Local Blood Drive Said 'Successful'

Some 119 area residents donated blood Jan. 14 and 15 for Woodville's 7th successful blood drive. Much of that blood had been transfused by Monday. Platelets, a blood component which encourages clotting, from 58 donors had been transfused of which 28 were used for 2 leukemia patients and 10 were used by a patient injured in an auto accident. Another 10 were needed during emergency open heart surgery, and a patient who had been stabbed required 10 units of platelets.

All of the 10 negative packed red cells donated in Woodville had been transfused by Sunday afternoon. Some were needed during open heart surgery and a mother whose child was delivered early by a caesarean section also used some.

These are only a few examples of the lives being affected by the generosity of the Woodville area people.

According to Carol Weatherall, blood center personnel are extremely pleased with the results of the drive and judge the response exceptional considering the weather.

Weatherall says, "We would like to thank each donor if possible. Special thanks go to Gwen Sterling, blood drive chairman and Tyler County Hospital laboratory director. Gwen and her staff and others spent many, many hours producing a well organized and successful drive."

The drive was supported by all segments of the community and five major contributors accounted for 78 donations: Keller Aluminum Products personnel gave the most blood and Levinston Industrial Products Division personnel donated the third highest number of pints. The Blood Center realizes that production and consequently a sizable amount of money is lost when employees are brought into town to donate blood.

Managements cooperation, support and leadership also contributed to the success of the drive. Members of First Baptist Church of Woodville were also major contributors with the 2nd highest number of donors. First Baptist has generously donated their facilities for seven blood drives.

Tyler County Hospital employees donated the 4th largest number of pints, many of them recruited additional donors. Tyler County Hospital and members of the Auxiliary have consistently helped make blood available.

The Woodville Lions were the 5th largest group of donors and continued their long standing support of blood drives. Other groups making more than one donation were Woodville Independent School District and students, Wal Mart, Tobin Construction, Allison Chevrolet, GSU, National Park Service and Woodville Ambulance Service.

Mrs. Weatherall states, "Thorough news media coverage played an important part in Woodville's successful drive and expressed sincere appreciation to the newspapers and KVLL radio station for their role in communication."

Many more groups and individuals gave generously.

While some donated blood and others organized the drive, others provided and served refreshments with a side helping of moral support.

As this story went to press two other calls for platelets came in, one for a G.I. bleeder, the other for an emergency open heart surgery...

Mrs. Mason regained her poise as she stepped up to the microphone saying "Now I know how the Emmy winners feel...but this award really goes to my clients and all you people here."

Gene McQueen

McQueen Files For Pct. 2

Gene McQueen, 39 of Chester, entered the race for county commissioner precinct II, Friday, Jan. 15, 1982.

McQueen is a high school graduate, married and has three children. "I have been self-employed, operating heavy equipment for 15 years, building roads, bridges and other types of construction."

"If elected I will perform all duties in an orderly manner."

"I will install a maintenance program. I think a preventive maintenance program is a must that must be followed religiously. When I am in the commissioner court I will always think of the aged and disadvantaged when it comes to voting for a tax that would place a handicap on fixed income recipients and the less fortunate."

"I will always be eager to take into consideration all complaints and try my best to correct them."

'Flight 90 Is Down'

H. K. Pitts

The snow was settling on Washington like a gigantic white-down blanket as the passenger walkway swung away from the pastel colored 737.

The pilot spoke - "Washington tower this is Air Florida Alpha Bravo nine-niner-zero requesting taxi instructions."

The de-icing crew had backed off and as they cleared the area the pilot eased the throttles forward with this right hand down on the console as he gripped the controls with his left. He gently tapped the right brakes as the wheels broke free and started the plane slowly rolling in a large curve toward the taxi strip. As the co-pilot continued his check list he looked at his watch and wrinkled his brow. It was 15:23, "late already," he worried and we're going to be standing in line in this mobil sno-cone yet.

He turned to look out at the port wing as the heavy snow continued. "Wow," he thought, "practically zero, strictly green card stuff, any way you cut it."

The plane whined and bumped its way around the turns and the big tires made squishing sounds as they ran over chunks of ice and snow intermingled with sand that had been spread on the runways by the ground crew.

As the plane sat at an angle to the active runway it was third in line, the minutes ticking away. The navigator/engineer sat in his cramped compartment behind the co-pilot busily figuring over his weight and balance chart and the zero maps that showed them the way south to sunny Florida.

The usual pre-take-off hush fell over the passengers; the "no-smoking" and "fasten seat belt" lights were on. The "stews" had completed their pre-flight instructions and were now buckled in like every one else and they all set silently each lost in their own private thoughts and stared out-side into the blizzard.

In the mid-fifties they would have been checking the instrument panel while they ran up each engine with a close eye on the tach and mags and a dozen other things it took to keep those old sixteen cylinder Pratt and Whitney's glued to the wings, not these Jets though. Now the crew keeps us with "pounds of fuel pressure" and "percentage of power" on take-off.

At last, their time had come, the pilot spoke into his mini-mike "Washington tower this is nine-niner-zero, we are ready for take-off," he glanced over his left shoulder, his eyes tracing out the leading and trailing edges of the wings - the 20 degree of flaps barely visible. His palms were sweaty and he swiftly took his left hand off the controls and wiped them on his pants. Beads of moisture were popping out on his brow.

The tower broke in "Florida nine-niner-zero you are cleared for take-off runway 35. Right turn left and hold at 5,000." The pilot looked at the co-pilot and they both nodded and released the brakes. They pushed the throttles forward and as the power surged the plane forward, gravity shoved them backward into their seats.

The tragic flight of Air Florida Flight 90, had now begun, it would be measured in feet and seconds instead of miles and hours.

There are many unanswered questions as to what happened to cause the crash of Flight 90. Some will remain speculation (as this story was) because the only ones who could have answered them all lie in the icy waters off the 14th Street bridge.

Woodville Hi-Lites by Dee Gibson

The feature article "That Reminds Me" in last week's Booster issue brought forth many memories and comments from local readers. Thank you for your verbal appreciation.

Visiting with Judy Birdwell last weekend from Beaumont was Mrs. R. Schorlemmer, a former Woodville resident. Much reminiscing took place Sunday afternoon. It was in 1939 when the Birdwells opened their first mercantile store on Bluff...

The Kirby Auditorium vibrated with gospel sound Friday evening as the Neches Valley Singing Convention opened its 13th annual get-together. President James Halley from Crosby recognized Robbie Conner, Woodville resident and J. W. Birdwell from Houston for an outstanding job with all the local arrangements...

Meanwhile, out on the frozen Chesswood trails and especially "Jarrott Hills", Judy Keneson with Laura and Jena; Dixie Jarrott with Julie and Cody; the entire Ramos family; Dede Cordes with Ariana and Kelly; and the Fred Sullivan clan were seen colorfully wrapped snug against the icy breath of winter as they enjoyed a rare occasion of tobogganing.

Thursday-evening's Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet was a well attended success. Jean Louidre was the charming hostess as the chamber secretary, making certain last minute details were in order. Among the many guests were Miss Tyler County Terry Gallier with her chaperone Dorothy Brinnell; State Representative Larry Browder and wife; Rita Gault States; Wynar Bell; Wal Mart's new manager Terry McGath and wife Chris along with Greg and Linda Harrison...

Providing lovely floral centerpieces of driftwood, birds and nests among the flowers was The Flower Shop owned by Eunice McAlister and Constance Clark. Eleanor Holderman, new president projected future plans with the use of boat oars. Wyatt Bell was overheard recognizing his oars. Other comments, "Are we going to up the creek with oars this year?" while Onda Holderman, leaving the banquet with an arm load of oars only needed a boat.

Receiving recognition as Citizen of the Year in Tyler County was Eileen Mason. Eileen, appearing in the photo, was presented with a plaque and certificate by the Chamber of Commerce.

Former Resident Honored A crowd of approximately 120 friends and relatives gathered from Texas and Louisiana to celebrate the 80th birthday of Mrs. Georgia Belle McFae in the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. A. McFae, in Woodville. The celebration was presided over by the Rev. Fred Martin, pastor of the United Methodist Church as well as the Women's Study Club and the Garden Club.

Couple Lose Belongings A third fire in recent months in the Dam B area burned the house occupied by Robert and Donna Parr and her brother from Missouri, on Thursday evening, Jan. 14. Fire Department members from Dam B and Spurger were on the scene and kept the fire from spreading. The house owned by Jack Witt was a total loss.

BOOSTER OPINIONS

Alan Miller's T-WHEELER

By ALAN MILLER, Director, Public Affairs Temple-Estes Incorporated

Yours, Theirs, Ours
Thursday, January 21, 1982 Page Four

There's an East Texas expression we're particularly fond of: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it!"

Usually that works out pretty well. The T-Wheeler isn't really curious about how things operate, just so long as they continue to perform the function for which they were designed.

But more and more, American industry seems to have adopted the principle that everything we buy nowadays is only supposed to last so long. Then you throw it away and buy a new one.

That's OK for 39 cent ball point pens. Or maybe even those butane lighters for smokers.

There aren't too many people around anymore who remember that we used to use grocery bags, and carry them back to the store each time we shopped. Milk bottles were always left for the milkman to collect on his morning rounds.

It was a little before our time, but we read somewhere that kids used to be sent to the local beer tavern with a bucket so that Dad could take away the weekend looking at slides through his stereopticon.

And lunch pails for the kids going to school were often styro or lard buckets. Nothing went to waste.

Dear Editor,

Thank you for publishing "Prime Time" in the Tyler County Booster on Jan. 14. I appreciate the service you are rendering to the community through this and other informative articles.

In his column, G. Brickfield, Executive Director of NRTA-AARP in Washington, has touched on an issue (caring for the frail elderly) within which the ideal, home care, and the reality, institutional care, have become polarized. Many bridges, community, state, and federal, are needed to draw the two together in a workable support system.

When one learns that ten percent of persons sixty-five years of age have at least one living parent, one begins to realize the magnitude of the changing pattern of aging in our country. We must begin to address the necessary compromises.

Sincerely yours,
Jane H. Reynolds

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Sub-freezing temperatures, clear and snow, slow the pace of the state government this week, but the incident weather didn't stop the political scene from continuing to heat up.

Austin had weather forced the state offices to shut down for a day, but Gov. Bill Clements and leading officials were officially announcing their plans to seek re-election.

State Sen. Kent Caperton of Bryan and Ed Howard of Tarrant, both Democrats, have announced they will seek another term in their present positions. Howard is a member of the Sunset Advisory Commission, which will review the Public Utility Commission in 1983, while Caperton was a staunch supporter for more stringent radioactive waste regulations during the 1980 session.

Others announcing their candidacies for re-election included Reps. Irma Rangel of Kingsville, Gary Thompson of Abilene and Bill Crawford of Beaumont.

Longview Republican Mike Martin, who stepped forward to challenge Democratic primary, however hasn't kept Clements' Democratic opponents from continuing their attacks on him.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, who is challenging Attorney General Mark White and Tyler Sen. Peyton McKnight for election to tackle Clements, has criticized the governor's stand on the recent Texas Employment Commission findings.

Following a meeting with Reagan at the White House, the two governors reported that they were optimistic that Reagan would move aggressively to end controls. Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower, however, have indicated it will be difficult to lift the regulations without passing a windfall profits tax similar to the one imposed on oil.

Before his trip to Washington, D.C., Clements told Austin reporters he opposed any windfall profits tax on gas.

More TEC Layoffs
The Texas Employment Commission has decided that 500 employees—not the expected 400—will have to go in the latest round of layoffs, which become effective Jan. 31.

Those cuts are among some 1,200 employees expected to get their pink slips because of federal budget cuts in job placement programs. TEC says the cuts will be done on the basis of seniority, and one TEC spokesman says the narrowly escaped with her job, which she has had since 1977.

The commission, meanwhile, gave its remaining employees more bad news: Land commissioner candidate Gary Mauro and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, both not requiring the closure of another 10 to 15 regional job placement offices. Some

Secretary of State George Strake, meanwhile, has picked up the endorsement of the National Alliance of Senior Citizens, Inc., which reportedly found "Hobby lacking" in leadership.

Gov. Clements joined Gas. Clements joined Virginia Governor Dave Trent in urging President Reagan to move swiftly to lift the remaining price controls on natural gas.

Browder Announces For Re-election

"I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the citizens of my Legislative District. It has been a great honor and personal experience for me to have served as your State Representative. I now eagerly announce my candidacy for re-election to the State Representative office that I have held for the past term.

I have worked hard to represent the people of my District by introducing and contributing to a large number of pieces of legislation, many of which were bills of major importance to my constituency, as well as state-wide interest. My experience and ability to work with the past legislature and special session, coupled with my knowledge of the people and problems of this District will enable me to better serve our District in the next term of office. If re-elected, my relationship with the current leadership of the legislature will ensure that our District receives the attention it deserves.

I have and will continue to have the same open door policy available to each and every person in my District. I wish to extend a special thanks to all the individuals who have contributed their time, energy, and advice to help solve the problems of this office. Your continued support and cooperation will enable your State Representative to be even more effective in the next term.

Eleanor Holderman Takes Over Chamber Helm

Incoming Chamber of Commerce President Eleanor Holderman told the Tyler County Chamber of Commerce Banquet crowd Thursday that the theme of operation for the 1982 Chamber would be "Tyler County First."

Holderman wasted no time in binding Committeemen to responsibilities asking each committeeperson take hold of a portion of an oar, while standing before the Banquet guests where she then bestowed Chairmanships and instilled committee unity as the year begins.

Holderman installed two quick actions prior to the banquet: setting the meeting date to the last Monday of each month and limiting each monthly meeting to only one hour with material to be screened by appropriate committee persons prior to meeting time.

In using the boat and oar illustration as an example of the kind of teamwork needed, Mrs. Holderman said, "He who rows seldom rocks the boat... need I say more."

Holderman referred to the two main resources of Tyler County as being "The natural resources and the beauty of the people here."

Understanding And Encouraging Your Childs Special Gifts Will Help Develop His Own Creativity

How do you know if your child is gifted? What does it mean to be gifted? How can you best help your child develop his or her special gifts? Here are some guidelines from Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter, that may help you answer these questions.

ness may be expressed in many different ways. If you were told your child was highly gifted, what would you immediately think? That he would be able to read, write or do mathematics far ahead of most children his age? That he would have a special gift for drawing, acting, or playing a musical instrument?

Most people have a sense of wonder and awe when they are told that their child is gifted. But even these children have areas in which they are not outstanding. And there are many children whose special gifts may go unnoticed because their talent lies in an unexpected area, or because they seem ordinary in other ways. It is your challenge, and your responsibility, to discover your child's special gifts and give him the chance to develop them. Every child has the potential to be creative. Creativity is the way in which your child uses his special gifts to express what is unique about him. It is not something reserved only for certain people.

Creativity is self-expression. It is a basic human need, and people who have not developed their gifts so that they can feel a sense of frustration and lack of fulfillment. You can help your child develop her talents so that she can express them creatively. With opportunity and your encouragement, she will learn to express what she thinks and feels about life in her own special way. For example, you might notice your child singing along whenever he hears music on the radio, the television or on records you play. Your encouragement, plus some records of his own not just his own music, but a variety of selections of good music might give him a chance to expand his interest and skills. Your child needs to develop basic skills in an area before he can use those skills effectively. For example, he needs to know how to cook before he can combine ingredients in new and interesting ways to invent his own recipes. To be creative, your child must first develop them. How many times have you told your child to do something, and then become impatient when she doesn't do it "correctly" right away? How often have you shown her how to use something, and ended up doing it yourself, while she simply watches? Your child needs to use her gifts in order to her do things herself. But it's important to take the time to let her try things until she can do them well. Learning perseverance is an important part of learning to use one's special gifts. It takes a while to learn a new skill, and your child needs the chance to practice it until she masters it. She needs your support, encouragement, and interest in her attempts, even when not completely successful...and your loving patience while she's learning. She needs to do in order to learn to do with skill and creativity. Your child signals his areas of potential giftedness by how often and how long he is interested in when you're taking care of

by Bill Clayton

The Speaker Reports
I believe that each of these bills will help our struggles to eliminate the terrible incidents of child abuse which fill our newspapers. But there is still much that needs to be done. I urge you to contact either your local law enforcement agency and your local office of the Department of Human Resources about suspected cases of child abuse. These agencies now will share their information and take appropriate action.
Moreover, I urge you to testify before the Select Committee on Child Abuse/Neglect and Child Pornography, if you have suggestions for curbing these crimes against children. This is an interim committee which I established to seek new methods of combating child abuse. The committee will be holding public hearings around the state during the next few months.

CAPITOL UPDATE
John Tower
U.S. SENATOR FOR TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

The spectre of nuclear war has threatened the world for over 30 years. The United States' response to the awful possibility that mankind might destroy itself has been to maintain a force designed to deter use of the weapons by others. While at the same time seeking a way, through negotiations, to reduce the number and deployment of weapons in the world.

It demonstrated the peacefulness of our motives during the years in which we possessed unmatched nuclear superiority. Never did we even threaten our nuclear power to further our objectives - even under severe provocation from aggressive powers. Indeed, beginning with President Kennedy's first steps toward the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, we have sought negotiations to end the nuclear arms race.

On the other hand, the Soviet Union has engaged in a single-minded effort to build its nuclear arsenal beyond the level which would be required to defend itself from any conceivable circumstance. Their goal has not been deterrence, but superiority - a superiority which could be used to further their stated aggressive goals in the world.

Unfortunately, the Soviet Union is on the verge of being able to threaten our security and that of our European allies. We have the national will and the ability to counter this threat through building new weapons of our own. But still we seek the stability that can only come as a result of balanced arms control agreements.

It was this goal which prompted President Reagan to propose new arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union. The United States' proposal in the talks which began last week in Geneva is to rid Europe of intermediate range nuclear weapons.

The Soviets have three different missile systems which fall into this category - all with a range of reaching virtually all of Western Europe. And the Soviets continue to add one new SS-20 to its arsenal each week.

If they persist on this course, we and our NATO allies have no choice but to place comparable weapons in Europe. In this way, the Soviets would be unlikely to use their weapons because we would have the ability to effectively retaliate against their own territory. We do not currently have such missiles in Europe.

However, under President Reagan's arms reduction proposal, we would not deploy these new weapons if the Soviet Union agrees to remove their comparable ones. This is the so-called "zero option," and would be a firm step on the road to a safer world.

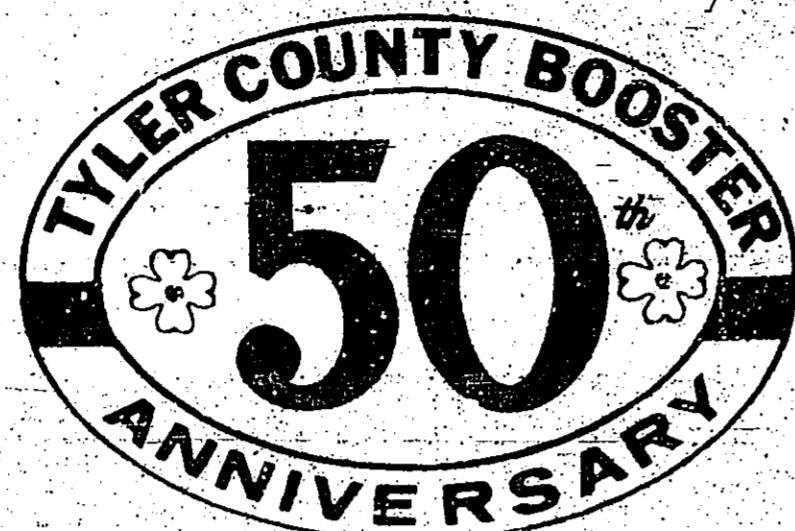

In fact, the President has said he views these negotiations as a first step. If they are successful, we would hope to expand arms reduction to other kinds of nuclear weapons, and even to conventional forces.

But however much we all would like to see the negotiations succeed we must remember that the threat to world peace can be reduced only through an agreement which provides for equality in forces by all relevant measure of merit. Any agreement must be verifiable, and it must be clear and unambiguous in its terms. Only an agreement which meets these stringent conditions will meet our goal of reducing the risk of war and the risk of aggression.

Sanitary Landfills Should Be Environmentally Safe

Garbage, a by-product of an affluent society, should not be subject to the same carelessness as it is today. Sanitary landfills should be designed to prevent environmental damage. They should be located away from residential areas and have proper drainage systems to prevent leachate from contaminating the ground.

The Consumer Alert
by Mark White
Attorney General

AUSTIN - For many people today, living is a way of life. Some consumers go to the store and buy what they need. Others, however, are more concerned about the quality of the products they buy. They want to know if the products are safe, if they are of good quality, and if they are worth the money they are paying for them.

They cannot comment on the validity of the complaints, but the numbers may help the consumer decide what is best for him. Finally, a consumer should be careful about the payment plan with the clinic. Some consumers have paid the full amount to a diet clinic on one day, only to come back the next day and find the clinic closed. Others have paid, and been unable to continue, and on notifying the clinic discovered they could not get their money back. It cannot hurt the consumer to ask, "How long have you been in business?" or "If I become ill on the program and cannot be rehabilitated, what happens to my money?"

Vets To Get Increase

Approximately 2.3 million veterans, along with 240,000 surviving spouses and about 83,000 children of deceased veterans will receive larger Veterans Administration compensation amounts beginning in November. The increase and other improvements in veterans benefits are the result of a law signed by President Reagan Oct. 17. It provides for an average 11.2 percent increase in VA compensation rates for service-disabled veterans and dependents and family compensation rates for surviving spouses and children of veterans.

Lone workman perches on old fashioned crane assembly used in capitol construction.

Texan State Of Mind Revealed In Capitol Granite

When ceremonies are held in Austin Feb. 1 to mark the centennial of groundbreaking for the present state Capitol building, one theme will be dominant.

This will be more a celebration of the strength continuity, and success of Texas state government than a mere glorification of historic old granite.

For the Capitol, most magnificent of its kind in the nation, is clearly a symbol of government in Texas over the past 100 years, and beyond that, of the Texan state of mind.

That state of mind is conservative, enduring, pragmatic but with a touch of the grandiose—yet always optimistic, forward-looking, ready to dare huge dreams, and make them all come true.

The Capitol symbolized all this when it began to rise in 1882, and it does so today.

Buildings are erected by people for shelter, but more than that, as symbols and monuments. The Legislature in 1879 wanted a new structure to house state government, but also, they wanted a symbol of the inherent greatness of the state. They did not dwell on the past, nor did they think small. This was to be the best state capitol not only in the state but in all America, modeled on the national Capitol at Washington.

Trading some 3,000,000 acres of public domain (then valued at fifty cents an acre) for the construction, state officers and the Legislature did not hesitate to build for themselves, but also for their grandchildren and great grandchildren, thinking on a Roman scale. The new Capitol, whose construction was hastened when the old building burned down in 1881, was to be a symbol, a statement for the ages.

This involved a lot of what we would now call Texas brag, when the state did not have all that much to brag about—frontier conditions still prevailed, Texas was poor, largely undeveloped and unsettled, overwhelmingly agrarian and at the mercy of the elements and distant markets. The people had still not thrown off the effects of war, depression, and a hated carpetbagger rule.

But the dream was there. Significantly, the builders thought big but also employed the highest state of the art, combining solid Texas granite with an emerging industrial nation's steel.

The Capitol was not erected without political feuds, rhetoric, controversy, and wheeling-dealing on a Texas scale. There was fighting over the choice of local limestone or the imported kind, finally settled by choosing native rock. There was fine-lining and maneuvering, trade-offs made. There were cost overruns, "incidentals" that had to be paid for with the same had and still has its foibles of more land. And there and follies, its complacent government in Texas has brought in to do the work, the more they continue, and its success is shown by this vibrant society spreading across the midreaches of the Sun Belt.

The builders, both of the Capitol and the state government, built better than they knew. Texas is a state, a region, and an empire as well as a State of mind. The often-urged historic halls of the Capitol have reflected all these things, surviving good times and bad, enduring essentially unchanged—and this, perhaps, is the true genius and true glory of the American way of governing in a world increasingly torn from its roots and moorings.

The State Capitol of 1882 looked to the future and made a statement and the future has prevailed. In this age Americans are cynical of government, represent the Scottish and Texans are no exception. But looking over the ing of the Capitol. Slide past 100 years, and look- ing at today, Texas gov- ernment is hardly the Year display, and per- forming by high school- choirs will be featured throughout the afternoon. The day will be honored as promptly at 11 a.m. There will be horse drawn car- nesses Day. As at all good and the mood, of most guests to the ceremony. A special birthday cake—a giant musical and military replica of the State Capitol will be served. University of Texas and Texans get on about the business, the making of great state.

As the Union con- nues to develop, th strength, continuity, eff cacy of the Texas styl of government is the mor clearly seen. Hopefully it will be good for at least another hundred years.

The roots of the Cap- tol, like the roots of the people, were in the land and in a determination to make the land bear fruit than they knew. Texas is and grasp have matched empire as well as a State of mind.
