The HONORABLE UNCLE LANCY

By
ETHEL HUESTON

W. N. U. SERVICE

Copyright, Baker, Merrill Co.

The hands, which had been instructed to stop playing when the speeches began, stopped at the first syllable

The musicians wanted to get over to the truck themselves and see what was going on

"And if they catch anything, we'll see what to do next," said the Doctor, which Uncle Lancy faithfully related to Aunt Olympia

As a final precaution, Aunt Olympia made each take an aspirin and five grains of quinine

Hilda closed the windows and lowered the blinds

"Now, just calm down, my dears, and go to sleep," said Aunt Olympia soothingly

"If you feel wakeful or nervous or a chill coming on, ring immediately for Hilda and she'll give you more hot lemonade and quinine

And thank God it's over. You've been to Waterloo and now you are safe and warm in your little beds on St. Helena

Don't get up tomorrow. You can have your meals in bed. There'll be quite a rum-pus and more reporters nosing around, but keep your door shut and I'll strangle a few, if necessary

Stay in bed a week if you want in. I'll very likely stay with you. And don't worry. I'll bring you Len Hardesty's head on a platter first time I get my hands on him

Then she turned off the lights and closed the door

She headed at once for the room she shared, rather grudgingly, with the Senator

"Another pitcher of hot lemonade for the Senator," she said to Hilda over her shoulder

The Senator was already in night-shirt and bathrobe and warm slippers. He was smoking a cigarette

"Did you take their temperature?" he demanded

"Did they have a chill?"

"I wish you'd be more grammatical, Del," she said irritably

"How can three girls have one temperature and one chill? Did you change to your flannel nightgown?"

"My dear, it's a very mild night. You know I never change to flannel till the first snow"

"It's a chilly night, or I miss my guess! I've got trouble enough without pneumonia!" She fished roughly about in a drawer and produced the flannels

"Change," she ordered briskly

"And be quick about it"

"The Senator made the exchange rather than start an argument"

"Did they seem feverish?" he asked

"If Limpy caught cold—and she's still shivery—I'll sue that louse," said Aunt Olympia, to whom suing was a far more menacing procedure than a mere wringing of necks

"In

"As you saw, so shall ye reap," he finally roared

"I thank you"

"Come on, girls," he ordered and immediately left the truck

Again cameras were grinding, lights flashing

The Senator saw nothing, heard nothing

As he told Olympia after the annual family reunion which covers always a Saturday and Sunday

fact, I'm not sure but I'll stand on my constitutional rights and sue the American system

You'd better get in bed, Del. Here comes Hilda with your lemonade and whisky

You'd better take these two quinine, first"

"You only gave them one quinine," he remonstrated

"More grammar. One apiece," she reproved him severely

"Anyhow, you're older than they are and have less reaction"

"You hear me take the hide of Brother Willie?"

"If he just manages to trip over that carpet that blackmailed me into buying and breaks his neck, I'll be cheap at the price"

"Give him two jiggers, Hilda"

"You've had a pretty easy summer, so it won't make any difference if you lose a little sleep to-night, Hilda," she said

"I want you to keep an eye on the girls and if any of them seems to be catching anything, you call me immediately and phone the doctor"

And don't disturb us. Don't ever disturb us again as long as we live

Behind your wall switch

Most people take electric service for granted. You flick a switch and the light comes on. It's as simple as that.

But to make electric service always available—to have the "juice" there when you want it—is not so simple. It takes the constant efforts and ceaseless vigilance of trained employees. It requires a huge investment in costly generating equipment, transmission lines and substations. It takes forests of poles... miles of wire... large numbers of transformers, meters and other delicate and expensive equipment.

It involves the expenditure of thousands of dollars annually to keep this equipment in good working order... to make sure that you will have dependable electric service.

Good Electric Service Doesn't Just Happen

It results from the happy combination of a trained personnel, modern equipment and experienced management. In Community Public Service Company, these three factors are blended to form a smooth-functioning organization that has one main object—to give you the best possible electric service at the lowest possible cost.
