMONT-Charles Keith Kobodeaux of Nederland, Texas, who graduated from Lamar University Dec. 23, is only the second accounting major in the history of the university with a perfect 4.0 average.

He will be back on campus in January, pursuing his master of business administration degree, and will be a teaching fellow in accounting. Next fall he plans to enter the University of Texas to work on a law degree.

In compiling his outstanding academic record, Kobodeaux also participated in campus extracurricular activities and worked 30 hours a week running the record store. He also finds time for white water canoeing and back packing.

Dr. Richmond O. Bennett, head of the Department of Accounting, said, "We are very proud of him, not only for his academic accomplishments but for his extracurricular activities. The whole faculty has a great deal of respect for him, both as a student and as an individual. He is an outstanding, well-rounded young man. For this reason, we selected him to be a teaching fellow in the department."

Dr. John Ryan, dean of the College of Business, said he is work-oriented and responsibility-oriented, and other students like him are proud to have represented Lamar. They possess qualities, along with other strong traits, of high scholastic achievement.

Kobodeaux, 1973 graduate of Nederland High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Kobodeaux, 2913 Washington, Nederland. His father is senior vice president of Allied Merchants Bank of Fort Arthur.

"I cannot stress enough the importance to me of my extracurricular activities," the honor graduate said. "The Department of Speech awarded me a debate scholarship in 1975. In that year he became president of the Lamar Debate Club and was named outstanding novice debater.

He continued to win other scholarships. This past spring at the annual dinner of the Lamar Accounting Society, attended by most accountants in the county, he was awarded a Price Waterhouse scholarship and the Lamar Accounting Society Scholarship. The honor graduate made the point from the standpoint of economics, he felt advantage of being close to home. "I would recommend Lamar to anyone seeking an education in accounting. One could spend a lot of money going away to study, but not get any better education than Lamar offers."

He said "The Big Eight accounting firm constantly recruit our graduates. Twenty five percent of the graduating classes go to work for the Big Eight. Lamar turns out good graduates. They get good jobs. Classes are not large. I think you get more individual attention here."

He is a native of Lake Charles. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Homer W. Kobodeaux and Mrs. Francis V. Porche Sr. of Lake Charles. An uncle, Leon Kobodeaux, also lives in Lake Charles.

What is "should"? It is what somebody else has defined as the right way to act in a given, role, or situation and that we, at some earlier time in our lives, have adopted, explains Jenny Reinhardt, family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

More than 60 percent of all Americans now carry credit cards, compared with only half of the total population in 1970, reports Lillian Chenoweth, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Bergland Releases 'RARE' Plan

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, at a Washington Press Conference today, proposed wilderness designation for more than 15 million acres of National Forest Roadless Areas and proposed another 36 million acres of Roadless Areas for multiple uses other than wilderness.

Following Bergland's announcement in Washington, Forest Supervisor John H. Courtenay said from the headquarters of the four National Forests in the state of Texas at Lufkin that 12,212 acres of the National Forests in Texas are included in the national proposal for wilderness preservation.

The Texas areas include Turkey Hill on the Angelina National Forest consisting of 2,914 acres in San Augustine County; Big Slough on the Davy Crockett National Forest with 4,503 acres in Houston County; and Little Lake Creek on the Sam Houston National Forest with 2,700 acres in Montgomery County. Courtenay said these wilderness recommendations comprise 13 percent of the federal acreage nominated by the public last year by the National Inventory and represent one and one-half percent of the total land base of the four National Forests in the state of Texas.

Three other areas of the Texas inventory—Graben Creek on the Angelina National Forest consisting of 7,766 acres in Angelina County; Chambers Ferry on the Sabine National Forest with 4,081 acres in Sabine County; and Four Notch on the Sam Houston National Forest with 5,895 acres in Walker County have been relegated to further planning for later consideration of multiple uses including wilderness.

The remaining ten areas in the Texas inventory, consisting of 50,411 acres scattered throughout the four National Forests have been recommended for multiple uses other than wilderness. Courtenay said the total Texas inventory consisted of 16 areas comprising a total of 8,655 acres of federal land that have been under consideration since August 1977. Congressional designation of the 15 million acres as wilderness would almost double the size of the Department's portion of the National Wilderness Preservation System, and create the first wilderness on the National Forests in Texas.

Bergland simultaneously proposed that more planning be done on 13 million acres of the total of 62 million undeveloped acres inventoried by the Forest Service in 1977.

The proposals are the result of an 18-month Roadless Area Review and Evaluation (RARE) which identified the roadless areas and proposed what future use should be made of them. A Final Environmental Impact Statement, containing these proposals was filed today with the Environmental Protection Agency. Bergland said in announcing the RARE II proposals Bergland noted that during the next 45 days he will seek the counsel of members of Congress and Governors. "After this time, I will make legislative recommendations, final and send them to President Carter. I expect that shortly afterwards, the President will transmit the wilderness proposals to the 96th Congress with his recommendation that these areas be designated as wilderness," he said.

Wilderness areas may be designated by Congress. They include areas of undeveloped natural scenery where opportunities for solitude are retained. No machinery, roads, or structures are allowed in wilderness areas except for certain emergency situations. The uses possible on the 36 million acres proposed to be managed for other multiple uses could range from extensive recreation use with minimal development to more intense activities such as skiing, motorized recreation, timber harvesting, intensive grazing, water development and wildlife habitat improvement.

Bergland said briefings will be held here in Washington and at Forest Service field locations throughout the country to answer questions on the proposal. RARE II was an accelerated land management planning process conducted by the Department to identify roadless and undeveloped areas in the 187-million-acre National Forest System and to determine the best use for as many areas as possible. The objective was to help accelerate the basic land allocation decisions and remove as much uncertainty as possible about what would be done with the roadless areas.

With the aid of extensive public involvement, the process identified over 62 million acres of roadless areas.

In a Draft Environmental Statement issued last June, the public was asked to comment on the proposal. Comments were received from over a third of a million persons more response than any ever received by the Department on an environmental statement. A Summary of the Final Environmental Statement is being sent to those who commented on the draft statement.

Bergland said public comment was a major factor in developing the recommendations announced today.

Most responses, he said, focused on preferences for allocating individual areas. However, we also received a significant number of comments on what approaches we should use in allocating the and what decision criteria we should use in developing our proposals.

"We feel we have been responsive to the concerns expressed by the public and we are especially pleased that this proposal settles the wilderness and nonwilderness question for the great majority of these lands. At the same time, we feel the lands proposed for further planning have been found to require more detailed consideration than was possible in the RARE II process."

"These areas earmarked for further planning may have wilderness values and we will continue to gather additional data on these areas through the Forest Service planning

Cattle Raisers Object To USDA Anti-Brush Control Move

Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association severely criticized a Department of Agriculture proposal eliminating brush control from federal cost-sharing on a national basis recently in two letters that emphasized the close relation between brush control and soil and water conservation.

John Matthews, chairman of TSCRA's Soil and Water Resources Committee, told the acting director of the Conservation and Environmental Protection Division, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, USDA, that "if the gentlemen in your department were familiar with the problems created by brush and the beneficial results obtained by brush control, there could be no question that this practice should, instead of being eliminated, have top priority."

Matthews, an Abilene, Texas, rancher, is also chairman of the Texas Brush Control and Range Improvement Association.

Texas rangelands have a brush canopy that inhibits herbaceous plant production, says USDA's Soil Conservation Service.

Under the proposed regulations, the 1979 Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) differs from the past in that brush control practices (spraying, root-pulling, chaining, etc.) are not specifically eligible for federal cost-sharing on a national basis. Provisions are made for the approval of additional practices on a county-by-county basis, but the process would be long and very difficult.

The USDA contends that brush control has only minimal soil and water conservation benefits, but let's look at the facts, says John B. Armstrong, TSCRA president from Kingsville, Texas. "Woody plants, like mesquite use three to four times the amount of water used by the natural potential plant community. In drought, this situation intensifies, and without grass cover, active erosion occurs."

Armstrong also noted that woody plants in Texas use an estimated 38 percent of the state's total annual rainfall—nearly 20 times the amount used by all our cities, industries and irrigated farms.

Mesquite, one of the worst water abusers, has roots that can penetrate as deep as 125 feet to intercept water flowing to recharge aquifers.

Matthews emphasized that grass was "the greatest saver of rainfall that we have," and it was "also the best control against erosion."

The primary tax benefit of brush control is the conservation of soil and water, Armstrong added, "and the

Weather Loss Tax Breaks Possible

AUSTIN—If you sustained damage due to the recent cold weather, now is the time to consider the tax consequences, the Internal Revenue Service said today.

The loss of cash crops would simply reduce the crop income. However, if the cost of producing the crop exceeds the income from the crop sale, you may benefit in a casualty loss, requiring special tax treatment, according to IRS District Director Robert M. McKeever, taking pictures of the damage and arranging for appraisals as soon as possible to help substantiate the loss. Any other records, such as newspaper articles, should be gathered now even though the deduction will not be shown until the 1979 income tax return is filed in 1980.

The IRS official said that taxpayers should call or come by an IRS office and ask for Publication 547, "Tax Information on Disasters," Call 1-730-0, Fort Worth, Texas 76102.

Flood Control Information Released By Corps Of Engineers

Information which will help people living in the River Basins in Texas have a better understanding of the amount of flood control protection provided by Corps of Engineers Lakes was released today by the Fort Worth District, Corps of Engineers.

Colonel John F. Wall, Fort Worth District Engineer, said that people who have lived along a river for many years, particularly the ones who lived there prior to the projects, are generally very knowledgeable about the reduction in flooding provided by the dams. However, he said there is a common misconception among many people that, once a dam is built, all flood problems are solved. This is not so for two reasons; because floods can develop from rainfall over the area below the dams, and because all projects have a limit on how large a flood they can hold.

He explained that the dams in Table 1, attached, provide downstream flood protection by "catching that portion of the flood water entering the lakes, and releasing it over extended periods of time after downstream flooding has subsided. The table does not include the B.A. Steinhagen Lake (Town Bluff Dam) on the Neches River since it is for regulation of hydroelectric power releases for Sam Rayburn Reservoir and does not contain storage for flood control.

When a large storm occurs, the flood water can fill all the flood control storage in some of the projects and water must be released through the spillways, or gates in the dams, even though the streams may be out of banks below the projects.

The attached Table 1 shows the flooding potential that would have existed at various locations along the River Basins, in Texas, if the dams had not been built as compared to the condition that presently exists with the dams in operation. The term "10-year flood," shown in the table means that a flood of that magnitude can be expected to occur on the average of once in 10 years, or ten times in a 100 year period. Similarly, the "50-year flood" should occur on an average of once in 50 years, and the "100-year flood" once in 100 years.

Table 1 lists, in addition to dams, several projects which provide local protection by means of levees and/or channels.

The projects have been effective in preventing many dollars in flood damages shown in the attached Table 2; however, a potential for flooding still exists throughout the district. Colonel Wall emphasized that caution should be used when planning or developing any lands adjacent to major rivers or streams, even though there may be upstream dams.

Persons desiring flood plan information at a specific location should call the Fort Worth District's Flood Plain Management Service (AC 817-334-3207) or write to P.O. Box 17300, Fort Worth, Texas 76102.

Howard Hesseman returns to CBS with "WKRP in Cincinnati" on Monday, Jan. 15.

During the month of January a virtual avalanche of new series will show TV viewers. At ABC, "How the West Was Won" will replace "Monday Night Football." The "Osmond Family Hour," a comedy/variety series designed for the younger audience, will be seen on Sundays. Donny and Marie Osmond will star. "Flatbush" and "Coed Fever" occupy the other empty Monday night slots. On Tuesday, the CBS version of "Animal House" starts Jan. 22. On Sundays, "The Dukes of Hazard," "Onward and Upward" and "The Stockard Channing Show" are the newcomers. NBC has eight replacements lined up. On Tuesday, an ensemble of three 30-minute chapters, revives the "Perils of Pauline" tradition. "Superman" an anthology of suspense stories, which take place aboard a cross-country futuristic train, railroads into the Wednesday schedule. "Little Women," a takeoff on the Louisa May Alcott book, is slated for Thursday.

Nielsen Ratings Push Mediocre TV But Houseman Works on Quality Series

By DAN LEWIS

John Houseman recalls a very special radio show, which he and Orson Welles co-produced more than 40 years ago. It rocked the country.

It was the Mercury Theater production of "H.G. Wells' War of the Worlds," a dramatization of a Martian invasion of earth. The fictional alien invasion came over the radio waves so realistically that listeners responded with mass hysteria.

Houseman enjoys relating this story. He's especially careful to point out that "We only had a 3 rating for that show, against Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy's 35 rating, and we panicked the nation."

Houseman answers with this anecdote when questioned if he's concerned about the low ratings of "Paper Chase." The CBS Tuesday night series in which he stars as the stern, uncompromising law professor.

The role of Professor Kingsley is a continuation of the character he portrayed so successfully in the original film version. He won an Academy Award for best supporting actor.

Although the series is in deep ratings trouble — the bottom five for the past several weeks — CBS has renewed it for the season, undoubtedly because the network could make no sense out of offering another new show as a sacrificial lamb against ABC's two top-ranked series, "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley" on Tuesday nights.

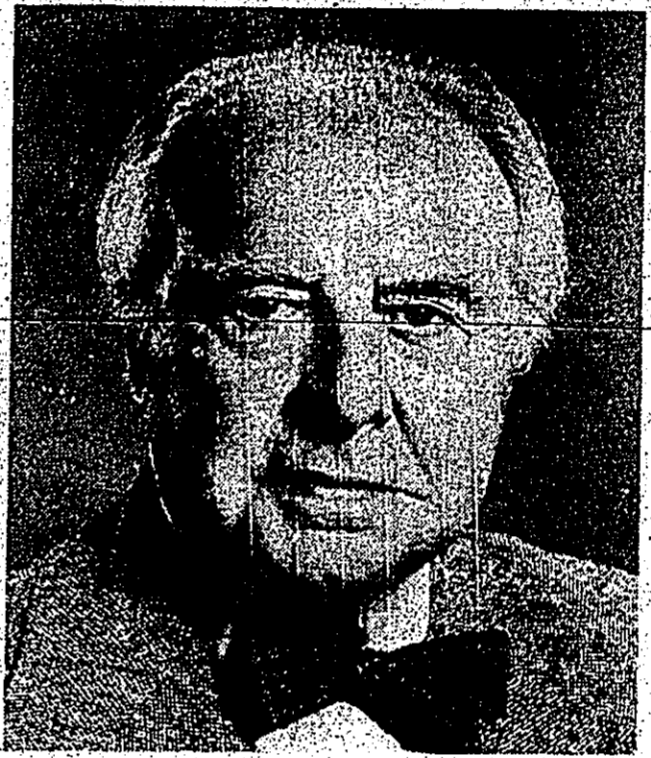

Houseman has little confidence in the Nielsen ratings. He says they ignore quality and the reaction of viewers who do watch.

"I do know that our show receives more mail at CBS than the network has received for other shows in many years," he points out.

Nor does he expose any concern over the strong competition.

"I don't mind being against those shows. We offer strong counter-competition. We do have a lot of people watching," he rationalizes, although the ratings, by television network standards, contradict his contention.

He is pleased with the show. "I adore the part of Professor Kingsley." Naturally, I'm pleased, too, that we're able to maintain a standard of good quality. That's very important to me," he says in his soft, sophisticated manner. Houseman, who has years of success as a producer and drama professor to his credit (in recent years, he took seriously to acting), speaks with the expertise of his background when he pays tribute to the television actor, which few in the other performing arts volunteer.

John Houseman stars as Charles W. Kingsfield Jr., the professor of law who paradoxically petrifies and captivates his students, in "The Paper Chase."

"The level of acting in television is extremely high," he declares, adding, "Incomparably higher than the level of writing."

His one major gripe with television, however, is that the performance is subordinated to everything else in a television production.

"Priorities go to the sound man, the lighting man, the set designer. They all get preference over the actor."

Television is a technical medium, he maintains. Because of it, there has been a cultural lag. He contends that television might have been sophisticated as early as the 1930s.

"But it didn't suit anyone to refine television. After World War II, the thrust was in FM radio, and it wasn't until the 1950s that television became of age. Still, for the main part, television has become simply a better outlet for movies."

Television helps create a very bad cultural climate," he continued. "We worship numbers. And television has become the perfect machinery for demagoguery and fascism. You find a trick (to galvanize viewers) and away you go."

"I'm being a little grandiose," he acknowledged, "but this is not a very good period culturally."

Houseman declares that he is not opposed to success. "But," he exclaims, "I believe the instruments of success are being abused." Television, he complained, "makes quicker and greater stars — and less durable stars."

He referred to the "old days" when great opera, stage and movie stars were more controlled about their exposure.

"That careful cultivation is not possible in television," says Houseman. "In the pre-TV days, you saw a star once, twice, perhaps even three times a year. Now, you see the star every week, and soon you get sick of seeing them that frequently."

Houseman, the ex-artistic director of the Juilliard School of Drama, laughs and notes, "My claim to fame now is that Robin Williams (star of 'Mork and Mindy') is one of my former students."

Two years ago, he launched a revitalization project for the University of Southern California's drama department and still serves as visiting professor.

"Robin Williams," he recalls, "went to Juilliard for three years. Then he became a stand-up comic, and I suggested that he continue his career. He always can return to school if it doesn't work out."

MUPPETISM — My husband and I really enjoy "The Muppet Show." We are over 50 years old, but this show brings a lot of laughter to us. I am interested in Miss Piggy. Is there a Miss Piggy doll on the market? If not, can you tell me where to write to get a picture of her? I hope you don't think I'm crazy. — Grandma Iris Anderson, Hammond, Ind.

Who ever said you have to be a kid to like the Muppets? You'd be crazy not to like them. Anyway, the best way to find out if there's a Miss Piggy doll or to ask for a photo would be to write to Herbie Kesel, 227 East 67th St., New York, N.Y. 10021. If you have no luck, just do what I did. Join their fan club. For information, write to The Muppet Show Fan Club, G.P.O. Box 2495, New York, N.Y. 10001.

HEART WAS WON — I've been searching all over for a poster or photo of the handsome star of "How the West Was Won," Bruce Boxleitner. Can you help? Also, will he be playing in any new movies and when will "How the West Was Won" be back on television? — Robin Moore, Norwalk, Conn.

Now that the football season is over, "How the West Was Won" will be making its way back to your screens on Monday nights. This year, though, the story will not be a continuing one; instead, each week's show will be self-contained. As for your heart-throb, he will co-star with James Coburn in a comedy-adventure film, "The Baltimore Bullet," which will be released to theaters sometime later in the year. I don't think he's made it to pin-up status yet, but you can try writing the show at MGM, 10222, Washington Blvd., Culver City, CA, 90230.

CLONES — Was Keith Carradine in both "Nashville" as the guy who's in love with Lily Tomlin, and in "McCabe and Mrs. Miller" as a kind of buck-toothed cowboy who gets killed? A friend says yes. They sure seemed like two different people to me. Also, do he and David Carradine have the same mother? — Terry McGuinn, Milwaukee, Wis.

That's just good acting, not a different person. Carradine created both of the memorable characters in those Robert Altman movies. He also starred in "Thieves Like Us" for the same director, if you missed it the first time around. Keith and David are half-brothers.

HIGH-KICKER — I recently saw "A Holiday Tribute to Radio City Music Hall." My mom was a Rockette back in the '50s, and I want to surprise her with a picture of them back at that time. Is it possible? — Kenneth, Longview, Texas.

"They should have old publicity photos on file, the question is whether or not you can wrangle a copy of your mom in her dancing days. Try writing the public relations department at Radio City. The address is 1260 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036. Can she still tap-dance her way around the dinner table?"

HONKY-TONK — Wasn't there a TV-movie remake of the Clark Gable movie, "Honky-Tonk" made not too long ago? I remember the movie, but not the stars. — Mrs. Julie Casper, Gastonia, N.C.

I guess it wasn't all that memorable after all, huh? Richard Crenna, Stella Stevens, and Margot Kidder (the new Lois Lane in "Supergirl") took over the Gable, Lana Turner, Claire Trevor, roles in the show at MGM, 10222, Washington Blvd., Culver City, CA, 90230.

(Send your letters to TV Dial-ogue, Pepper ville, as the guy who's in love with Lily Tomlin, and New York, N.Y. 10017.)

Interview

By PEPPER O'BRIEN

Dirk Benedict made it from a hole in the wall of Montana where they had no theaters, movies or even television to London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. He made it both on and off Broadway, in everything from Neil Simon to Shakespeare. And now he's making it on TV, shooting "blinding" smiles and laser beams at millions of viewers in "Battlestar Galactica."

But after all this, Dirk Benedict has decided he doesn't have what it takes to be an actor. Instead, he's decided to settle for something else. "I want to be the biggest movie star the world has ever known," he announces, blue eyes aglow with something resembling religious fervor, only glossier.

"Galactica" aside, Dirk Benedict is just a little spacey. The attacks are spasmodic. One minute he sounds a symphony in sturdiness. The Rock of Gibraltar.

There's a big difference between being an accomplished actor and being successful. In order to really make it in this business, you have to be willing to put yourself on the market. Be willing to compromise and face the reality of Madison Avenue," he says leaning back in a chair, working a cigar like the chairman of the board.

It's a serious dream to want to be a really good actor. But I am no longer interested in dedicating my life to acting. It takes certain psychological, emotional and spiritual needs, which I no longer possess.

"Of course, I could always go back and make a living as an actor. I've proven that on the stage. But right now I'm making a living by selling a TV show, by talking to people like you.

Insightful, yet cold. Calculating. How to make friends and influence people Hollywood-style.

Then just as you're beginning to think he'd tap dance in a rabbit suit if it would get him closer to stardom, the glow begins. The cigar goes down and Benedict stops blinking. He leans out of his chair as if the weight of his own sincerity is too much to bear. He offers it to the world.

"I want to use the arena that I've been placed in to benefit mankind. By my example I can help to change the world. No one has to eat junk food or live in dirty concrete cities. There's enough land in this country that we can all have a piece of it. There's a revolution going on that's quiet but strong — it's about getting back to basics.

"I'm fortunate to have been given certain talents, and I can use them to get beyond it all. To make it to the top and still be cool about it, you know?" he asks, not really looking for an affirmation, smiling beatifically at his own vision of paradise on the prairie.

"My dream is to get absolutely free. To make all the millions and have all the fame, and then walk away from it all."

And go back to Montana. Back to where his father first taught him the value of money when he was still a small, towheaded son of a country lawyer.

I was riding up an elevator with my father, and this man my father knew got on. Well, it turned out he was desperate and needed $300, and he was just telling my father because he needed someone to talk to.

"So my father just nods and takes out his checkbook and writes the man a check for $300. The man started crying and swearing he'd pay it back. But my father told him, 'I don't want it back.'"

Then he told me, never loan money, just give it away. It's easy. It has no person-fility. It doesn't mean anything.

(Good advice, and well taken by the son.)

With little more than the clothes on his back Benedict took to the road, after his previous series, "Chopper One" was hastily shot out of the sky.

He cooked health food for a family, branded cattle on a ranch, rode the rails with bums and ate with hobos. He even holed up in a cabin with only a bag of rice for company and sustenance.

All the time, Benedict earned no money, just his keep and the freedom to stick his thumb in the air in search of another ride in the whirlwind.

It's necessary to go out and walk among people," he says, a young man who finds Hollywood a lonely place to be when you just want someone with whom to share your thoughts and a bowl of bean sprouts.

It was a lonely place from the beginning, when Benedict looked in the mirror and a fair-haired, pretty-boy looked back at him. The movie industry was looking for ethnic grittiness.

"Sure, when I got to Hollywood I was the wrong type," he recalls. "No one cared for my background. No one cared that I could act. I mean I'm actually over-trained for this business. They just saw Troy Donahue, and dismissed me."

But television still has a large capacity for cute, and Benedict got his break amid the space-technology special effects and sky's-the-limit budget of ABC's "Battlestar Galactica."

Dirk Benedict Is a Down-to-Earth Guy

Now he just hopes he doesn't go up with the rest of the exploding stars. "The first time I saw 'Battlestar Galactica' I couldn't hear a word of dialogue. It's all deafening razzmatazz. But I guess that's America."

For now, Dirk Benedict is going to play by the rules of the American-way and peddle himself to the top. He may be selling himself short in the long-run, but he doesn't think so.

"It's better that I should be doing junk like 'Battlestar Galactica' than someone else. That sounds crazy. But I can handle the situation and turn it into something."

"I don't know, maybe I won't go through with it. But I didn't ask for this," he says, speaking of stardom as if it were some sacred vocation.

"Even if I don't change the world, I can always go back to the land in Montana."

In the end, maybe that is pretty down-to-earth.

ie, "Murder in Music City" airs Tuesday night (on NBC). But two insiders who've watched developments predict it could spin into a series for Sonny and make him a bigger star than his ex-wife Cher.

Incidentally, Cher is reported taking legal action to shed the name of Bono as well as the surname of her more recent husband, Greg Allman.

The actors who choose to play villains really have it made. Nobody expects them to behave any better off-camera than on. Nice guys like Pat Boone have it rougher.

Poor Pat, a church-goer who tries to practice what he preaches, has spent weeks trying to straighten out a mess not of his own making. It seems that the illustrious William Buckley was a fellow-guest on a Merv Griffin show with a chap who said he dug X-rated movies.

Later, in trying to give a word picture, Buckley chuckled that said chap with the X-rated appetite gave an illusion of being as wholesome as a Pat Boone.

Would you believe that some people misunderstood and thought Buckley meant the real Pat Boone instead of a Boone-faced type. No, no, no! And woe, woe because the real Pat, in fact, is an active spokesman against porn films.

It takes a lot to wipe the smile from bubbly Joyce Becker's face. She was even upbeat through the discomforts of an inner ear affliction. That is, until her doctor grounded her. No more airplanes for a while, he said.

No more flying? How could she possibly get the next of the regional Soap Opera Festivals that she emcees?

The doc had no answer. But Joyce's husband Allan Sugarman, who co-produces the festivals did. "We leave a day earlier, get a bedroom on the New York-Atlanta train, and call it a second honeymoon."

TV Star Scene

By RUTH THOMPSON

Beverlee McKinsey ("Another World") and other festival stars discreetly made separate travel plans.

If nobody tells you in dollars what salaries are, how can you be sure how much is "more"? You can't, of course. But if arithmetic isn't your thing anyway, then you may settle for the rumor that Rock Hudson's fee for "The Martian Chronicles" (NBC) is more than what any other actor has ever been paid for a six-hour miniseries.

Some do and some don't. Showfolks, that is, who take pen in hand.

His biggie ABC series "Battlestar Galactica" has not prevented Lorne Greene from putting together a book about dogs.

Jack Linkletter is said to have a how-to book on success in the works. And despite the flop of his recent midday NBC talk show, Jack has plenty of know-how. He didn't just help himself to poppa Art Linkletter's millions, he took on the management of some Linkletter enterprises and upped the profits.

And who said, "I won't?"

Reportedly it was the exquisite actress Claire Bloom, who had second thoughts about publishing her autobiography after all, though it was half finished.

Can the subjects of alcoholism and a mental breakdown be handled honestly and still with humor? That's the task the producer and writer have set themselves for an ABC film "The Cracker Factory." They also signed a big name to star as the housewife who tips her way into deepening troubles: Natalie Wood.

For those who want to know more about ancient Egypt than the nine-year reign of Tutankhamun, the new "Sunrise Semester" season starting next week on CBS will present three lectures weekly on "Ancient Egyptian Art," conducted by Dr. Robert Bianchi, the associate curator in the department of Egyptian and Classical Art at the Brooklyn Museum.
