Nerve-wracking. That's a pretty good description for the last week of the six weeks. There is always a bit of anticipation during that week, even for the best of students.

Any work that you have neglected to go over the past two weeks will catch up with you during this week. Hold on a second! Let's not forget those wonderful six weeks tests and notebooks that need to be turned in.

The fact that it is all over now makes it much easier to look back at what went on during this hectic past week.

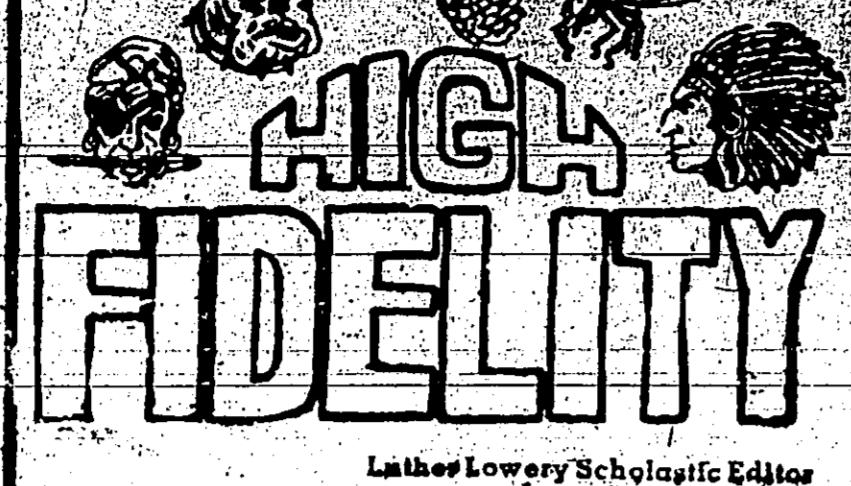

In Halls Taylor's U.S. History Honors class, students spent the past two weeks playing the stock market. Students invested in all of the stocks created by him.

go down, and even experiencing a "crash" helped students understand how the stock market works. When the market closed for the final time this past Wednesday, the winners and losers ranged from the filthy rich Stacy Owens, to the down and out. Poor.

The eighth graders got to take a day off from school this past Thursday when they went to Beaumont. The occasion was their eighth grade field trip and by the end of a full day, they had toured the Northwest Texas Art Museum, the G.S.U. Museum, and also visited the Beaumont Fire Department.
