Psoriasis (pronounced "so-ri-ah-sis") is a thickening of skin with scaly, red or silver patches - either in localized areas or all over the body. This skin condition tends to run in families and occurs most often between the ages of 10 and 30. According to the AMA Family Medical Guide, the exact cause of psoriasis is not known. Instances of this condition can be triggered by emotional stress, damage to the skin, or a period of generally HEAR MORE WITH LESS!!!

Although there are many different and effective medicines used to control psoriasis, topical steroids are the first treatment choice recommended by many physicians. According to Dr. Irving Katz and colleagues fits completely in the ear canal. No wires. No tubes. No cords. So writing in a recent issue of Patient Care, mid-potency topical steroids are preferred over super-potency steroids because of their effectiveness and lower incidence of adverse effects. Topical mid-potency steroids include 0.1% betamethasone valerate, 0.1% triamcinolone acetonide, and 0.025% fluocinolone acetonide.

> Dr. Katz states that psoriasis on the face, in the body folds or in the area of the groin are best treated with low-potency topical steroids such as hydrocortisone. The super-potency steroids are recommended only for short term treatment due to a tendency of these agents to cause skin thinning with long-term use. Oral steroids are not recommended for psociasis.

According to Dr. Irving Katz and colleagues writing in a recent issue of Patient Care, mid-potency topical steroids are preferred over super-potency steroids because of their effectiveness and lower incidence of adverse effects. Topical mid-potency steroids include 0.1% betamethasone valerate, 0.1% triamcinolone acetonide, and 0.025% fluocinolone acetonide.

Dr. Katz states that psoriasis on the face, in the body folds or in the area of the groin are best treated with low-potency topical steroids such as hydrocortisone. The super-potency steroids are recommended only for short term treatment due to a tendency of these agents to cause skin thinning with long-term use. Oral steroids are not recommended for

National experts review . Entergy-Gulf States Utilities

Leading utility industry observers are talking about the proposed Entergy-Gulf States Utilities merger. Here's why:

- It is estimated that the merger will result in fuel savings of approximately $790 million to GSU customers over 10 years. These savings will be passed along to customers in the form of lower electric bills.
- A base rate freeze will be in effect for at least the first five years after closing. • The merger will result in regional economic development to bring new business,
- build existing companies and create new jobs.

Now read what the industry watchers say about the merger:

"By going with Entergy, a larger company with a more diverse fuel base, [Gulf States] will be able to lower priceso to keep their industrial customers, such as petrochemical and oil refining business. For Gulf States, the merger should help maintain its strong industrial customer base."

> Edward Tirello Jr., Analyst Smith Barney In USA Today and Financial Times

"The combined companies will be able to make significant savings in fuel costs. Customers will see significant savings."

Michael Worms, Analyst 😓 Brown Brothers Harriman & Co. Reported in Investor's Business

"The proposed merger should allow both entities greater operational flexibility and provide substantial cost savings. The combination would offer increased generating capacity, a well developed transmission system and fuel diversity.
