Blake To Speak At Lions Club Thursday

State Senator Roy Blake of Nacogdoches will address members of the Woodville Lions Club at their noon meeting on September 4th at the Lions Club Building in Woodville. He will discuss some of the issues to be considered by the Texas Legislature in 1981 and will accept questions from the audience.

Blake will be introduced by Toby Spurluck who is in charge of the program. Walt Davis serves as president of the Woodville Lions Club and Austin Fuller is program chairman.

Senator Blake serves on the Human Resources, Intergovernmental Relations, and State Affairs Committees in the Texas Senate. He also serves on the Subcommittee on Nominations and is Vice Chairman of the Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs. During the last session of the legislature, he carried 26 bills that passed and were signed into law.

He will again sponsor legislation to eliminate the abuse of the Unemployment Compensation Act by indexing recipients. He will also support efforts to provide state funds for the improvement of county roads. He is sensitive to the problems of the elderly and is a supporter of increased state funding for public education.

Blake is aware of the problems that have arisen as a result of passage of S.B. 621, the Uniform Property Tax Code, and is looking at ways to improve it and lessen its burden on local taxing units and tax payers.

"I am concerned that the new tax code is imposing an unusual financial burden on local governments and local tax payers, and this is one of the reasons I voted against it," Blake said.

"Many other important issues will face us in January, but I feel we need to clean up some of our property tax legislation," he continued.

"I look forward to my visit with members of the Woodville Lions Club and appreciate the opportunity to express my views and to listen to theirs," Senator Blake concluded.

Three Arrested In Oak Park Holdup

The holdup of the Oak Park Grocery on Hwy. 92 between Spurger and Fred on Wednesday, Aug. 27, has resulted in the arrest of two Tyler County men and one juvenile.

Arrested in connection with the incident in which some $233 were stolen, were Mike Jenkins, 19, and Roger Holcomb, 20, both of Dam-B.

According to Deputy Jack Burns of the Tyler County Sheriff's Department, quick action on the part of Deputy Leslie DuBose resulted in the apprehension "within minutes" of one of the suspects at the 7-11 Store in Spurger after spotting a license tag number. Burns said that one of the others involved voluntarily turned himself in while the other suspect in the case was apprehended in Hardin County.

Burns reported that only $20 of the stolen money was recovered. He said he was told that the balance of the money was "thrown in the river."

One Death In July

Sergeant Russell Davis of the Texas Highway Patrol announced recently that during the month of July 1980, in Tyler County there was one rural fatal accident in which one person was killed. In addition, the Texas Highway Patrol investigated 23 rural motor vehicle accidents in which 18 persons were injured.

Through July of this year, there have been 109 rural accidents in Tyler

County, killing one person and injuring 69 people.

During the same seven-month period in 1979, there were 119 rural traffic accidents killing four and injuring 54 persons.

During the month of July in the 16 counties comprising District 2B, The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 447 rural accidents, killing 20 persons and injuring 219 people.

New Homestead Restaurant Menu Will Be 'Different'

A Pasadena couple, anxious to find a ticket to country living, will be opening a new restaurant, converted from the old Lee Norton home in Hillister, to an exclusive restaurant which will feature prime beef, Keish's homemade soups, and all with an accent on "fabulous" desserts.

The restaurant will be called "The Homestead", and the couple plan to open some time before Jan. 1, 1981.

The couple, Otho and Emily Sumner, have been looking to make their existence in Tyler County more permanent than just on the weekends. The two have a weekend home on FM 1013 between Hillister and Spurger and have been noticing the beautiful location which they refer to as the "Granny House." When they discovered that the structure was being sold and only for $1,500, they snapped it up and spent over $5,000 to have it moved to its present location which is on the old highway cutoff which runs about 100 yards parallel to Hwy. 69 just north of the Cypress Creek Bridge in Hillister.

The home, of traditional East Texas design, is solidly built and survived the one half mile move from its original location mainly because of the quality of its masonry workmanship. One is impressed by the window shutters which surround the house. Each has been painted a sonoma grape color, which resembles a more common federal blue. The whole building will be skirted with lattice.

Emily Sumner, who will be the hostess, and, who the main concept of the restaurant has been built around, will be the primary operator of the eating establishment. Husband Otho, when he's in town from his traveling as a sales representative for several tool manufacturing companies, will act as host.

According to hostess Emily, the driving force that prompted them to establish the restaurant was that when they arrived in Hillister from greater Houston area, they hated to start cooking late on Friday evening.

"We like people, and we like to eat out," she said.

"I don't want to use the word gourmet," Mrs. Sumner said as she proceeded to list the moderate to high priced entrees which will be featured at "The Homestead."

"I'm a dessert freak," she said, adding that desserts and homemade breads will be key features here. "We'll also have chicken cooked in wine sauce and eventually we plan to have sort of a gift shop with items for sale displayed on the walls of the restaurant."

On a tour through the building, one can see that the atmosphere will be warm and cozy.

The Sumners are currently looking for what they call a "gifted chef" to handle the cooking duties for the restaurant. "Do you know where we can find one?" they asked.

The Sumners emphasized in describing the style of cooking at the restaurant that "you don't have to get fancy to be good." However, they will plan for everything from business meetings to weddings from white table cloth to gingham print table cloths.

"We're not trying to come to Tyler County to make a killing," the couple said; "we're just fulfilling a dream we've had for a long time."

The restaurant will be located on some 30 acres of land which will be developed with walkways and strolling areas for visitors to soak up the East Texas atmosphere.

The restaurant will employ about a dozen employees when it opens and plans are now to operate only on Thursdays, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, "until we get started better."

Court Meets Monday

Tyler County Commissioners will meet in regular session Monday, Sept. 8 and hear another request from Sheriff Lewis Craven for compensation for legal fees incurred when a Dallas lawyer was retained to represent Craven and his deputies during the Charles Lee rape trial several months ago.

Commissioners have contended thus far that Craven incurred the expenses without the permission of Commissioners Court.

In other business, the court is expected to hear from John B. Smith regarding the Concerned Citizens Program and the Cancer Fund in Tyler County.

The court will also hear a request from Texas Ranger Roseie Davis for radio crystal and is expected to extend, in other action, permission to County Treasurer Austin Fuller to attend a Treasurer's Seminar in Austin on Sept. 16-17-18.

Other action will see the court approve the Deep East Texas Council of Governments Economic Plan for the region which is a prerequisite for Economic Development funding for the coming years. According to County Judge Allan Sturrock, the plan identifies population and other important demographic data.

The court will also approve Janet R. Gregory as a Deputy in the County Clerk's office.

Woodville Council Will Call For Citizen Input For Zoning Question

Preliminary indications from the Committee to study the possibility of zoning for the City of Woodville are, according to Chairman Councilman Dr. Jim Jinnette, that the council would like to gather more public opinion from the citizens of Woodville as to whether or not to install a zoning ordinance here.

At the request of Doretta Gilchrist, at the last regular meeting of Council a month ago, the group will meet again Monday to report on their study of the subject.

"According to Jinnette, 'The complicated nature of zoning is forcing council to seek more public opinion on the merits of calling for an ordinance of that type.' Jinnette said he expected that the committee work session held between the last meeting and the one scheduled Monday were very productive and that the council is now studying the criteria provided by the Texas Municipal League.

There are negatives and positives to zoning, Jinnette emphasized, and we just want more public input from the citizens of Woodville before we decided, after hearing from only one person who represents only one segment of our community.

According to Gilchrist, she feels confident that the city will do what over they think is best."

Mrs. Gilchrist, who lives in Timberland Subdivision said also that, "I do feel that zoning will help keep areas like the one I live in residential in nature."

"I just started getting the opinion of a few people up and down my street and they all agreed. So I went before council with the request."

Gilchrist, though admitting she didn't know the ordinance would mean zoning, the entire city of Woodville will hope the council will act favorably on the request. "In order for the city to move in the future in an orderly fashion,"

Pecan Weevils Starting To Move

COLLEGE STATION - Pecan weevils for the hickory shrub usually make their move worse than at this time of the year and can cause heavy damage to the pecan crop unless a controlled. Adult weevils emerge from the soil in mid-September. Larvae (worms) that hatch then feed on the kernels from the gel four hours. However, to the attack stage, emergence of adult weevils can be best determined by weevil emergence cones or cone traps placed under tree canopies. THE PLAN IN BRIEF
The object of the big distribution is two-fold: Primarily to increase the already large circulation of The Tyler County Booster and advance subscription payments from present, to gain new subscribers and at the same time afford our friends an unparalleled opportunity to profit in a big way through their spare time during the next few weeks. So it is a plan that works both ways and to the ultimate good of all concerned.
In order to gain this end quickly and advantageously, one of the most valuable and attractive lists of prizes ever offered by a local newspaper in this section of the country has been made ready for distribution among those participating most heartily. Ambition and energy are the only requisites for success. The plan adopted is straightforward and simple and is fully outlined in this announcement.
Let it be understood at the very outset that it is neither a "beauty" nor a "popularity" contest, but strictly a legitimate competitive proposition for enterprising men and women and one in which no element of chance enters. One feature of this competition is the fact that there will be no losers in this race!

Texas Girls 'Face' Finalist

Allyson Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wayne Brooks of 8029 Ferndale Drive, Fort Worth, Texas, is one of 12 finalists chosen from thousands of entries in the national "Face of the '80s" contest. Allyson and the 11 other finalists will be presented at a gala party to benefit the American Musical and Drama Academy Sept. 8 in New York. Editor Jerry Ford of Ford Models choose Allyson as the U.S. "Face of the '80s." She will go to Monte Carlo where she will compete Sept. 20 for the title of international "Face of the '80s."

Fall Hikers Beware

If you're planning a walk through the woods to enjoy the autumn foliage, here's a reminder from National Wildlife magazine that the familiar three-leafed poison ivy vine isn't the only irritating plant to avoid. The National Wildlife Federation's bi-monthly publication warns hikers to keep their eyes open for these other plants that cause rashes and skin irritations.

Poison Oak: Similar in appearance and effect to poison ivy, this erect shrub or small tree has three leaflets which are distinctively lobed.

Celandine: This plant's deep yellow flowers invite picking, but the bright orange juice that drips from the broken stems can cause an irritating skin inflammation.

Lady-slipper: One of the nation's most handsome native orchids, the lady-slipper inhabits rich woods. Handling the plant can result in an affliction resembling poison ivy rash.

COLLEGE STATION - Questions that elected officials and private citizens frequently raise include: "Are government programs really effective? Are we really getting our money's worth?"

In regard to local facilities for recreation and parks, it appears that the answer is "Yes," according to Pat D. Taylor, recreation and park specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Taylor recently completed a survey of 21 park and recreation directors in Texas whose local jurisdictions qualified for federal matching grants under the Urban Park and Recreation Recovery Act (UPARR).

A major trend was discovered by the survey concerning the presence of recreation facilities in older, often ethnically-dominated sections of the qualifying communities, he reported.

"In 1978 UPARR was created especially for these areas. In preparing for these grants, local park and recreation professionals came to realize that the critical problem of the 1960s and 70s - providing older areas with facilities where there were none had been virtually eliminated," Taylor said.

Earlier federal programs - including community development block grants, Land and Water Conservation funds and other open space monies - have helped local governments to provide park and recreation facilities in the older sections of the surveyed Texas cities, he noted.

"Only in small cities, where transportation to park sites is not much of a problem, is one likely to find older neighborhoods with no facilities at all," Taylor said. "It appears these earlier programs have been successful in providing Texans with ample opportunity to urban recreation and park experiences," the specialist added.

"This does not mean that all cities surveyed have met all local needs of citizens as far as parks and recreation are concerned. It means that, from the viewpoint of directors, there are more pressing problems than providing new facilities in older portions of their cities. Older parks, for example, need renovation, and that's what UPARR is designed to do," Taylor said.

Texas cities and counties are presently running into other problems in their newer, fast-growing regions - often made up of middle and upper income families. There are few grant programs designed to help increase park and recreation opportunities in these communities, Taylor said.

"The general feeling is that these areas can better afford to contribute to their own park development," Taylor added. "However, it is imperative that local and state officials become more creative in working with private developers, homeowners and each other to stimulate park development from sources other than the federal government."

Texas has already taken precedent-setting steps in this area because the last session of the Texas Legislature passed a local grants aid bill for parks and recreation, funded by the state cigarette tax.

"The Texas fund will provide $16 million this year for acquisition and development of park areas," said the specialist.

"Texans can be pleased that the legislature has recognized that local parks and recreation are primarily the responsibility of local and state governments. The Texas act is the only one of its kind in the nation. In that it has a dedicated source of revenue. It illustrates that the state's park and recreation professionals and elected officials are doing their jobs with efficiency and imagination," Taylor emphasized.

Deer Abundant But Smaller Due To Poor Forage

DUVALDE - Recent rains resulting from hurricane activity will have little effect on deer herds in Southwest Texas and the Rio Grande Plains, according to Dr. Dwight Guynn, wildlife specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Some new plant growth will be generated from the moisture received, but most of the damage has already been done by the extended drought, he points out.

"It's a classic case of too little rain received too late to be a great deal of help," Guynn says. "Some deer on the brink of starvation will be saved, but the number won't be significant."

Guynn continues to emphasize that overpopulation of deer in certain areas has resulted in large starvation deaths, up to 60 percent in some parts of the Hill Country and South Texas areas. Even with such loss, Guynn says, ample deer will be available for hunting this fall.

"There should be plenty around, but hunters will be confronted with more smaller, inferior deer which have survived the drought but suffered its effects," he explains. "Antlers may be somewhat smaller this year due to the lack of nutrition which occurred this summer when bucks were developing them."

Guynn stresses that deer hunting season is a true test for many landowners and wildlife hunting operators.

Those in question should check with the local county Extension agent for methods that can be used to help determine deer populations.

Guynn stresses that deer hunting is directly associated with proper nutrition, a luxury that deer and other wildlife species have been virtually without most of this year. Guynn is encouraging landowners and ranchers to harvest deer and other wild game during the fall months. "Antlers are harvested during the fall months, and this is the only time when deer are in balance with deer food sources."
