It would be a nice place to live large enough yet not too large. I had already written to the Chamber of Commerce and had my mind made up. Then I drove through Woodville

For the past several years I have done my share of traveling, I've lived in both small towns and large. Woodville is one of the few left that still has a courthouse as the central focus, and quaint little businesses surrounding it. It still has a drugstore with a real fountain, where neighbors can sit and catch up on the latest news, compare their current crops with those from years back. Woodville is one of the few towns Lye visited lately where everybody waves at you when they pass you on the road. And as I walked down the street everyone I met said Hello or smiled.

I'm convinced that people here still have dinner on the ground. I'm sure that when there's a crisis one's neighbors and friends still pitch in and help in any way they can-

Unlike Hollywood there are no big name stars here. But I'd be willing to bet that there are folks here who are stars. I cherish the opportunity to find the extraordinary in what some would call common

I've already met several people here, and although we just met they treat me like an old friend I don't know how I could ever find the words to describe how comforting that is. Or what wrare quality these people possess. As I said earlier, I've lived in towns of all sizes, and I've met many different people. But I feel there's something unique about this place, something I want to be a part of.

I was just driving through this town. And I certainly didn't intend to live here. But after one day I

All of my life I have heard about the "church" being the "body of Christ". It always seemed to be a little bit puzzling.

How can one person be a hand and another be a foot? Of course, I am aware that we are each given different talents: But, through most of my church life it has always seemed that half of the church was going in one direction while the other half went in another. The church members often seemed to be in a state of confusion. One group says this is the way to worship. The group next door says, "oh no, do it this way". And then, the personalities of the church members that are involved also determine the outcome of this diversion. In Holy Scripture, we are told that worship takes place whenever two or three are gathered together. It does not say where, or how. Following this realm of thought, my husband and I joined with a small group of our church friends, recently, and formed a Bible study. study. By meeting with this group once a week, we have become better acquainted than any formal church service would allow. We now share our Paith openly with one another. This small group of searching Christians has found common ground through an ever growing for Jesus Christ. This past week we even drove over 100 miles (one way), after a hard week of work, to attend a concert given by a group of religious singers. As we drove home, through the dark night, there was a glow that surrounded our small group. I listened to their voices as they sang praises to the Lord in joyful songs. and I heard the sound of one who had fallen asleep. In that moment, love flowed my heart for this wonderfully intricate part of the body of Christ and wrapped fiself around me like a glove.

To be a part of the body of Christ, we simply need to find a place for ourselves. It should be a place where two or three are gathered together in His name. By doing this, we can discover the real power of the formal church. And when the love begins to flow-we

GOODED SESTIMIRE OF GIVEN

The winds of November arrived and so did the arrists, crafters and entertainers for the Good Ol Days Festival the 1st weekend of November
On the courthouse

proper talk had shifted from politics to milk churning lye soap making, hoe cake baking, quilling and archery as Woody, Preston and myrlene Woodrome, Lela Esmond, Evelyn Hanks and Dusty Dennis provided demonstrations and instruction in Good O! Days activities.

Around the courthouse booths were abundant; as artists dain crafters displayed and sold all sorts of goodies, trinkets to food, you name it, it was available

Entertainment on stage in the Opera House provided by the best young talent anywhere. Mrs. Christy Walker with the drama troupe from Warren, Mrs. Burrows and the Colmesneil theatre arts. group, Mrs. Jackson with the drama dept. from Spurger and Mrs. Stowart and the Woodville Drama class. We are certainly proud of our high schoolsand their participation to make the Good Ol' Days such a success.

Music on the outdoor stage added to the festival air both Saturday and Sunday. Thanks goes to the puppercers from 1st Baptist: Woodville and 1st Baptist Warren, our Tyler County Community Choir, The Haygoods, The Woodromes, The Heritage Band, Katy Rejoicers, Rawls Family and John Morris. Each one who volunteered, and pulled it all together, just another of the ways the Good Ol' Days came to life.

A big thanks to the many businesses who provided items for auction to help in covering festival expenses, Mr. Don Forse for an impromtu performance and emcee work, the gentleman has class and the festival steering committee looks forward to working with him as the 1989 Chamber of Commerce President.

The addition of the Good Ol' Days King and Queen coronation as part of the Friday nites box . supper and sing along brought Mr. J.C. Clark, Jr. and Mrs. Winnie Matthews into the limelight for their contributions to Tyler County. We salute them as our King and Queen, crowned by Chamber of Commerce President Huntly Kennison. As the reports come in from the Heritage Village and manyin the business community, the planning, work and participation by so many behind the scenes paid off in a festival that doubled in size its 2nd year.
